Publicity For License Bill Signed

Texans Intending to Marry After New Law Goes Into Effect Must Give Three Days' Notice Before Getting Marriage License.

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 23 — A warning against early closing of rural schools was issued today by State School Superintendent Marris, who announced that the emergency appropriation made by the legislature this week assured payment of all rural aid allotments without reducing them 20 per cent as threatened for lack of funds.

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 23 — Governor Dan Moody this morning signed Senator Julien Hyer's marriage license publicity bill. It will become effective 90 days from the end of the present session of the legislature. This will be between June 8 and June 15, depending on date of adjournment.

Rush for the Gretna Greens is expected to make May for once outrank June as a bride's month. Under the bill, three days' notice must be given before a marriage license can be issued. Before its issuance, the man must present hygienic certificate.

County Clerk Chester Hollis of Tarrant county and Senator Hyer were each given one of three pens used by the governor in signing the bill. He keeps the other as a souvenir.

Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller was definitely put forward as a candidate for governor and pledged the insouciant support of numerous senators this morning when the Senate ousted him from the chair and eulogized him on his selection as deputy grand master of Texas Odd Fellows.

Each member present expressed congratulations. Some quoted poetry. Senator Carl Hardin broke into song. Even from political opponents in many fights there.

came high praise of the lieutenant governor's fairness and his unflinching smile. "Barry's chuckle," one called it. Suggestion of the governorship was made by Senator Eugene Miller with the expressed hope that he will be grand master of Odd Fellows and governor at the same time.

Senators Witt, Gainer and Cunningham followed quickly with similar suggestions of the governorship and Senator Archie Parr pledged Lieut. Gov. Miller his support "for anything he wants."

"It is easy to frame ideas into words," responded Lieut. Gov. Miller, "but language cannot express emotions. I couldn't make a speech if I wanted to."

The fraternal office, Miller said, came through the kindness of his friends and unknown to him. He declared he was glad to have it for the opportunity it would give to work for the order's home for children at Corsicana. Brushing aside the compliments paid himself, he broke down completely in acknowledging the emulgies that also had been paid Mrs. Miller.

POSTOFFICE FIRE LOSS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 23 — San Antonio's federal building, housing the post office, was damaged to the extent of fifty thousand dollars today when fire broke out in the attic of the building.

Most of the damage was caused from water that soaked through the attic and drenched all offices on the third floor, including the federal district court room and offices of Federal Judge Duval West, Federal District Attorney John D. Hartman and the United States Marshal.

The fire is believed to have started from a defective wire in the attic. While fifty firemen were fighting the blaze in the attic, two hundred federal employees were detailed to move all mail from the post office on the first floor to an outside platform where it could be moved on a moment's notice.

Mail deliveries were made as usual today although delayed. The entrance to the building was guarded by armed guards and no one was admitted without a permit. Emergency stations for the sale of money orders and stamps were set up outside the building. The roof and attic will have to be rebuilt while the third and second floors must be completely renovated. Firemen worked for an hour and a half to extinguish the blaze. No mail was lost and no papers other than those kept in desks in the offices of the third floor were damaged by water.

Rep. John C. Box of Texas is in the headlines. He is for drastic amendments to the immigration act. Two bills backed by the Texan, one to make more stringent the regulations governing the admission of aliens to the United States to work were passed by the house and sent to the senate of the congress of the United States. As for the second bill, it would grant a preference within the quota to immigrants skilled in certain arts, sciences and crafts, to such a degree that persons without employment could not be found in the United States to fill their places.

Dundee hoped for more crumbs of information about the girl whose very name had the power to make his heart beat faster, but Mrs. Rhodes abruptly changed the subject.

"I'm going to depend on you, Mr. Dundee, to help make things as pleasant as possible for poor Cora. I'm giving you credit for enough sense to know she didn't have a thing to do with murdering and robbing Mrs. Hogarth."

"Thanks," Dundee grinned. "Of course I agree with you, and I'll do my best."

"You don't have to go so far as to make Bert jealous," Mrs. Rhodes interrupted, with one of her grim smiles. "Looks like the Rhodes house will have two weddings in the near future. I'm glad for Cora; she's a fine woman, even if she did let Emil Sevier make a fool of her."

"Then you think that Cora and Sevier were—well, lovers?" Dundee probed diffidently.

"If I'd thought so, I wouldn't have let it go on in my house," Mrs. Rhodes retorted. "But there was certainly a good deal of what the kids these days call 'heavy petting' . . . By the way, Daisy Shepherd is coming back here to board. I thought she would—"

"What! She's changed her mind already?" Dundee exclaimed.

