Nine Known Dead In Alabama Mine Explosion

Col. Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald
Mellon in the Limerick
Andrew W. Mellon is ever in the limelight but never as a publicity seeker or a wild political extorter. eastern newspapers carried a story that Andy had written out his resignation. This brought forth a quaint denial: "My attitude as to the question of resignation is the same as Benjamin Franklin's was under similar circumstances, when he said, 'I am deficient, I am afraid, in the Christian virtue of resignation.'" Why should the resignation resign? He was one of the makers of the strong right arm of Calvin Coolidge. He had a powerful voice in the nomination of Herbert Hoover. He will grab his hat and walk out when the spirit moves him.

Wesley Jones a Flip-Flopper
Sen. Wesley Jones of Washington is a flip-flopper. A flip-flopper is a statesman who hands out an interview one day and then has a change of mind over night. Pres. Hoover handed out the names of his law enforcement commission. Wesley said that if he had been selecting the commissioners he would have made different selections. What happened is funny. Over night he saw a great light. Thoroughly convinced or thoroughly repentant he issued a second statement interpreted as a sweeping endorsement of the commission. It must be true that consistency is a fool's virtue. Exhibit A: Wesley Jones' flip-flop.

A Commission Without Teeth
Pres. Hoover's law enforcement commission without teeth. There is no specific act of congress creating the commission, hence the body will be without legal powers to summon witnesses and documents and to compel testimony. Republican administration officers say they are confident that "would refuse a request of a presidential commission that they produce evidence, books, papers, and other documents." Then there will be something new under the sun. Powerful corporations and powerful individuals employ legal advisors and the legal advisor will have the last word.

President's Own Band Coming Here
Through the courtesy of the president of the United States, this community will be afforded the pleasure of hearing in this city at the City Hall, the United States Marine Band, under the able leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson. This organization will appear under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce for the benefit of their band fund. No greater musical opportunity could be afforded the Eastland public. This organization has sealed the heights of musical achievement. Not only is it a collection of individual artists, but it reveals in its perfect ensemble playing the hours of tedious work and endeavor necessary to obtain from various instruments harmony of tone and interpretation.

J. A. GREER, JR., WEDS
James Allan Greer, Jr., formerly connected with the mechanical department of the Eastland newspaper some years ago, has married Miss Anna Mae Swenson, according to announcement cards received by friends here. The wedding was held in Georgetown, Tex., where Mr. Greer is connected with the Georgetown Sun, is operator at a local theatre and is a member of the fire department.

County Judge's Proclamation

MY FELLOW CITIZENS
Though the untiring efforts of our entire citizenship, it has become possible for our county to enjoy the privilege and pleasure of having a most magnificent monument to those efforts in the form of a new six story Court House which it has been deemed proper to dedicate to the World War Veterans who enlisted from Eastland County—thirty-two of whom made the supreme sacrifice during the world conflict.

It, therefore, seems fitting that I should call your attention to the approach of Memorial Day when we all should unite in a body and pay honor to those of our boys in whose memory doubly important that this day be declared a holiday to be spent in thoughts and becoming celebrations of the ideals and principles for which the thirty-two gave their lives.

Therefore, I suggest and respectfully request, that where at all possible, the business life of our county be closed for the entire day meeting in Eastland in a county-wide celebration.

Therefore, Thursday May 30th, 1929, is hereby declared a holiday for general observance by the entire citizenship of the county. Done at the City of Eastland this 22nd day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred twenty-nine.
County Judge, Eastland County, Texas

NEW BAPTIST CHURCH TO OPEN SUNDAY

Special Program Being Arranged For The Occasion Revival Meeting To Start

At last, the dreams of the congregation of the Baptist church are about to be realized, and their hopes will be centered in the life to be held in their handsome new church, which will open its doors to its congregation and the public for the first time next Sunday morning, June 2.

The morning service will open with the Duxology, invocation, hymn by congregation, and Scripture reading.

At 10 o'clock, the church will be given by the famous soloist, Miss Lillian Hancock, of Tyler, Texas.

Miss Hancock is remembered in Eastland, having been presented on the occasion of the opening of the new Methodist church. She is the sister of Mrs. P. B. Bittle of this city.

The sermon will be given by Rev. W. T. Turner, pastor of the church, and the church closes with congregational hymn and benediction.

The evening service will be marked by a choral offering, "St. Cecilia," by the choir of the church, directed by Thomas Reid, of the conservatory of music, Randolph College, Cisco.

Soloists will be Mrs. Joseph B. Leonard, Mrs. Linn Hilburn, Miss Opal Hunt, A. M. Hearn, B. M. White and Dr. Vandeventer. Mrs. Joe Gibson will be at the piano.

Following the choral offering, baptism will be conducted by Rev. W. T. Turner, and congregation dismissed with benediction.

Clubs Urged To Attend Dedication
J. C. Patterson, county agent, and Miss Ruth Ramey, county home demonstration agent, were mailing letters late Monday to the land county, urging 100 per cent attendance and participation in the courthouse dedication parade and program. Much interest in the dedication services is being manifested by the boys' and girls' clubs of the county.

JUDGE CYRUS B. FROST TO BE MASTER OF CEREMONIES

Speakers Will Include Rufus F. Scott, Paris, Arch Spruill, Ed S. Pritchard—Gold Star Mothers to Be Honored.

All committees of the courthouse dedication program joined in a final meeting Monday night at 8:00 o'clock in the commissioners' courtroom of the new $300,000 courthouse, working out detailed plans for the dedication of the building to the World War veterans on Thursday, May 30, Memorial Day, at which time Eastland is expecting to be host to 25,000 people. Every American Legion post in the county will be represented 100 per cent, and all towns and cities promise huge delegations.

Among the prominent persons announced last night for the speaking program are Rufus F. Scott, Jr., of Paris, commander of the American Legion, department of Texas, and Mrs. Lexie Dean Robertson, well known post and writer of Rising Star.

Committees on decorations, parade, schools, war relics, bands, and publicity, reported marked progress in their work, and all major details of the dedication services have been worked out.

Badges for the Gold Star mothers, guest badges, reception and press badges have been provided. In addition 25 badges have been made for Spanish-American War veterans.

During the Memorial services a volley will be fired by a selected squad, and taps be sounded. Efforts are being made to provide for an airplane to fly over the city during the services.

Stakes have been set for 1500 linear feet of tables at Whiteway park in the north part of the city near the Texas & Pacific Railway lines. With this length of tables and their width, about 2,000 people can be seated around them at one time. The park also provides ample space around the tables, where lunches may be eaten. Several barrels of lemonade will "have a part in the program." The tables will be completed by Wednesday evening, the luncheon committee announced.

Here Is Chance To Render Some Real Service

DALLAS, Tex., May 28.—The new post of "city person" created by Mayor J. Waddy Tate, was still unfilled today the result of several applicants withdrawing applications when they heard there was no pay connected with the job.

Giving Christian burial to paupers and unidentified dead.

CISCO HOMES BURGLARIZED

Aroused by the recent series of burglaries which have occurred not only in Cisco but in other oil belt cities during the past few days, Cisco police have issued a warning to local citizens to take every possible precaution against the possibility of sneak thieves and criminals entering their homes.

Several homes in the southwestern part of Cisco were entered Saturday night or early Sunday morning, in each instance small amounts of money and valuables were taken. Entrance in each case was made by unfastening a screen and prying up a window.

