Eastland Junior Band to Be Organized at Once

CITY SOON TO TAKE OVER THE BAND EXPENSES

Director Campbell Seeking School Credits for Student Musicians. Important Meeting Saturday.

All persons interested in the organization of an Eastland Junior band are asked by Band Director A. J. Campbell to meet with him at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning in the B. Y. P. U. cottage. The parents of boys and girls who may be interested in joining this band are invited to attend.

An organization will be formed, the instrumentation worked out, so far as possible, and other preliminary matters given attention. There will be no charge for membership.

Vacancies are created in the school band as the musicians graduate and leave, so the junior band will serve the purpose of training musicians for the senior band. Former members of the senior band who for various reasons were compelled to drop out will be welcomed into this junior band. There are almost enough of these to form another band and they will give a substantial support to the new organization.

The City of Eastland will take over the financing of the band on January 1, 1929, paying the salary of the band director and incidental expenses, probably providing a hall for band rehearsals and a place where the instruments and music may be kept safely and giving its moral support besides. This is expected to prove of much help to the band. The musicians will, as now, provide their own instruments except in the case of the big drums, the big bass horns and such instruments that have no value for solo work and usually are the property of a band organization rather than of an individual.

It is the hope of Band Director Campbell to obtain credits on their school standing for all members of the senior and junior band who give study to their band work. Credits are given to the band musicians in most of the Texas schools, following the practice of leading schools in other states, and the Eastland school board has for some time been considering the proposal of Mr. Campbell to give credits here. It may be done this year.

The officer's wife, who had been suffering from heart disease, was thrown from her bed by the explosion and taken to a hospital in a critical condition. A seven-month-old grandchild was cut by flying glass.

Captain Garrick, a few hours before, had led a raid on the Minerva Club and arrested 4 men. He believed the booming was the result of the raid.

Four Men Trapped By Fire and Water Are Believed Dead

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—Four men were missing early today and three others were in hospitals after a fire on pier No. 45, San Francisco's $2,000,000 harbor development project.

Damage was estimated at more than $100,000. The fire started when a gasoline torch ignited a cauldron of molten tar, shooting the flaming tar in all directions. It spread on the water making the surface of the bay a lake of liquid fire.

Four workmen on a barge beneath the pier when the explosion occurred were believed to have perished, as there was little chance for them to swim for their lives in the burning tar on the water.

RACING SHIPS OF AIR TO FLY OVER EASTLAND

Nearly Two-Score Airplanes Will Be Passing By Between Six and Seven O'clock Saturday.

Pilots and planes in the New York to Los Angeles air-race, flying across the country against time, but parking each night on the same landing field, arrived in Fort Worth Friday morning and are due to leave there as soon after 5 o'clock Saturday morning as visibility permits.

The planes will hop to Abilene, the next watering place, and are expected to follow the line of the Texas & Pacific railroad. This should bring the first of the airships over Eastland before six o'clock Saturday and for thirty minutes or so after the first appears the other will be following in rapid order.

RICHARDS AIRPORT, Kansas City, Sept. 7.—The third day of the trans-continental class A airplane race got underway promptly at 7 a. m. today, when Earl Rowland of Wichita, Kans., took off for his home town. Rowland, who is leading the 37 flyers who started from New York, 27 of whom stayed here last night, is flying a Cessna monoplane.

Two Mascots With Byrd Party

The only dog in the world to have visited both North and South Polar regions will be "Igloo," pictured here with George Tennant, chief cook on the City of New York, base ship of the Byrd Antarctic expedition. Commander Byrd took him on his North Pole trip and now "Igloo" will be one of the two mascots with the Antarctic party. The other pet is the cat you see here. His watertight ancestry is shrouded in mystery; even his name is a detail that remains to be determined by a vote of the crew. But he's a full-fledged member of the party, for he has lived on the boat for several months.

"Break Down Resistance Through Advertising" Says Ben R. Vardaman In Parting Message To Eastland Folks

Ben R. Vardaman, author, editor, lecturer, left Eastland Wednesday for Frederick, Oklahoma, after conducting a three-day Greater Business and Community Institute here that has already developed a keener interest in business and community problems and is expected to raise the standard of business efficiency and increase the spirit of co-operation and community service. He will conduct a similar institute in Frederick. His work everywhere appears to have been fruitful.