"Daisy always was sort of flighty, but I'm mighty fond of her, so when she phoned at noon today and asked for her old room back, I told her to come right ahead. She'll be here in time for dinner tonight. I told her Sunday morning when she came out into the kitchen and began to cry on my shoulder, that she'd want to come back to Mother Rhodes. She seemed to hate to leave as much as I hated to have her go—"

"Morning, first crying and then laughing at herself for being a big baby, but — you'd have died laughing at the sight — munching at something nearly all the time. I never saw such a girl for eating in all my born days. Why, when I came back down after they'd arrested poor Cora and taken her away, there was Daisy—Oh, drat that phone I guess it's another reporter—"

But whoever it was and whatever further confidence in regard to Daisy's greediness had been interrupted, Dundee did not wait to find out. Very slowly, very thoughtfully, he ascended the stairs on his way to Norma Paige's room.

"There are so many possible angles to this fiendish case that I'll go dippy if I don't find a solution soon," the young detective told himself disgustedly.

"Hullo! Hullo!" the parrot greeted him cheerily as he entered the girl's room.

"Hello, Cap'n!" Dundee went to the cage and fearlessly reached in to stroke the green-an-yellow head. "I'm thinking of turning this pesky case over to you, old sport. How about it?"

The parrot turned gravely on his perch and cocked a bright eye at the detective. "Bad penny! Bad penny!" he croaked, proud of the new addition to his extensive vocabulary.

"Right you are!" Dundee laughed. "Between us, we'll avenge your dead mistress yet, Cap'n. Thanks for reminding me."

He was more cheerful as he set about the disagreeable task of searching Norma Paige's room, for the parrot's words seemed like a good omen. The room, unlike Henry Dowd's was redolent of its own personality. Dainty curtains of white voile, splashed with yellow daffodils, fluttered at the double windows, and the same material—immaculate, ruffled—was used for bedspread and dressing-table cover.

Dundee had a strong suspicion that the girl's own exquisite taste and competent little hands were responsible for this expensive daintiness, unusual even in so good a boarding place as the Rhodes house. Big, fleecy towels and absurdly pretty little face towels of fine linen, all embroidered with a monogrammed "P" hung on the rack above the stationary basin, and upon the green burlap screen were tacked a score of water color sketches—undoubtedly the girl's own handiwork, which she had once used in her kindergarten classes, for the subjects were the sort to appeal to small children.

Against the wall near the door was a small table, bearing an old typewriter of the same make and vintage as the one used by Bert Magnus. He was later to learn that both machines had been rented from the same agency. Beside the machine was a stack of yellow second-sheet paper, also identical with that which Magnus used. In the little drawer of the table were a great many letters, some of them addressed in a bold, masculine handwriting, but most of them obviously from girls. Dundee glanced at them enviously. So many people knew her better than he did, but no one could think her dearer, sweeter, prettier . . .

Fighting with the distaste he felt at the thought of rummaging among her intimate belongings, the young detective paused before the dresser. In neat little silver frames there were three enlarged snapshots; one of Norma and Walter sitting very close together in the lawn swing; another of Bert, Cora, and Norma on the front porch; the third a group of small children, with Norma a laughing nucleus for the charming picture. For a moment Bonnie Dundee was tempted to commit a small burglary on his own, but he had promised Mrs. Rhodes to leave everything as he found it.

Sighing, he forced himself to go on with his ugly duty, which he performed as thoroughly as if his heart were in no way involved. But in dresser drawers, book case and clothes closet he found nothing to cast the slightest shadow of suspicion upon the girl he believed in so implicitly.

He had scarcely closed her door after his unchivalrous visit when he heard light, swift steps upon the stairs.

"Oh, hello, Mr. Dundee!" Norma Paige greeted him with a cordial smile. She was swinging her broad-brimmed leghorn hat, and as she spoke she pushed the moist bronze curls from her white forehead. "Did you find a position today?"

"I'm afraid I was too lazy to hunt very hard for a job," he grinned, and hated the necessity for lying to her. "But I've got a little scheme for work I can do in my sounding more bold than he felt: 'Won't you be a Good Samaritan and come down to sit on the porch with me? I believe it's a little cooler now and I'm aching for some cheerful conversation—'"

"I'm awfully sorry," Norma interrupted hastily. "A little stiffly she justified herself: 'I've got to practice on the typewriter till dinner time. My first speed test tomorrow, and I'm simply terrible on typing!'"