PAUL MALLON BARRED BY THE SENATE

Paul Mallon is a noted correspondent of the United Press stationed in the city of Washington. He has been barred from the senate floor.

Coolidge sent his name in first There was violent opposition to confirmation. Pres. Hoover retained him and Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska led the fight against confirmation. He declared that Lenroot was not a lawyer, that he had never practiced in the courts of Wisconsin, that he had lobbied for the power trusts under the big dome of the national capitol and that it was an insult to the American people to make him a judge of the court of claims.

For a long time the nomination "hung fire". Then the senate in secret session confirmed the nomination of the former senator from Wisconsin. Paul Mallon never shirks a duty. By hook or crook he obtained the roll call on confirmation. He printed the names of the senators who voted for confirmation and those who voted to reject the nomination.

Reed of Pennsylvania, of the house of steel and iron and coke and anthracite, raised a violent row. He had something to say of the ethics of newspapers and newspaper writers. He was very contemptuous of the fourth estate and all its representatives. Paul Mallon was barred from the floor. Reed would bar the United Press from the press gallery if he had his way. Why should there be star chamber sessions of the senate? Why should nominations be confirmed behind closed doors? And speaking of ethics, are those employed by star chamber statesmen and servants of the American republic to be applauded by the American people and continued by their expressed will? Are the people the masters, or are senators who hide behind locked doors the Mussolinis of this republic.

Forty Persons Nearly Drown In Dallas Lake

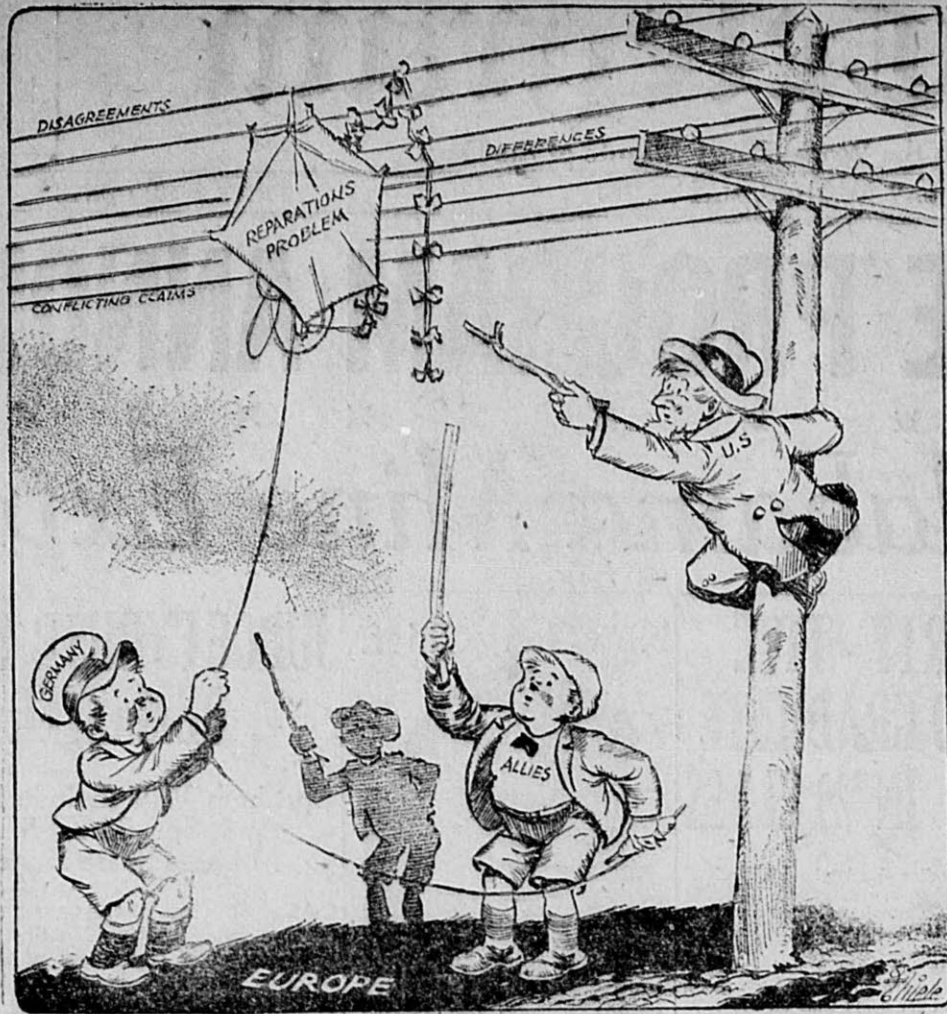

Were Searching For Bodies Of Three Youths Drowned In The Lake Pier Collapses

DALLAS, Tex., May 28.—More than 40 persons were thrown into the water and narrowly escaped drowning in White Rock lake today when a pier on which they were standing collapsed. The pier had been made the base of operations for finding the bodies of three youths drowned in the lake last night. The pier turned over on one side and threatened for a moment to hold several persons under water. Firemen, policemen and onlookers threw ropes to the swimmers in efforts to get them out of the water. E. H. Papley, Dallas electrician, was nearly in a motor boat and rescued nearly a dozen. Directing the rescue from Papley's boat was Guy Watson, lone survivor of the lake tragedy last night. The water was seven or eight feet deep where the pier collapsed. The youths are believed to have drowned when a rowboat in which four were riding capsized Monday night. Those missing are: Clifford Hall, 19, Roy Gross, 10, Albert McGuire, 17, Guy Watson, 17, a student at Dallas Technical high school, was rescued by a fisherman who heard his cries for help.

PECAN GROWERS GIVEN A KNOCKOUT

Texas is a great pecan producing state. Texas pecan producers asked for protection from foreign competition. Now that what did the republican tariff makers do? They deflected from the original bill duties on pecans, throwing them on the free list. The original bill had recommended three cents per pound on unshelled pecans and six cents on shelled. Now pecans, Texas pecans, and the pecans of all other American states will be on the free list with foreign crude. Texas is the great oil producing state. Its pecans are the pride of the pecan growing world.

Texas independent oil producers and Texas pecan growers are among the orphans which the republican tariff makers flatly declined to afford protection.

A NEW SUBSTITUTE FOR COTTON

An English scientist and globe trotter is in America to introduce to cotton growers and manufacturers a new cotton substitute made of a strong, fibrous plant discovered in bird nests in South America. He has made 85 crossings and re-crossings of plants to develop the cotton fiber, the plant can be grown in practically any climate or soil and is not subject to boll weevil ravages.

Of course the inventor or discoverer needs financial assistance to carry on and his visit to America is mainly to enlist the aid of capitalists who recognize a good thing when they see it.

First it was rayon. Now, it is a substitute for the cotton plant as a result of an important discovery. There is something new covery in South America bird

HAVE you seen it in your washtubs? Of course you have! Do you know what it means? Of course you know that it means the washing has been done in hard water. Soap combined with the hardness and made scum. The scum collected dirt, some went into the clothes, some formed the dirty ring. Soften hard water with Melo and it becomes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. No dirty ring! White clothes! Soap saved, from 1/3 to 1/2 the amount ordinarily used. WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER WASHINGTON—One of the jobs Harry Sinclair might qualify for during his 90 days of incarceration is that of interior decorator.

There is little question that Sinclair will find room for certain aesthetic improvements in his new surroundings and his father will probably find the oil man glad to make any suggestions and to supervise their execution.