"Break down resistance through advertising," said Mr. Vardaman in a conversation with some business men here.

"Every business and very business man is confronted by resistance in building and extending business. There are, indeed, many kinds of resistance. There is, for instance, the resistance of 'self-satisfaction.' Too often the merchant, or the merchants as a whole of a town become satisfied and slacken in their efforts to extend their business.

"Invariably when this happens things stop. The world is going so fast, there is so much keen competition that when a town stops advertising, or a merchant stops telling people about his business, that town or that merchant is actually going back.

"Sometimes we meet business men who seem to have the feeling that business is something that simply settles down on a place without any effort or responsibility upon the part of the business man. But it is not so—business today is going where it is invited. Generally speaking the business invitation is nothing more nor less than advertising.

"But occasionally a merchant or other business man is met who throws up his hands and exclaims, 'but advertising is too expensive, I can't afford it.' But my answer to such a statement is that advertising is not expensive—real productive advertising does not cost anybody anything.

"A radical statement I know—but it is absolutely true. There is a great deal of money wasted in so-called advertising, it is true. But real productive advertising is not an expense.

"For instance—step up to the soda fountain and ask for a glass of Coca-Cola, and you will be served and charged 5c, mark you, millions upon millions of dollars have been spent in telling you about that glass of Coca-Cola—until it is sold for five cents, the same price it has always been sold for. Who, then has paid for all that advertising?

"Again, note what has happened with cameras. In 1890, Mr.

Two Mexicans Go To Electric Chair To Expiate Crime

HUNTSVILLE, Sept. 7.—Two Mexicans, Clemente Rodriguez and Esquivel Servin, early today were executed in the electric chair at the state prison here for criminally assaulting a San Antonio high school girl. Servin's plans to cheat the chair were thwarted when guards, searching his cell just before the condemned man was prepared for the chair, found a dagger there. It was crudely fashioned out of a spoon. Warden Harrell said, but capable of inflicting a mortal wound.

Rodriguez went to the chair first, smoking a cigar during the death walk. He was pronounced dead at 12:26 a. m. Servin was pronounced dead at 12:40. He protested his innocence to the last.

CHESS PLAYERS MAY FORM CLUB TO PLAY GAME

Called To Meet In Connelley Hotel Saturday Evening Organize and Plan Campaigns.

All chess players or persons interested in the playing of chess are invited by Ted Ferguson, J. M. Perkins, O. C. Funderburk, Walker Clark and other chess champions of Eastland to meet in room No. 302 of the Connelley Hotel at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening for the purpose of organizing an Eastland County Chess Club.

Those who play the game appear to be devoted to it. Without making any visible athletic demonstration, they march, ride, jump, advance and retreat, capture, surrender and, so far as possible, emulate Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Wellington, Washington, Lee, Grant, Foch, Pershing and other great generals in planning campaigns and leading their forces to victory, sometimes bloody and occasionally almost bloodless. It is said to be a great game.

It may be that some of those who would join the club may wish to play awhile Saturday evening just to get acquainted with each other. So all who would do so are asked to bring along their boards and chessmen, and perhaps a few matches may be arranged after the club has been formed, officers elected and installed, constitution and bylaws promised and other incidentals provided.

WORK ON ROAD TO CARBON HAS ATTENTION NOW

It Is Being Widened and Will Have New Surface, Then On To Gorman and County Line.

Rapid headway is being made in the further improvement of the north and south highway through Eastland county, extending between the Comanche county line at a point near Gorman, through Eastland and to the Stephens county line.

This highway was widened to a 50-foot right-of-way recently at the instance of the State Highway Commission, which is now directing the work of widening the paving and resurfacing the roadway.

For several months the work of widening the right-of-way has been going on. Committees of local citizens, headed by County Judge Ed S. Pritchard, obtained the land concessions which gave the road an additional width, after which the fences on both sides of the highway were moved back to the new lines and, in many instances, better fences were built. Pipes and telephone posts were moved back. The task was a big one and has taken time and money, but it has been well done.