"You have your own machine?" he asked, to make conversation, so that he might hold her a little longer.

"Oh, no! I rented it, or rather Mr. Magnus rented it for me, since it's a fearful old rattletrap, but own room. Had a private phone he was getting one for himself. Installed today," he explained, on the spur of the minute, for he knew his telephone would excite comment and speculation. Then, it's good enough for practice work. I can use the machine at school only an hour a day and that's not enough for a slow poke like me."

More disappointed than he would admit to himself, Dundee had no choice but to idle until dinner. With Norma at home there was no chance for more room-searching that day. But scarcely had the 6 o'clock meal started than Bonnie Dundee realized that a detective does not keep union hours—that his day's work was not yet over.

it's the blend— and the fragrant tobacco

Camels have always welcomed comparison with any other cigarette because the true test of value is the pleasure to be found in smoking.

The most important thing for smokers to know is that genuine cigarette quality must begin with the selection of tobaccos. Nothing can take the place of quality tobacco. Thus the extraordinary goodness of Camels begins with the choicest tobaccos grown and these are blended with expert skill to achieve the mildness and surpassing fragrance of this great cigarette. It is this genuineness of quality which smokers appreciate when they have passed the experimental stage and know real smoking pleasure.

Dr. James Snook Is Unconcerned Over Execution

OHIO STATE PENITENTIARY Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 29.—The man perhaps least concerned about the forthcoming execution of Dr. James Howard Snook, former university professor who is condemned to death for the murder of Theora Hix, his co-ed sweetheart, is Snook himself.

Dr. Snook was to have been executed after sundown Friday but the state supreme court has granted him a 21 day stay pending action on an appeal, hearing of which will be held Dec. 10. It was when the district court of appeal affirmed the former rapid fire pistol champion's conviction that his iron nerve gave way.

Income Tax To Allow Cuts On Business Car

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Numerous deductions from the gross income of car owners are allowed for tax purposes by the Bureau of Internal Revenue for automobile ownership and operation when the car is used chiefly for business purposes. "Chiefly" is interpreted by the Bureau of Internal Revenue to mean more than 50 per cent, according to the American Automobile Association.

The deductions allowed were outlined by association officials as follows: First, the car owner may deduct from his gross income all sums paid during the calendar year in the form of registration fees, drivers' licenses, State personal property taxes and municipal taxes. Second, the gasoline tax may be deducted in all cases where it is a "consumers' tax" under the State law, but not where it is specifically enacted as a "distributors' tax." Third, the interest on money borrowed for the purchase of an automobile is deductible, irrespective of whether the car is used for business purposes or for pleasure. If the taxpayer keeps his accounts on a cash basis such interest will be deductible only for the year in which paid. If accounts are kept on an accrued basis, interest may be deducted as it accrues.

Fourth, if a passenger car is used wholly for business purposes, all expenses incident to maintenance, including depreciation at the rate of 20 per cent per annum, may be deducted. Where the car is used "chiefly" or more than 50 per cent for business and incidentally for pleasure, the expense may be deducted on a pro rata basis.

Fifth, loss sustained by reason of damage to a passenger automobile while being used for pleasure is deductible. The loss, however, must be an actual loss to the person claiming the deduction. In other words, if it is compensated for by insurance or otherwise, it is not deductible.

Sixth, the bureau has ruled that where a motorist paid damages for injury to a pedestrian, such amount is deductible, provided at the time the injury occurred the car was being used for business. There has never been a decision however on whether a fine paid by a motorist.

Look Out For Leak In Cooling System

Before putting any kind of antifreeze solution into a cooling system it is a wise precaution to examine all connections carefully and see that there are no leaks. The places to watch are the radiator hoses and connections, the water pump packings and cylinder head bolts. Sometimes the radiator draining petcock leaks slightly. Valuable antifreeze solution is lost through such leaks and if the cooling system is refilled with plain water the strength of the solution is reduced and danger of freezing results. Test the solution regularly with a hydrometer intended for the purpose.

Motors Don't Run Better In Moist Weather Claimed

Many motorists are under the impression that automobile engines function more efficiently in damp weather than on dry days, but this idea is erroneous, it was pointed out by Arthur W. Gardner of the General Motors Corporation research laboratories, in an address delivered at the annual meeting held at Detroit by the Society of Automotive Engineers in January.

WHY? WELL, WHY WESITHE? WHY DON'T YOU PLANK YOUR HOOKS ON HIM?