When he is a free man in Washington Sinclair stays at the Carlton hotel, which is a very swell place, and it was there that he demonstrated his eye for color and his aversion for drabness. The walls and rooms of the hotel were once all of a putty color, their surface being fashionably scrambled and resembling so much chewing gum. But Sinclair told the management he must have the walls of his suite splashed with a little bright blue over all. When this was done the effect was so rich that the management carried the scheme out throughout the hotel.

If the Senate lags far behind the House in dealing with this year's legislation, one is justified in predicting that the fault will be that of the Hon. J. Thomas Heflin, senior senator from Alabama. No one who fails to read the Congressional Record can realize just how much time Heflin has

Years of service in MODEL T FORDS THE Model T was so strongly and sturdily built that it is still rendering reliable, economical service to motorists in every section of the country. Millions of these cars can be put in shape for two, three and five more years of use at very small cost. So that you may have this work done economically and satisfactorily, the Ford Motor Company is still devoting a considerable section of its plants to the manufacture of Model T parts. It will continue to do so as long as they are needed by Model T owners. The following list gives the approximate labor charges for reconditioning the Model T Ford: Engine Tune motor (including replacement of commutator case, brush and vibrator points if necessary) - $1.00 Grind valves and clean carbon - $3.75 to 4.00 Overhaul carburetor - 1.50 Refine detachable car transmission bands - 1.50 Install new pistons or connecting rods - 1.50 Tighten all main bearings - 2.50 Overhaul motor and transmission - $20.00 to 25.00 Rear System Replace rear axle assembly - 2.50 Install universal joint - 3.00 Refine brake shoes - 1.50 Replace rear axle shaft, drive shaft pinion, or drive gear - 5.00 Overhaul complete rear axle assembly - $5.75 to 7.00 Rehub spring and perches - 1.75 Oil and graphite springs - 3.00 Front System Overhaul front axle - $4.00 to 5.00 Rehub spindle bodies and arms (both sides) - 2.50 Replace or straighten spindle connecting rod - .75 Tighten radius rod or steering ball cap - .60 Tighten all sockets and joints of front end - 1.50 Replace front spring tie bolt or new leaf - 2.50 Straighten front axle - 3.00 Chassis Replace rear fender - 1.75 Overhaul steering gear - 3.50 Repair muffler - 1.00 Overhaul radiator - 7.50 Repaint Coupe - 25.00 Repaint Sedan - 25.00 Repaint Touring Car - 20.00 Reupholster Runabout - 8.00 Reupholster Touring Car - 15.00 Replace top deck (Coupe or Sedan) - 4.00 Overhaul starting motor - 3.00 Overhaul generator - 2.60 These prices are approximate and are for labor only, because the need and number of new parts depend on the condition of each car. The charge for these parts is low, however, because of the established Ford policy of manufacturing and selling at a small margin of profit. FORD MOTOR COMPANY BOHNING MOTOR CO. TEXAS LEAGUE The Texas league race was more lurching than ever today with all first division teams losing except Ft. Worth. The Cats conquered Shreveport 6 to 1. Dick Whitworth, Ft. Worth pitcher, had all the Sports baffled except Starr, catcher. Starr gathered four hits in four trips to the plate, as many as all his teammates put together.

A lesson in careful juggling of pitchers was given fans by Jim Galloway, Wichita Falls manager.

He didn't stop to let any pitcher blow up but just took them out when they were threatening to slacken. The result, Wichita Falls defeated Dallas 2 to 1. Wiltse, Galera and Steengrafe held Dallas to five hits.

Waco and Houston, both of whom have lost most of their games lately, fought it out at Waco. The home team lost, 8 to 2. Blackerby's two home runs were all the scores the league leaders could get off Lindsey.

Beaumont showed how four veteran southpaw, who pitched the San Antonio was loser 4 to 0 when Stieley, Beaumont pitcher, kept the Indians' six hits scattered. Messenger was the losing twirler.

Relation of the Rural Bureau To City Credit Man Given

(Address delivered by Mrs. Alice D. True, secretary, Ranger Retail Merchants Association, at the recent state convention in San Antonio.)

The business world is realizing more and more the real value of a real credit man. The efficient, well-trained credit man is the greatest diplomat of modern times. The credit man has been very firmly compared to "the watchman at the gate." In the ancient days, when firearms were unknown, during the days of walled cities, the countries which were under Roman rule and possibly many others depended very largely for protection on the watchman at the gate. His duties were rather limited, but his responsibilities were very great. He must be always on the alert, always on the watch for friend or foe; no one who was not far-sighted could hold this position; just so with the credit man, he must have a vision.

King Solomon said hundreds of years ago, "Where there is no vision the people perish." This is just as true today as when spoken three thousand years ago. They perish because they have no ideal, nothing toward which to strive. They are satisfied with their present achievements and have no incentive for doing greater things. Today, the merchant perishes who attempts to build safely and without loss on free information and allows himself to be blinded by the price of a credit report or credit clearance.

There are two ways to secure knowledge; personal experience and through the experience of others. Often personal experience is much more expensive, but we all know the old adage.

The rural bureaus and city credit managers are related and each is dependent on the other in a way for their success.

This relation is a very close one and one of vital importance to each. The credit bureaus of the smaller towns and cities are dependent on the credit men mostly as a matter of co-operation. We think sometimes that the word co-operation is worn threadbare, but many times there is no other word that will take the place. As in all other phases of business, this holds true. "United We Stand, Divided We Fall." Years ago a great artist had rendered a masterpiece in a wonderful way. The applause of the audience was both loud and long. The little fellow who had pumped the great pipe organ was very much pleased. He felt that he had helped some, even though in a small way. He approached the great artist, and said: "We did fine, didn't we?" The artist resented this and said, "Well, what did you have to do with it? I played well, or it seems so from the applause." "Oh," said the little boy, "didn't we do it?" "Why, no," said the artist, "I did it." The audience continued to applaud and called for an encore. She placed her fingers on the keys but no music came forth. She looked back at the boy and said, "Pump, Johnnie, pump!" "Not on your life," replied Johnnie, "Nothing doing!" "Oh, please, Johnnie, go ahead and pump." "Well," replied Johnnie, "was it we?" "Yes," she answered, "we did it," and then Johnnie did his part and together they rendered such music that gladdened the hearts of the listeners.

Credit men are dependent on the rural bureaus, in a large measure, for their success in drawing trade from the surrounding towns and trade territory. If a merchant or business needs a thing, they pay for it whether they buy it or not. Many merchants and firms pay for their lack of credit information. They sell without investigating, many times to their sorrow. In this age of installment buying, radios, automobiles, the greatest problem seems to be with the merchant who sells on open account, though the dealer and others possibly feel that their problems are just as great. Some merchants are foolish enough to throw away the life boat, the credit bureau and feel like they are saving the price of their dues.

A few days ago while talking to one of our members, I told him that I could prove that some business men are more inquisitive, had more curiosity than women. He thought it couldn't be done. So I said, "Alright, you sell a man when you know that he owes another merchant—and take a chance just to see if he will pay you."

He replied, "You have won." We could tell you of a neighboring city who donated, though they did not intend to, the wedding garments to a lady who had lived in our town for years and had never paid her bills promptly. She possibly told the credit man of some of her relations who were very good, gave a good recommendation of herself, and almost before the credit manager realized it, she had secured the credit and the merchandise and they still have the account. After several months, they asked us to collect the account, but it was impossible, as we had also tried to collect for our merchants. We could have saved them the account before hand.