Now the State Highway Commission is keeping its part of the agreement. Graders have been at work about two weeks grading the road in proper shape. Graders and chutes have been placed along the road between Eastland and Carbon, and soon the tarvia workers will be binding it into place. As soon as the portion of the road to Carbon has been paved, the work will be carried forward to Gorman and to the county line.

Work is proceeding also on the highway between Cisco and Rising Star and has also been begun along the Bankhead highway.

Miss Earhart made a forced landing here last night while enroute to El Paso. The night previous she got off her course and landed at Lovington, N. M. Repairs were expected to be made to the plane today in order that the solo flight can be resumed tomorrow.

Miss Earhart seemed content with the delay in this small West Texas village. She donned overalls and aided a mechanic in locating the trouble.

"Since I haven't any particular destination for my trip I might as well enjoy myself here," she said.

ANOTHER FARM RELIEF IDEA.

It may surprise some "city folks" to hear that many who go into the country for a day's outing don't mind if they help themselves to some of the produce of the farmer's field while the farmer isn't looking.

But it is true, and farmers everywhere within easy automobile distance of big cities would like to get hold of the plunderers.

The county farm bureau federation of Suffolk county, New York, is going to offer the city dweller who steals from the farmers' fields an opportunity to explain the social theory under which he conducts his pillage.

The federation is spreading a net for such marauders and they will receive swift, sure justice if caught at the depredations. The example of Suffolk county might well be followed by other counties.

Suppose a farmer should drive into New York city or Chicago and grab from the shop counters such articles as won his fancy. What chance would he have against "city law?" There is a law that holds good in the country, too, and the organized farm bodies ought to see that it is enforced.

A STRAW VOTE.

Secretary Hoover leads Governor Smith as the American farmer's choice for the presidency," declares a well known farm periodical which is conducting a straw vote among its readers.

However an analysis of the figures shows the New York governor is leading in Wisconsin, 601 to 541, in Nebraska, 614 to 340, and in Minnesota, 1,089 to 592.

And consider Illinois where the vote is 293 to 180 with Smith leading and behold rock-ribbed republican Iowa where 791 farmers voted for Smith to 299 for Hoover.

If Smith can out-run Hoover in the farming communities of Illinois, he will carry that state, for Chicago will go for him, observers declare.

In Ohio, which is claimed by the republicans by a large majority, Hoover's margin among the farmers is only 1,292 to 1,073 and in Missouri, where the republican hoped for the farmers to offset his loss, Hoover has a scant lead of 10 to 210.

Probably the straw vote is worth very little consideration. Few straw votes mean a great deal. It depends on who is conducting them. But inasmuch as this particular straw vote shows the democratic nominee with so much strength—and because the farm paper is printed in Philadelphia, which could hardly be considered a democratic city—more attention than usual will be given to this vote by the democracy.

Fort Bend County Elects Four Women to High Offices

RICHMOND, Sept. 6.—Cuspudors in many offices of the Fort Bend county courthouse have been gently laid to rest.

The county has accepted feminine rule with such acclaim that it is expected the next sheriff will be a woman, if the voters can find a woman who will carry a gun.

EASTLAND REBEKAHS WIN DRILL BANNER The I. O. O. F. and Rebekah Association, held in Ranger all day yesterday, had a large attendance, to whom a noon luncheon and an evening play dinner were served by the host and hostesses.

The Eastland Rebekah drill team went in a body to the association. They were hospitably entertained before entering upon the work of the evening.

The banner was won by forfeit by the Eastland Rebekah lodge. There were no contestants. The drill was perfectly performed and elicited much applause. The banner is the property of the association, which has the ruling of its disposal. The Eastland Rebekah lodge knew the old or former ruling, that to be won a third time put the banner in permanent possession of the winning team.

However, this was corrected at the association, prior to the drill. The winning Rebekah team retains the banner only for the year of victory.

The Eastland Rebekahs were complimented by being chosen to put on the ceremony of initiation for Miss Lillian Burkham, the candidate initiated into Ranger Lodge No. 140.

Miss Opal Hunt, Eastland Rebekah Lodge noble grand, stated there was great enthusiasm among the I. O. O. F. and Rebekahs shown for the work, and that the associational meeting had been instructive and enjoyable.