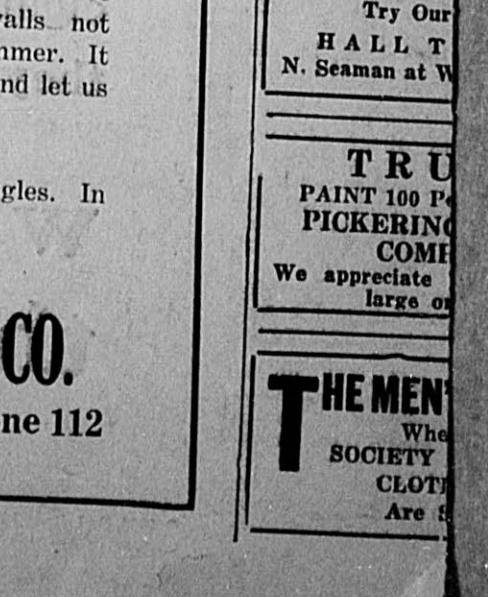

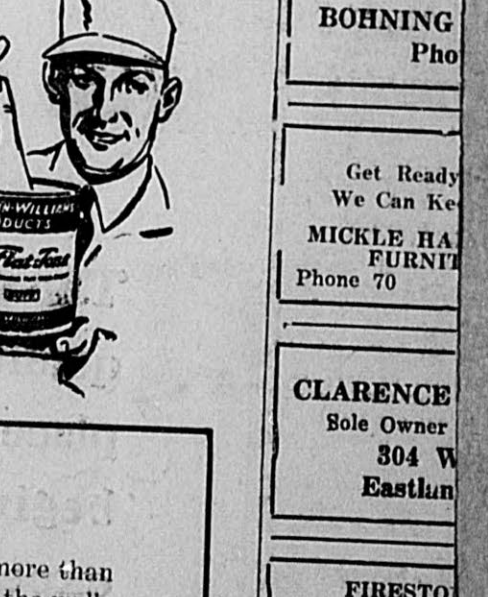

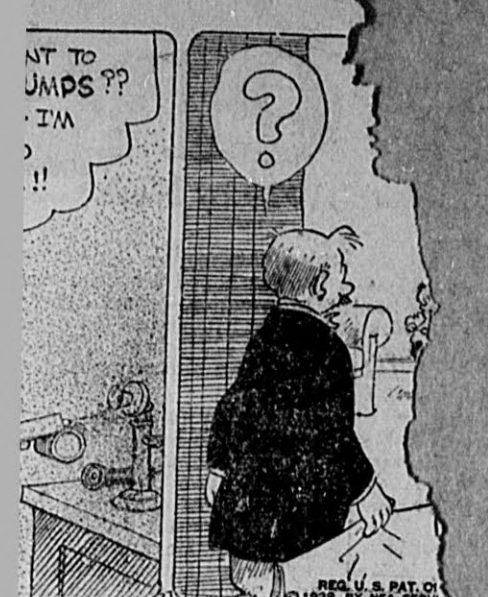

What happens is that under conditions of high humidity the combustion rate is slowed up, resulting in apparently smoother engine operation, which the car owner is likely to mistake for improved power. In spite of this, however,

WHY? BECAUSE I GOTTA GET EVIDENCE, AIN'T I?

A further indication of the influence of humidity on engine operation is the fact that approximately 8 per cent more heat is dissipated through the radiator when the air is dry than when its relative humidity is 100 per cent.