Some credit men allow themselves to be influenced by a nice looking society lady and allow her a charge account when she has never paid her bills at home. The credit man must have knowledge and the backbone to apply it, and if necessary, to say no and mean it. All the world loves and respects a real manly man, but in the field of credit people, there is certainly no place for a jelly-fish.

A credit manager with the proper knowledge and keen business judgment can make a small business large. A man's judgment is usually no better than his information. A keen business sense must have behind it a lot of real common sense. There is no business or profession where snap judgment must be of a higher quality than that of the credit manager, for there are times when he must decide a very important question, maybe involving a large amount of money, almost in the twinkling of an eye, and the reputation of the credit granting profession often lies in the hollow of his hand. He must, above all things, be honest with himself as well as others. He must play the old game square; honesty must be his beacon light.

The real, true secretary, no difference where located, is the credit man's friend. We do not give you our personal opinion or advise you whether to sell or not, but give you the facts as near as possible, and ask you to use your judgment.

It is only fair to the rural towns and bureaus that you investigate your credit risks, even if you did not consider the value of the protection to yourself, and if you play square, you will not advise credit to one who does not pay his home merchant.

Again, we appreciate the co-operation of the associations and credit managers in the way that some of them, at least, work with us on the direct inquiry. A few weeks ago, an association in another town received a direct inquiry from one of our merchants, a service station manager who had just moved to town and were not members, and who had known nothing of our work. The association answered the inquiry at once but sent the report to our office. We advised the merchant that we had important information for him and asked him to come for it. We then explained to him that these inquiries must

Mothers Are Learning Uses Of Magnesia

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned, That's the time Phillips Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves the expectant mother's nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps her digestion. Its mild, but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. A teaspoonful of it does the work of a half pint of lime water. It is a mild laxative; harmless, almost tasteless.

All drug stores have Phillips Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

STRANGE as it may seem in Texas, where women have held offices in every branch of the public service, it was less than eight and one-half years ago when the state officially proclaimed them the equals and partners of men in things political, and just a decade ago they were admitted to party primaries.

If one any longer questions women's ability to take care of themselves in politics and public affairs, compare the record of that eight and one-half years of feminine endeavor, with the achievements of men in any similar period of the world's history. His question will answer itself.

A woman has been governor of Texas. Four women have served as lawmakers, including one in the office of state senator. An all-woman supreme court has handed down decrees from the loftiest judicial bench of Texas. Women's share in things political is so much an accepted fact now, that it seems like going back into the dim and dusty past to read the proclamation of the governor of Texas published in the fall of 1920, when women were first welcomed to full equality in the responsibilities and duties of citizenship.

An official proclamation on file in the state department—presided over by a woman—recounts that the day "marks an epoch and a turning point in the history of this nation." The tremendous significance of this achievement, affecting as it does the political status of half the people of this nation, and promoting the political thinking of all the people of the nation, at once taxes our imagination with its magnitude, and makes our hearts rejoice with its rosecate promise for the future.

Five years after that, a woman occupied the governor's chair.

This proclamation was written by Gov. W. P. Hobby in September of 1920, when Tennessee had been the 26th state to ratify the 19th amendment to the national constitution, conferring full suffrage upon women. Gov. Hobby caused the law to be changed to admit women to vote in the 1918 primary election.

"It is appropriate and proper," the Texas proclamation set forth, "that we pause and give expression to our deep gratitude, for it is impossible to conceive a more far-reaching achievement or to estimate its outstanding influence upon the future progress of the human race." Sept. 4, 1920, was set aside as a holiday to celebrate the political freedom of women.

At that, woman suffrage has never been written into the constitution of Texas; but was rejected by the he-men voters who passed on it last, in May, 1919, less than a decade ago.

Feminine Leaders. Already the roster of women who have held high public office is getting to be a lengthy one. This list speaks for itself of the success of the experiment in government that is no longer an experiment. Here are some of the women who have taken part in the official affairs of the state.

be sent through the associations and that other secretaries were not supposed to answer direct to them. We gained a friend and a new member.

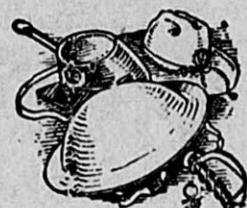

Merchants are sometimes compared to fiddlers and violinists. Fiddlers are usually self-made men; violinists are almost invariably trained.

Once more, we would compare the credit manager to "the watchman at the gate." He must be loyal to his firm and to his customers, remembering that they are his greatest assets. Each must be handled in a business-like way. Make credit sought; do not let your customers run your credit department. Use credit as a service to deserving people, then you will control your credits and they will not control you. Remember the hardest nut has the sweetest meat inside.

Don't think that the rural secretary is envious or selfish. As a rule, they are just business people too, and are glad to help you in any and every way possible. In closing, I leave this thought:

Business is business, but life is ment plans for their sisters. Guests had more than a taste of the renowned hospitality of the old South during their stay here. Rotary Anns arriving Sunday and Monday were claimed as they stepped from their trains by groups of Dallas women, who pinned a fragrant cape jasmine blossom on each visitor. Reception, teas, bridge parties and a matinee performance of "Lady Windermere's Fan," by the Dallas Little Theatre occupied every moment of the Rotary Anns' time.

Climaxing the entertainment will be a garden party. "An Afternoon in the Old South," given Thursday at the Dallas club. Guests will be serenaded by old negroes from the porch of a log cabin, where favors of tin cotton bales will be distributed. A pageant representing the different flags under which Texas has served will be given. While Rotary Anns will be enjoying mint julep and old fashioned cookies served by negro mammies, airplanes will drop corsages of native flowers.

So This Is Texas "Seventy five per cent of all city and town people work for somebody else, and more than 60 per cent of the farmers are tenants. These comprise a majority of all the people," remarks the dean of the third house in his little booklet, "Analyzing the last report of the State highway commission."

There is another item of interest to the reader furnished by the forefaded dean of the third house. It follows: "Seventeen counties pay 49.09 per cent of the total taxes paid upon motor vehicles and 50.35 of the total portion thereof that goes to the highway commission. These counties contain 27.8 per cent of the population, 40.7 per cent of the assessed value and comprise only 6.6 per cent of the area of the State."

What has happened to the ancient mariner, who yelled at the top of his voice, "Back to the farm?"

Money for the J. P.'s "Fines in Bexar county justice courts have gone to $7," remarks the editor of a San Antonio paper. This on account of the trial fee of $7 provided by the regular session of the legislature, which must be paid by the defendant who is convicted in addition to the costs which are taxed under 1925 statutes the Legislature has failed to repeal.

According to the county auditor of Bexar county the $7 trial fee was provided to create a fund from which justices are to be paid by the county $2.50 for each case disposed of. Furthermore, he says that the new law works out all right under the costs but when there is no conviction the county gets nothing and the justice gets $2.50 just the same.

Under the workings of the new law reports made to the auditor show that a great majority of the cases disposed of in the eight justice courts in Bexar county are acquittals and a claim of $2.50 is made against the county in each case.

Rotary Board May Serve Two Years

Rotary Anns Have Prominent Part in Program.