That means that St. Rita's school is on a State equality with the public schools. This applies to the primary and high school classes as well as the teaching Sisters are certified state teachers.

Some of last year's Sisters have returned after a six weeks' special course during the summer and some new Sisters are here who have left a stamp of moral and intellectual efficiency in the parochial schools where they have been for the last decade. It is the fond wish of the teachers that all the children will be present on Tuesday at 8 a. m.

The Mexican school will open also on Tuesday in a school that has been cleaned, painted and varnished, with the additional charm of a competent State teacher fully versed in the English and Mexican languages.

About 150 children are expected to be enrolled this year in the two parochial schools which means the saving of thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of Ranger, Eastland and Texas.

Life Prisoner At End Fifty-Second Year In Prison BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 7.—Jessie Pomeroy, who probably has spent more time behind the bars than any man in America, today ended his fifty-second year of imprisonment. The famous lifer who entered prison as a 15-year-old boy, is a bent and withered old man, but strangely enough a man who has retained his sense of humor and his optimistic views on a life of freedom which he can never enjoy.

Prison officials said today that Pomeroy was in his usual good health. Thirty-eight of his prison years were passed in solitary confinement, but of late he has been allowed the privileges of fellow prisoners.

After Pomeroy had confessed to the murder of two children he was sentenced to be hung. Because of his youth, however, the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. The 12 men who comprised the Pomeroy jury are dead.

FLAPPERS WARNED TO BEWARE OF TUBERCULOSIS By United Press. LOS ANGELES.—Scanty attire is hindering the suppression of tuberculosis among the flappers of today, according to Mrs. Marion Simonson of the health education department of the University of California.

"Tuberculosis is not decreasing as rapidly among young women as it is among young men," Mrs. Simonson says. "This is due to flimsy dresses, bad posture, desire for slender figure and the too gray life of the high school girl. If the young flapper wants to flap she should come to California, she says, because flimsy dresses do not seem to hurt the California girls. It is only in the more severe climates where it is decidedly dangerous.

LOVE FOR TWO

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Lou Ward marries Rod who had previously been married to Lila Marsh. Lila makes a miserable life for the bride until she meets a rich Mr. Loree and marries him. Then she asks Bertie Lou to forgive the past.

Trying to keep up socially with wealthy friends plunges the Brysons in debt and Rod becomes depressed. Lila seizes her chance to persuade him to accept a higher salary from Loree. Shortly after she asks Rod to put some jewels in the safe during her husband's absence. They disappear and Rod wants to notify the police, but Lila insists that they keep the matter secret, pointing out that suspicion against him might spoil his career. Bertie Lou finds out that he has been seeing Lila secretly and is heartbroken.

She is called home to her sick mother and catches a train without seeing Rod. The separation leads to Lila plotting a case of illness between them. Each expects the other to make advances and explanations.

Rod goes to the Lorees without Bertie Lou goes out with Marco Palmer to retaliate. One evening Rod finds her packing a suitcase for a week-end at the Palmer estate, and admits to himself that their love is dead and that he is infatuated with Lila. He returns to Lila plotting a case of illness between them. Each expects the other to make advances and explanations.

head dropped in his hands and swaying to and fro to beat the devil. "I'll tell 'em, I'll be glad to drop him—and how," he told himself.

Rod did not speak to him during the drive back to town. Time seemed to mean nothing to him now. The driver asked him, when they reached the Queensboro Bridge, where he should take him and Rod gave him the address of his apartment.

When they got there he stumbled out of the cab and handed the driver a bill which the latter stuffed into his pocket with a surprised grin after one glance at it. Rod did not ask for his change.

He climbed the stairs to his floor like an old man. Bitter, disillusioned, sick. An epithet had attached itself to Bertie Lou in his mind and he repeated it over and over with maddening monotony. "Money-hungry cheater."

Money, money, money. Lila wanted it. Bertie Lou wanted it. Lila wanted love, too. Rod wondered, with a stab of pain through his dulling misery, if Bertie Lou wanted it too—if she loved this Marco Palmer.

"But she didn't have to do it that way," Rod muttered aloud. "She could have had her freedom—to marry young Palmer—Oh, God, Bertie Lou."