and a list of notes, who readers a program to light in the Methodist Church, in connection with the usual service.
 Mr. Brigham gave a well balanced number of folk songs, being especially pleasing in his more tender selections.
 He has a rich, plaint voice, which he handles very skillfully. He is the nephew of James Horton, of our city.
 Mr. and Mrs. James Horton, and Mr. Brigham were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, with a six o'clock dinner prior to the musicale.
OFFICIAL VISITS:
 The official visits of Mrs. W. Z. Outward, District Deputy Grand Matron for the State of Texas, of the Order of the Eastern Star, are just about filling her weeks. Each one of these trips means an address to be given, as well as notes bearing on the good of the order, to be presented.
 The task is a pleasant one but nevertheless a great responsibility.
 Mrs. Outward visited Cadizo on Tuesday, and Albany on Wednesday of last week.
FUTURE EVENTS:
 The Order of the Rainbow for girls will entertain with a party at the home of Miss Ruth Bagby, Saturday, March second.
 The Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and their Auxiliary the Rebekahs, meet in Cisco, March seventh, for an all day session.
 The Junior Class of Eastland high school, presents a play, "The New Code," on Friday, March 8, in the High school auditorium.
 The Senior Department of the Methodist Sunday school announces a banquet, observing St. Patrick Day, on March 12, at 7 p. m., in the Methodist church. Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins is superintendent of this department.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON CLUB WILL PRESENT SCIENTIFIC PROGRAM:
 Matters in the realms of science and invention will be carried into the "Fine Arts," on the program to be given by the members of the Thursday Afternoon Club this week. The program based on the general subject "Influence of Science and Invention on Fine Arts."
 "The Influence on Music" will be discussed by Mrs. J. M. Ferrell; "Art and Drama" by Mrs. E. Roy Townsend; and on "Literature" by Mrs. Harry Semple.
 A somewhat similar program was recently developed in the meeting of the County Federation meeting, but confined more particularly to the field of the influence of science and invention in the photoplay industry.
 That clubs are awakening to the importance of this line of study is evidenced in their splendidly connected line of work, presented by the Alpha-Delta Phi programs, that, just at this season, tends sternly towards study of these very sciences, applied in Art, and famous literary works.

SALES ON INCREASE, Will Set a Record
 KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 23.—The Nash Motor Company reports an increase in shipments for January over 77 percent greater than for the same month last year.
 C. H. Bliss, Sales Manager of the Company, in commenting on this significant increase, says: "With an auspicious beginning, 1929 starts off toward the fulfillment of our expectations of the greatest year in Nash history. We have just registered better than 77 per cent gain in shipments for January, over the same month last year."
 "For example our retail deliveries at the country's principal distribution points, including New York, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, and other key cities, during the first two weeks of January show a 58 percent increase over the same period a year ago. This came on top of gains amounting to 38 percent and 40 percent respectively, for the final weeks of the past December.
 "Our export shipments for January also shows a very substantial gain, topping those of the same month in 1928 by 41 percent.
 "During the past eight months more than 110,000 of these new '400' series cars have been placed in the hands of owners.
 "These increases in the volume of our business are all the more impressive from the fact that 1928 was a banner year for Nash. And we fully expect 1929 to prove by far the greatest year we have ever had."

Winter Motoring Is More Satisfactory
 The old fashioned man who rolled the family touring car into the barn and up on trestles at the first snow flake now has a son, who buys his car in winter and drives it every day because it is not only economical but practical.
 Breaking in a new car in winter is now easy, quick and satisfactory and the practice of deferring delivery until spring is rapidly disappearing, according to Deed Sanders, local Dodge dealer, in pointing out that the design of the modern car insures dependable year-around performance.
 "Motorists who used to think that snowbound roads took much out of a new car are now finding winter driving offers certain advantages," said Mr. Sanders.
 "There is no attempt to over-speed, and the engine is not subjected to the strain of fast driving before it has had an opportunity to stand high speeds. This results in longer life, smoother operation and lower upkeep.
 "It was only a few years ago that lack of comfort and dependability made it extremely disagreeable to drive over winter roads. Today the enclosed car with balloon tires, long flexible springs and hydraulic four wheel brakes insure easy riding and safety with little or no repair expense. The finest quality of lacquer finish removes the last objection to putting a car through winter traffic conditions.
 "Buyers taking delivery at this time of year have their new car when it is most important to have a dependable engine, perfect brakes, new tires and new battery. The savings of repair expense plus the satisfaction of driving a car that will withstand the severest conditions with the maximum of comfort no longer makes it sary to wait until spring for a car."

"Singing Fool" Al Jolson Triumph
 Enthusiastic throngs are acclaiming Al Jolson's second motion picture, "The Singing Fool," as the greatest of all the vehicles which the world's most famous entertainer has had in his spectacular career. It is showing at the Arcadia Ranger.
 In "The Singing Fool" he plays the part of a waiter in a Broadway cabaret—a song writer who helps the woman he loves to a place as a revue star and marries her only to be left with a small son, when the faithless woman deserts him for a richer man.
 "The Singing Fool" is a heart story providing a thousand opportunities for Jolson to display his genius for moving us all to tears or laughter.
 And he has an all-star supporting cast which includes Betty Bronson, Josephine Dunn, Reed Howes, Ed Martindale, Arthur Housman, David Lee and Robert Emmett O'Connor. Leslie S. Barrows did the story which was scenarized by C. Graham Baker and directed by Lloyd Bacon.