By United Press. DALLAS, Tex., May 27.—The board of governors of Rotary International will serve two years if the convention adopts the recommendations of its directors, as decided in a pre-convention session here today.

One-half of the board will be elected on alternate years if the plan is adopted. The change in terms from one to two years was recommended in order to gain continuity of work by the board, Chesley Perry, international secretary, said.

DALLAS, Tex., May 27.—Almost one-third of the spokes which will make the Rotary International wheel go round at the 1929 convention meeting here, will be Rotary Anns, wives and daughters of the Rotarians who have come from all parts of the United States and more than two-score foreign countries.

Dallas being neither a Southern nor a Western city, but a cross between the two, Dallas Rotary Anns have chosen the Southern rather than the Western theme as the keynote of their entertain-Hops Off June 1 With a Freight Cargo of 2,000 Pounds.

BERLIN, May 27.—Although airplanes have spanned the Atlantic ocean a number of times during the past two years, the first strictly commercial airplane crossing is now scheduled to begin on June 1, when the big German Rohrbach flying boat, "Rostra," takes off from Lisbon, Portugal, for New York, carrying a cargo on which freight charges will be $3 an ounce. Final tests have been completed and everything is in readiness.

If this flight results as it is expected to, it will inaugurate a regular commercial trans-Atlantic service, with lower freight charges, which will bring Europe and the United States within three days of each other.

German Ace Is Pilot Hermann Steindorf, former World War ace, who will pilot the "Rostra," has not yet decided which of two routes he will follow. Steindorf was a bomber in the German army.

One route would take him from Lisbon to the Cape Verde islands, thence to the tiny island of Fernando Po, off the Brazilian coast, and northward from there to New York with a stop in the West Indies. The other, 2,000 miles shorter but calling for longer jumps over water, would go from Lisbon to the Cape Verde islands and thence to Barbados and then to New York. It is considered likely that this is the route that will be adopted. No effort is to be made to set any records for speed or duration. The object of the flight is to prove the commercial feasibility of trans-Atlantic airplane service; and, naturally, the first thought is for the safety of the plane and its crew. No risks will be taken that can possibly be avoided.

Built Like a Boat Thus, to begin with, the "Rostra" is strictly a seaplane. Its hull is built like the hull of a regular boat. It is divided by numerous "watertight" bulkheads, and if forced down should be able to keep the sea for days, even in rough weather.

It carries a jury mast and sail, so that it could proceed to port like any other sailing vessel if its engines should become disabled. Even the great all-metal wings are constructed as hollow-box girders, and will float in an emergency. There are five rooms, besides the cargo space, in the big flying boat. The pilot house, where Steindorf will sit at the controls, is slightly above the level of the other rooms and is fitted with all instruments in duplicate so that no harm will be done if an instrument should suddenly fail.

In front of the pilot house, on the right side, is the radio room, nearly sound proof. When the plane is in flight there is a towing aerial which will enable the radio operator to send and receive messages over long distances. If the plane alights on the water, a telescopic mast carrying a secondary aerial can be run up. Besides the radio room, on the left is the navigation room, fitted with a map table and supports for instruments which service for astronomic position finding. Back of the pilot house is the crew's quarters; in the very bow is the "collision room," as it is called, where all such sea equipment as anchors, hawsers, boat hooks, signal flags, safety belts and the like are stowed.

Five people will make the trip. Steindorf will have Hans Niemann as his navigator, and is now preparing to select a mechanic and an assistant pilot. And there will be one woman aboard. Mildred Johnson, an American girl, will make the flight as custodian of the cargo. A special "office" is being fitted up for her in the freight compartment. She will occupy this room, spending her spare time en route writing the story of the voyage.

Two thousand pounds of cargo will be carried on the first trip, although on subsequent trips it is planned to use the ship's full carrying capacity of 9,000 pounds. Once the idea of regular trans-Atlantic plane service is demonstrated to be dependable, as the backers of this flight believe the initial trip will demonstrate it, the "Rostra" should be a money maker. Expenses will not be heavy. It will take about $600 worth of gas and oil to get the ship across the ocean. Other expenses, such as crew's pay, maintenance, repairs, insurance and the like, will not average much more than the same charges for over-land flying. Carrying 9,000 pounds of cargo at $1 an ounce—for the rate is to be reduced after regular service is established—the ship would have an operating income of about $144,000 per one-way trip. Tests Are Successful. Recently Steindorf and Dr. Adolf Rohrbach, the designer, have put the ship through stiff tests at Travemunde, Germany. Steindorf took the ship, loaded with 9,000 pounds of freight to an altitude of 9,500 feet, and has attained a speed of 135 miles per hour with that load aboard. Since only 2,000 pounds will be carried on the first trip, it is expected that a cruising speed of 125 miles an hour can be maintained easily. Already it has been demonstrated that the "Rostra" can fly, fully loaded, with only one engine. It can land and take off when 15-foot waves are running. It can proceed handily with its jury mast and sail while on the surface. American airplane engine builders have a special interest in the "Rostra" flight, as the original European motors were recently removed and replaced by American Pratt and Whitney "Hornets." These are air-cooled engines of 575 horsepower.

Commerce St. and is the proprietor of the Searcy Wholesale Candy Co. of Bangor, Tex. recently. "Before I commenced taking it, he continued, "I was so run-down and miserable a half-hour job would tire me as much as a whole day's work at the office does now. I was under weight and had no strength and often suffered with indigestion. My nerves were so unstrung that I was irritable and out of sorts all the time. I would get up in the mornings and feeling as tired and worn out as if I hadn't gone to bed an my work was an actual punishment to me. "I had reached the point where it was necessary for me to do something for myself and I bought Orgatone because I knew it had helped others right here in Bangor. I now sleep sound, eat hearty and can do a hard day's work at the factory without feeling it. My stomach don't hurt me like it did and everything I have to do is a pleasure instead of the burden, as it was before. I recommend Orgatone to everybody with those miserable, tired, nervous feelings like I had, for it certainly has straightened me out in fine shape. "Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Eastland exclusively by The People's Hardware Drug Store who are laboratory agents.—Adv.

BASEBALL Breaking their nine-game losing streak the last place Cincinnati Reds rallied in the eighth inning to beat the league leading Chicago Cubs, 8 to 5. Tight pitching enabled the Phillies to beat the Braves twice, 2 to 1, and 3 to 1. Ray Bengie held the Braves to five hits in the first game and Claude Willoughby allowed seven in the second. Late rallies gave the Chicago White Sox a double victory over Detroit, 7 to 4, and 6 to 5. Four runs in the eighth won the first game. Cissell's home run in the ninth after two were down tied the score in the second game and White Sox won on Al Thomas' hit in the fourteenth. Usal B. State Elks Shown Good Time at Lake Cisco Sunday at Conclusion of Convention at Breckenridge

Approximately 160 Elks from cities outside of the oil belt were entertained by the Cisco, Eastland and Ranger Elks at Lake Cisco yesterday afternoon in the final event on the program of the convention of the State Elks association which opened at Breckenridge Thursday. Acting as hosts to these visitors were approximately 200 Elks from the four cities of Cisco, Breckenridge, Eastland and Ranger.