The cruelest thing that ever happened to Rod happened then. He knew that he loved Bertie Lou. He knew why Lila and her treachery to Cy, her trickery, and her profane offer of love had slipped out of his mind. Bertie Lou was all that mattered to him, ever. He forgot the epithet in thinking of her as Marco's wife.

How clear the glass in retrospect. What is easier than looking backward? It is like solving other people's troubles, to see where you made yesterday's mistakes.

Rod knew what had happened to him—knew that Lila had fascinated him. The old appeal, that had lured him to her before he learned to care for Bertie Lou, had never, perhaps, burned itself completely out. He had hated her, as she said, because she was selfish and scheming.

He faced it frankly, even admitting to himself that Lila's determined pursuit of him might have flattered him. No, that was not so; he honestly had not known that she was deliberately working for a renewal of their love for each other. He had been warmed by their friendship and understanding. If he had come to believe himself in love with her again it was because she had reversed his opinion of her and compelled him to admire and respect her as a truly noble creature.

His desire for her, that now rankled in his memory like a poisonous weed, had not been noble. But at least, it could be said for him that he had held it in check, never so much as caressing her slim fingers. Rod did not feel ashamed or humiliated that he had wanted to take her in his arms and kiss her.

He took upon himself the full blame for having killed Bertie Lou's love. He saw it now—she must have suffered over Lila. Who could tell to what lengths Lila had gone to break Bertie Lou's faith in him? He'd never sought to find out why she had gone back to Wayville without a word to him.

He found it easy now to understand why he hadn't wanted an explanation upon her return. He did not spare himself the painful remorse it cost him to admit that it was because of Lila that he hadn't wanted to take up their life where she had broken it off when she left. Lila, Lila again, with her subtle insinuations against Bertie Lou, her play on his natural resentment.

Rod sank upon the davenport and buried his face in his hands as he had in the taxi, and the prayer that comes at least once to almost every human being's lips burst from his in an agony of repentance. "Oh God, if I only had it to do over again!"

How tenderly, how dearly, he would cherish Bertie Lou. For a moment he forgot that that she had been false beyond the breaking of her vows—that she had broken their pact, her promise to give him warning, to tell him when another man had entered her life.

Rod groaned over it, when it did come back to him, as was inevitable. It was too late now to make amends to her, to pray for forgiveness. He could pray only that his mad obsession, his cursed infatuation for Lila, had not driven Bertie Lou beyond the gates of happiness. There must be a chance for her.

There was nothing left for him to do but make it as easy as possible for her. Clear out, that was it.

And even as the thought came to him Bertie Lou was on her way home, wondering if he would still be there or out to breakfast when she got in. If only she could have breakfast with him—shut your eyes, Bertie Lou and think of something else!

She was dreadfully hungry. The tray was untouched in her room at the Palmers, she supposed. Unless Marco had ordered it removed when he discovered that she'd left. It was likely. He'd gone on to his own quarters to dress on their way back from the swimming pool. They'd gone for an early dip when the party finally broke up at dawn. Everyone else had gone to bed.

The water was cold but fresh. Marco had entered the pool filled that night, though it had been emptied for what his parents believed would be the last time for the season just before they went abroad.

Bertie Lou had enjoyed the few minutes they spent in it after a dive from the springboard. Marco had spoiled the appetite it gave her for breakfast, though, when he suddenly took her in his arms and tried to kiss her.

Bertie Lou was angry. She'd told him she didn't like that sort of thing. But Marco had only laughed at her. This was in her room, after they'd got out of their bathing suits in the shower room downstairs and come up in dressing gowns. Marco had asked for a cigaret and Bertie Lou had let him come in for one.

When he was gone, promising to dress and return to breakfast with her, Bertie Lou hastily packed her suitcase and hurried down to the garage and bribed the chauffeur, who had been kept up for all night duty in case a guest decided to leave, to take her to the railroad station.

She was not far behind Rod, but far enough to make a great difference in their lives. (To be continued)

Thinks Oil Should Bear the Burden of Building Highways

DALLAS, Sept. 7.—"It is my suggestion that the legislature at its next session levy adequate taxes on gasoline and oil to effect an immediate expansion of road building and pay the interest and sinking fund on outstanding county and district bonds covering state highways," Clarence Ousley said today in a statement to the United Press upon the road building situation in Texas.

Mr. Ousley, who has been commissioned by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce to make a study of the situation, pointed out that that organization has not expressed itself for or against a state road bond issue. He said:

"The East Texas Chamber of Commerce has not as a body or through its officers expressed itself for or against a state road bond issue of $100,000,000 or any other amount. The annual meeting at Greenville on May 8 adopted resolutions declaring the only proper source of income for the construction of state highways to be charged upon the traffic—that is, registration fees and taxes on gasoline and oil used in motor vehicles. This is the East Texas Chamber's policy. The legislative and fiscal details of executing the policy have not been considered by the chamber as a body."

"There are various proposals for bond issues. The most conspicuous is that made by Mr. R. S. Sterling of the highway commission for the issuance of state bonds in the amount of $300,000,000 to $350,000,000 and paying the interest and sinking fund from taxes on gasoline graduated over a period of 10 years from one cent to 2 3/4 cents a gallon. The East Texas Chamber does not oppose that plan, nor does it endorse the plan. It is not now concerned about plans but solely about the policy of having those who use the roads pay for them, relieving property of highway taxation and reimbursing counties and districts for the state highways they have built."

"It is my personal opinion that the people will not vote approval of a state bond issue in the amount proposed by Mr. Sterling. They might vote approval of a considerably smaller sum. Hence it is my suggestion that the legislature at its next session levy adequate taxes on gasoline and oil to effect an immediate expansion of road building and pay the interest and sinking fund on outstanding county and district bonds covering state highways."

"We have been paying a gas tax of three cents without any sense of burden. We could pay four cents without reducing our travel or suffering any great burden. Upon the reports of consumption by the highway commission and its estimate of normal increase, I find that such a tax would yield for new construction, after maintenance and payment of interest and sinking fund on county and district bonds, the sum of $20,069,950 in 1929, $24,101,992 in 1930, $28,667,291 in 1931, $33,842,385 in 1932 and $39,718,742 in 1933 without issuing bonds.

"If the legislature will inaugurate such a policy and the people approve a bond issue, the tax on gasoline could be reduced. If the people reject the bond issue, the gasoline tax will build and maintain the roads. In either event we will make more progress in the next five years than we have made in all time heretofore."

Do You Know

John Temple Graves II, editor of the Jacksonville (Florida) Journal, says:

That living wholesale at wholesale speed and in wholesale numbers, may add quantity to life but it takes all quality out of it. The beauty of nature, of friendship, of sport, of dreams, of character, is lost to those who live by the clock and in the crowd. Much hurrying and herding may bring success but they destroy the fruits of success. They make millionaires at forty who can think of nothing to do with their millions but seek more millions. They make worldly monarchs who shudder at the thought of leisure or solitude. The time that is saved is used only in saving more time. The contacts that are made are used only in making more contacts until all capacity for individual living is destroyed.

There are times when every man needs to leave his clock or his crowd and to consult his immortal soul. When he needs to get out of his automobile and walk; leave his bridge game and read books or listen to music; to drop his golf clubs and enjoy the green of the grass or the patterns of the sky; to forget the glory of getting things done and contemplate the glory of God; to forego the pleasure of enjoying things with friends in favor of the pleasure of enjoying friends for their own sakes, for their personalities, their conversations, their thoughts; to stand on a mountain top or sit at a seaside long enough to lose all thought that it is wasting time in doing it. Times when he needs to pluck from life the leisure to fall in love with something or grow worshipful of something.

CHAPTER XXXV

For half a minute Rod failed to grasp the significance of what he heard, or rather the import of hearing Bertie Lou's voice at that moment and in that room. He stood there he was, hesitating about what to do upon her while the door was open.

As he stood, before he had come to a decision about what he should do, it came to him with a mattering impact that Lila was right. Bertie Lou had not kept her agreement. She had broken her word, her vows, and destroyed the last remaining faith in her.

Rod stood there, helpless, for a lack period that never could be measured, while the degrading conviction of Bertie Lou's guilt bobbed itself deep in his soul. It was like soiled fingers tearing at the heart. A bitter nausea swept over him and he leaned weakly against a wall for support.