Four hundred pounds of barbecued meat together with bread, pickles, coffee and the other essentials of a good barbecue were served up to the visitors on what is known as Slaffer Draw one of three prongs of land that extend out into the waters of Lake Cisco from the northern shore, two miles up the big body of water. On this peninsular pits had been dug and tables erected by the chamber of commerce of Cisco. The meat cooked under the supervision of Virgil Heysler, was excellent, though Mr. Heysler and his helpers were forced to dodge unfavorable elements at times during the course of their work. One calf and two goats were barbecued for the event.

over the city and to the lake. Plenty of boats were available at the landing through the generosity of Cisco boat owners. The larger part of the party were placed in these boats and carried up the lake two miles to the Slaffer Draw. The lake was calm and the long water ride was one of the most pleasant experiences of the tour, the visitors declared.

The visitors were hedged about with no formalities. On Slaffer Draw they fell to with gusto at the long tables. After the barbecue they were taken back to the landing to enjoy themselves at the swimming pool and with other recreational activities. Though the day was too cool for much swimming a number of the visitors took advantage of the opportunity given them to enter the pool. After the outing the visitors were brought to the station here to board the train for home. The El Paso Elks band, prominent among the visitors because of their uniforms, had a special pullman parked on a sidetrack. This was picked up by the Sun-shine for the return trip to El Paso. The committee from the Cisco Elks club in charge of the arrangements for this entertainment was composed of Hoyt Agnew, J. A. Bearman, and Mike L. McGannon, with Hugh White, exalted ruler, an ex-officio member, and J. E. T. Peters, secretary of the chamber of commerce, representing that organization.

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Hanigan Gained Fifteen Pounds

"For fifteen years I had serious trouble with my stomach. It simply revolted at food and after eating I would have sharp pains, followed by terrible headaches and dizziness. My kidneys also bothered me and caused severe backaches. I also suffered with constipation. I became very anxious and nervous when every kind of treatment failed to help me. I lost weight and strength until I was utterly discouraged.

MACK M. HANIGAN

"The results from Sargon in my case were remarkable. My stomach is soothed and I can enjoy my meals without a sign of indigestion, headaches or dizziness afterwards. I have no more trouble with my kidneys and the backaches are gone. My nerves are steady. I sleep better and awake feeling refreshed and fit for my daily work. My old time strength and energy returned and I feel better in every way.

NEARLY 35 UNITE WITH THE CHURCH

Memorable Response Sunday at First Baptist Church Revival.

(From Ranger Times)
The morning services Sunday at First Baptist Church was one of the most successful in the history of the church and community.

The preacher never got to his morning theme. After the adult department of the Sunday school assembled at the close of the lesson hour, Brother Coffman spoke to the school on the material, physical and spiritual advantage of the Christian life and gave the invitation for all to accept Christ as a personal Savior, to so confess the fact, and the converts began to come to the front to confess and accept Jesus, and they kept coming until nearly 30 stood in line and more than 20 united with the church upon confession of faith for baptism. Others united by letter and statement. Workers were rejoicing and saved people praising God.

The night congregation was almost a capacity audience with a powerful sermon and five additional services.

The services will continue at 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. all through the week.

The Monday night message will discuss "The Habitation of Man After Death."

Do not miss a single message, they will open eyes on "hidden things."

The orchestra is improving continually. Singing is hearty and the use of familiar songs makes it possible for all to enjoy the song service.

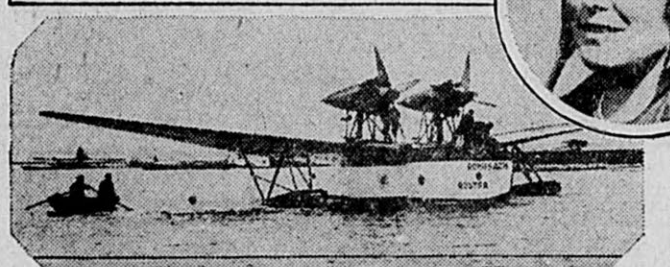

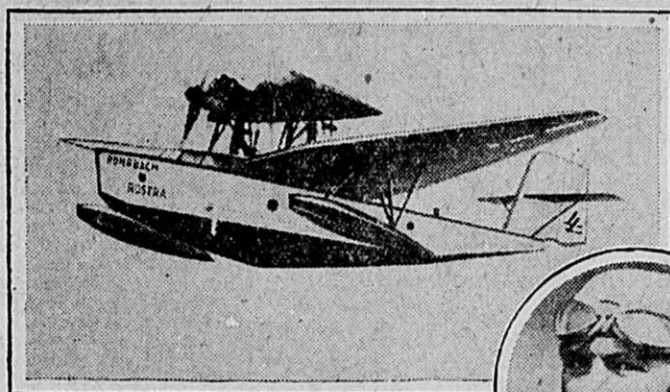

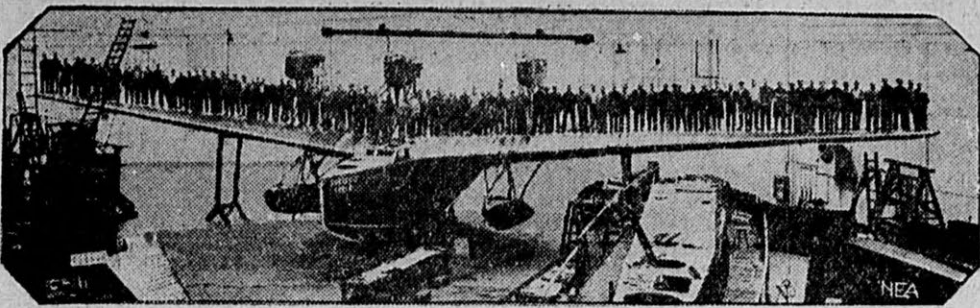

Start the week right and close it the same way. Let no excuse keep you from the full enjoyment of your privilege; give God a chance at your Soul, it is urged by those in charge of the services.

NEW FREIGHTER OF THE SKIES

Trans-Atlantic flying is now being figured on a dollars and cents basis and the promoters of this big German freighter of the skies hope to make it pay. The top strip shows the sturdy construction of a great Rohrbach flying boat and below the Rostra is shown in the air and on the water. At the right is Herman Steindorf, the pilot, who was a German bombing ace in the World War. Inset is Miss Mildred Johnson, American girl aviator, who will be one of the five persons aboard during the initial flight.

COOLIDGE IS A HUMORIST, SO SAYS NONE OTHER THAN MR. WILL ROGERS

Will Rogers, himself one of the humorists, is the declaration of foremost humorists of the country, in a magazine article. In support of his argument, Rogers quotes a series of intimate stories of Coolidge as told by Dwight Morrow, United States ambassador to Mexico, former schoolmate and close friend of the ex-president.

"When you want to get a line of a fellow," says Rogers, "don't get it from the man himself; get it from someone who knows him. So let's let Mr. Morrow testify in this case—Coolidge vs. the People."

Ambassador Morrow's first

When they started home, the palace was dark and nobody knew how to reach the doors. Coolidge attempted to show his guests out, but after prowling about and finding a locked entrance, he could not find the Morrows' wraps. A night watchman was finally awakened and, as the guests left, Coolidge remarked: "If this palace is all located in Cuba, Cuba is a bigger place than you think."

In March when Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were packing to leave the White House, the former president asked Mrs. Coolidge what she was going to do with all her dresses when they reached their house in Northampton.

"I'll just put them in a cupboard," she said.

"You'd better put them in the rooms and we'll live in the cupboard," replied Coolidge, according to Ambassador Morrow.

MORROW VISITED THE FORMER PRESIDENT AGAIN JUST BEFORE HE LEFT WASHINGTON, WHEN COOLIDGE SAID TO HIM: "I HAVE JUST HEARD THAT THE GOVERNMENT WANTS TO DO SOMETHING FOR ITS EX-PRESIDENTS IN THE WAY OF PENSIONS. WE CAN SEND OUT LETTERS FOR NOTHING. THE ONLY THING ABOUT IT IS, NOBODY WANTS TO HEAR FROM US THEN."

On another occasion, said the Ambassador, a woman politician from New York who was sponsoring an uplift bill, called to see the president and opened her remarks in what she believed was the most complimentary fashion.

"Why, Mr. Coolidge," she said, "you look much younger than your pictures give you credit for; there is much more color in your face than the pictures show."

"Yes, guess I'll have to change my powder," returned Coolidge.

Ambassador Morrow values highly Coolidge's instructions to him when he left on his mission to Mexico. He had expected hundreds of pages of instructions and policies, but the matter was not mentioned until just before he boarded the train, when Coolidge after a brief "good-bye," said: "Dwight, don't jump on Mexico. Just keep Mexico from jumping on us."

"Has Coolidge humor?" concludes Rogers, after a recital of Morrow's stories. "Say, he has more real, downright, subtle humor than anyone we have in public life."

ONE OF MOST FAMED FLYERS IS IN RANGER

Woman Who Has Made Daring Flights Is Visitor.

(Ranger Times)
An odd-looking plane, piloted by a woman, landed at the Ranger airport at noon today.

Magneto trouble had forced the plane down and while it was being repaired by the woman's co-pilot, two Ranger aviation enthusiasts, Tony Ward and Harry Henry, chatted with the woman flyer.

She talked in a most entertaining and courteous manner, spoke of the flight of the "Fort Worth" and said she had remained to see Robbins and Kelly finish their epoch-making achievement.

A few moments later when G. W. Davis, the co-pilot, had finished cleaning the magneto, the Ranger men found that they had been chatting with a member of the British nobility—Lady Mary Heath, one of the most famous flyers in the world.

Lady Mary complimented the Ranger airport and said she might stop here on her way back from Sweetwater. She was en route to that city from Fort Worth. Her plane was an Avion with a four-cylinder air-cooled Cirrus motor. There was nothing serious the matter with the magneto but the flyers decided to land and get the magneto cleaned.

While here, Lady Mary lunched at the Ranger Cafe.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

NAN CARROLL is private secretary to ATTORNEY JOHN CURTIS MORGAN and happy over prospects of passing her bar examinations in June. On account of her brilliant mind Nan is a great help to Morgan and is dependent on her.

IRIS MORGAN, the lawyer's beautiful though selfish wife, comes into the office often, treating Nan with the insolence she would accord a servant. When WILLIS TODD, an ardent suitor, proposes marriage for the fifth time to Nan, she refuses, saying she cannot give up her position with Morgan. Jealous, Willis accuses her of being in love with Morgan and Nan is forced to admit the truth of this to herself.

Being honorable and straight, Nan despises herself for being in love with another woman's husband and determines to resign the next morning. In the morning, mail she finds a blackmail note addressed to the lawyer. In a postscript a nasty insinuation is made about Iris Morgan. Nan cannot bear to hurt him with the note, and so tucks it in her bag when he comes in.

Nan discovers a clew which enables her to win a big case for Morgan. As they start to leave the courthouse, BERT CRAWFORD, comes up and asks to drive them to the office in his car. Nan for some unaccountable reason dislikes Crawford. Morgan invites the two of them to his house for a dinner in celebration of the day's triumph.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Crawford tactfully remained in the outer office with Nan while Morgan talked on the telephone with his wife. The conversation lasted so long that Nan became hotly embarrassed, sure that Morgan would emerge finally with the humiliating report that Iris could not after all arrange to have four at a table instead of three.

But Morgan, in his jubilation over his dramatic triumph at the courthouse, must have exercised some of the masterfulness which marked him in the courtroom and in his own offices, but to which Iris Morgan was almost a stranger, for when Morgan did rejoin them, his face flushed with the battle he had fought, his words were not a shameful confession of failure.

"My wife is delighted to have you, Nan. Dinner will be at half past seven. You'll bring her, won't you, Bert?"

For a second Bert Crawford hesitated, and Nan saw the color deepen slightly in his pink-and-white cheeks. "Delighted, old man. About seven-fifteen, Nan?"

"Please, I'd rather join you both at Mr. Morgan's," Nan answered. "I'm sure you three have a lot to talk over before dinner, and I'll want to arrive at the very last possible minute, if I may. Things to do to my dress," she explained off-handedly.

She caught the fleeting expression of relief that lighted up Bert Crawford's blue eyes.

"He's as much of a snob as Iris," Nan told herself contemptuously. "He didn't want to call for me for fear I'd presume on the intimacy later, regard him as my 'boy friend,' I suppose. Or maybe—but that nasty anonymous letter is making me gaga with suspicion. Better curb your imagination, Nan Carroll, or you'll get yourself into trouble!"

"I'd like to see you a minute, Nan," Morgan stopped at her desk after bidding Bert Crawford goodbye.

"Now's my time to tell him I'm going to resign," Nan realized, with a dreadful sinking of her heart. "He's so elated over his victory that my news can't make him terribly unhappy, and since he hasn't any very big case on right now, he can do without me better than at almost any other time. I've got to do it! I can't stay on, knowing that I love him—"

She followed him into his private office, stood trembling before him, trying to make her lips form the words. But he forestalled her:

"I can't begin to thank you, Nan, for what you did today. I might have forced a confession out of Martha Fleming, with what evidence and conviction of her guilt I already had, but your bringing Annie Crayfish into court today was a stroke of genius."

"Nan," and he laid a big, warm hand upon the small cold one that was clenched upon the edge of his desk. "I've been calling you my junior partner, half seriously and half in fun. Let's make it come true, Nan. You're going to be ready to take your bar examinations by next June, aren't you? Well, then—how about it, Nan? Partners?"

CHAPTER VII

"If I'd had the nerve to resign, I could have missed this agony," Nan told herself angrily as she sat still and silent in Iris Morgan's charming living room, watching two men pay court to Iris' beauty. "But how could I resign today, when he was heaping appreciation and rewards upon me? Ten dollars a week raise—I could have done so much with $10 a week. But I MUST give him my written resignation tomorrow, tell him some plausible lie, hurt him as little as possible—"

If it weren't such had taste she could tell him now, for he seemed curiously alien to her, here in his home, or rather in Iris' home, for the place seemed wholly hers somehow.

Nan had never been in the Morgan home before. It had obviously never occurred to Iris to elevate her husband's secretary to the status of a friend of the family, and likewise it had never occurred to Nan to resent the fact that she had not been invited to her employer's home. Now that she found herself the hostess of the realization that had come upon her the night before.

Punishment for having another woman's husband had descended upon her swiftly and surely. For an entire evening she would have to be the unwilling guest of an unwilling hostess, and that hostess the wife of the man she loved. Heaven knew it was hard enough to go on seeing John Curtis Morgan in his office. There he was not a husband but a man, and a great man. In his home he was all lover and husband, so completely possessed by Iris that Nan's tortured eyes roved desperately around the room to escape the picture he made, bending eagerly toward Iris, adoring her, so pathetically grateful for her careless smiles, her lightly flung endearments.

"Nan's overwhelmed by your portrait, Iris," Bert Crawford sang out in his slightly too loud, too jovial tones. "Isn't it a corker, Nan? Benet's masterpiece—Benet, the famous portrait painter, you know."

Nan realized then that her blinded eyes had indeed been fixed upon the life-size portrait in oils that was hung above the fireplace, dominating the room. The artist had immortalized Iris' flamboyant beauty with a subtle brush, for the close observer could read cruelty, selfishness and vanity in the exquisite face.

Nan knew now the source of the pose which Iris nearly always struck when she took a seat, for the artist had chosen it as the one best calculated to show off every point of her beauty. A tall, slim, languid body, clothed in shimmering turquoise velvet, relaxed in a throne-like chair, the lovely face in three-quarter profile.

"It's very beautiful, almost as beautiful as Mrs. Morgan herself," Nan forced herself to say graciously.

"Thanks, Nan. She's a dear little flatterer, isn't she, Jack?" Iris acknowledged the compliment carelessly, but her eyes remained upon the portrait, worshipping her own beauty. "It was hung in a Paris salon, you know. My poor husband had to pay a fearful lot of money to get it. You see, the artist saw me and begged me to pose for him, and poor Jack somehow got it into his stupid head that I'd flirted with the jolly little Frenchman. I think he would have stolen the picture if he hadn't been able to buy it."

"I said that the jolly little Frenchman was in love with you, and he was," Morgan corrected her, every word like a caress. "I didn't blame him. Who could help being in love with you, darling? But I wasn't going to have anyone else buying my wife's portrait."

Bert Crawford's laugh rang out. "I'm glad you're so broad-minded old man! It gives me a wonderful chance to confess that I'm mad about Iris, too. As you say, who could help being in love with her?"

"This morning it was Nan you were mad about," Morgan laughed comfortably. "Some woman's going to take you seriously one of these days, and then you'll come whimpering to me to get out of a breach-of-promise suit."

"Oh, so you've been unfaithful to me, you bad boy!" Iris Morgan chided Crawford lightly, but Nan, watching closely, saw a glint of malice and danger and something strangely like warning in those odd blue-green eyes. "You mustn't let him raise your hopes too high, Nan. He's a gay philanthropist, as Jack says. But there's Estelle, with the good news that dinner is served."

Iris, linking her arm with Crawford's, led the way into the dining room, her red-gold head bent toward him in a low-voiced confidence. Nan followed with Morgan, who twinkled at her fondly.

"You mustn't mind Iris' teasing you, Nan. The three of us always carry on like that and don't mean a thing by it. She's as full of spirits as a care-free child," he added admiringly.

When they were seated and the soup served, Iris flashed her brilliant eyes at her husband and suggested archly: "Now, Jack, do tell us all about this scandalous Grace Cox case the papers are so full of. I haven't had time to read them, but I knew I'd have to listen to the story all over again from the hero. You WERE a hero, weren't you, Jack? I seem to gather that idea from your strut this evening."

Morgan's gaunt, sensitive face flushed darkly. "I didn't realize I was strutting, darling. I simply secured a dismissal of the indictment against my client; didn't even go to the jury."

"How you must have hated that!" Iris laughed a mocking tinkle. "He does love to rant before a jury. But I suppose all lawyers have exhibition complexes, or they wouldn't be lawyers. Does he practice his appeals to the jury before you, Nan?"

Nan's face was as full of distressed color as her employer's. "We're both so busy he doesn't have time," she answered curtly. "I owe this case to Nan, by the way," Morgan cut in, trying to look as if his wife had not hurt him deeply. "It was she who discovered my star witness for me and hauled her to court this morning."

"Very dramatic!" Iris tinkled, but the music had a hollow ring to it. "I hope you don't have to split the fee with her, for I warn you, husband of mine, that I spent a small fortune on clothes yesterday and today. But the loveliest things! Gorgeous enough for a touseau. I'll have to run away with one of my important admirers, in order to get the full benefit of them." And the blue-green eyes laughed a challenge at Bert Crawford.

That was the extent of the celebration of John Curtis Morgan's sensational triumph in the Grace Cox case. Nan, watching the beloved face of her employer closely, could have wept for him, but she could have shaken him, too, for being so fatuously content with the crumbs that Iris tossed him. How could a big man like Morgan be so blind?

Iris gaily took the conversation into bypaths more congenial to herself. Nan would have enjoyed, as much as she could enjoy anything at Iris Morgan's table, hearing a discussion of new books, plays and politics. She could have taken in such a discussion she was among her own friends she was rather noted for her crisp, keen comments, her joyous sense of humor, but such conversation was, apparently, not one of Iris' tallents.

Personalities were shuttled briskly between Iris and Bert Crawford—choice tidbits of scandal, caustic comments on the dress, manners and affairs of their absent friends. Through it all, John Curtis Morgan ate absent-mindedly of the rather haphazard meal that his wife had provided, or rather, that her cook had deemed good enough for a small, informal party. After the clear soup there were lamb chops, a tiny, hard-fried one for each plate; big stalks of expensive California asparagus, but not quite enough of them to make a decent serving; a salad of lettuce and pineapple, with balls of cream cheese; apricot whip in tall, thin glasses; demi-tasse.

For herself, Nan was fiercely glad that the food was meager and not too good; it made her eating of it less of a crime somehow, for it was shameful to break bread with a woman whom she hated and whose husband she loved. But for John Curtis Morgan Nan felt a hot surge of angry pain.

"She's half-starving the poor darling," she told herself. "And she pays a cook $80 a month of his money to give him puny little meals like these. Of course SHE doesn't want substantial meals! She's too afraid of adding a pound to that lissome figure of hers. I'm sure she calls it lissome," she added maliciously. Then, "Oh, I'm becoming unspeakably cattish! I'll have to get out of all this."

As if Iris had read Nan's thoughts, the lovely, careless woman flung a sort of apology to Morgan: "I'm sorry there are not two chops for you, Jack. I'd already done my ordering before I knew we were to have Nan with us this evening. The greedy pig likes two chops," she explained to Nan. "I don't understand how men can eat so much. Bert's on a diet, thank heaven, so I don't have to plan to stuff him when he comes to dinner. Not that he weighs an ounce too much," she added, reaching across the corner of the table to lay an affectionate hand on Crawford's.

After dinner Crawford made for the radio like a homing pigeon. When the syncopated blare of a jazz orchestra came flooding into the room, he snapped his fingers to the rhythm for a joyous minute, then held out his arms for his hostess.

"Shall we dance, Nan?" Morgan bent awkwardly over her, his eyes smiling and fond.

"No, please, I'd rather not!" Nan gasped. "Let's just watch them. Aren't they a perfect pair?" she babbled, to hide her confusion. She could not tell him that she did not dare add the agony of his arms about her to the agonies she had already suffered during the last 24 hours.

Bert and Iris were still dancing half an hour later, sublimely oblivious of Morgan's wistfully following eyes, when the maid, Estelle, appeared in the living room door, her eyes big with fright.

"Please, Mr. Morgan, there's a gentleman and a policeman at the door. They want to see you and Mr. Crawford both."

Before Morgan could answer, the "gentleman and the policeman" loomed behind the maid.

"Sorry to interrupt a party, Mr. Morgan, but I have a warrant for the arrest of Herbert S. Crawford."