The mind came out of Bertie Lou's room and turned in the other direction without seeing Rod. It is likely that even if she had seen him she'd have mistaken him for one of the party. He looked precisely like a drunken man at that moment. His head hung on one side and his chin upon his chest. His eyes had seen Rod and he no longer to trust even himself. No one was decent, no one was right. He might make a fool of himself. And Bertie Lou might let him do it, might lie, they might begin living a hell of married life that was without respect, without faith, utterly unallowable.

What was there to say? He could not bear to see her, perhaps. He fell down and begged her to deny that his eyes had seen Rod and he no longer to trust even himself. No one was decent, no one was right. He might make a fool of himself. And Bertie Lou might let him do it, might lie, they might begin living a hell of married life that was without respect, without faith, utterly unallowable.

Fear drove Rod out of the house. Fear of the depths of degradation to which he might sink, save himself from accepting the horrible truth of Bertie Lou's faithfulness. The temptation to plead for a lie from her, a lie that would admit him to what he could always suspect was a fool's paradise, was too great to be resisted.

Why he suffered so terribly over what he had discovered Rod did not ask himself. Perhaps he thought, vaguely, that it was the sin one feels upon learning of the falseness of the world. Two women. One whom he had respected as a person who would keep a fair bargain had proved herself a cheat; and one he had loved and believed a really noble character had shown herself to be a venoress.

Rod climbed into his taxicab and was driven back to the city in a mood as hopeless as any the human mind can encounter. Everything was gone. His position, his friendship with Cyrus Loree—though he hardly realized this at the time. It was the devastating destruction of his faith in the two women who had meant all of love and honor to him that reduced him to a feeling of unspeakable desecration and loathing for them. Strangely, it was Bertie Lou who drew his blackest thoughts. He could have killed her, if he'd had his hands on her throat then. He told himself. Her smooth white throat, her damnably kissable lips. The memory of it was too much for him.

The driver turned. He thought he'd heard a groan. Well, it might be. Queer fish, this fare Reeling out of a house and an who'd seen into hell, he sat back there, his Anderson, S. C.—"I suffered a long long time, before I tried Cardui, and my only regret is that I did not know about it sooner," says Mrs. Lillie Pruitt, 130 "K" Street, this city.

"I was badly run down in health. My nerves went to pieces, and I had to go to bed. I was not able to do my house work for many months. I got so bad off, I could not bear to have anybody walk across the floor of my room. The least little thing upset me. Sometimes I became hysterical. I had bad pains in my back and sides, and my head and limbs would take spells of aching, which almost set me wild.

"One day I was reading and I saw where a woman, who had a trouble like my own, had been relieved by Cardui. I decided at once to try it; so I began on a course of the 'Home Treatment'.

"It began to help me from the very first. I took Cardui regularly, for several months, and my improvement was so remarkable, that my family and friends were delighted. Cardui has no equal, in my opinion. I gladly recommend it to others."

Deauville Bathers Are in Race for the Least Attire

By J. MacGREGOR-MORRISON, United Press Staff Correspondent.
DEAUVILLE, Sept. 5.—The annual anatomical congress is in full swing. Never before has there been such an attendance, according to the hotel proprietors and the beach-tenders, and never before has there been such a display of nature.

A few years ago the sight of a comely woman in a tight-fitting bathing suit would have caused a panic. Today the once-traditional bathing robes and pair of flapping "bloomers" would have the same effect, for Deauville has apparently decided to out-Lido Lido and when it comes to nudity the Italian primitives—and the phrase is used advisedly—"have nothing on" the popular French resort.

It is even reported that the police were asked to intervene during the first of the summer "hot spells." It was a group of middle-aged tourists who caused the trouble. Not accustomed to Deauville's ways and forms, they protested violently when the bathers were seen taking off their clothes behind scanty umbrellas on the beach sands instead of using the more cramped quarters of the bathing houses.

Some Fleed in Horror.
The average visitor took the incident as nothing extraordinary, but a few decided that Deauville was a place of vicious attraction and left the following day, accompanied by their flapper daughters. They informed the police that they would "write to the papers about it."

Had they stayed a little longer, they would have witnessed even more astonishing evidence of Deauville's transition since the war. It is not uncommon for the bathers to take off their costumes as soon as they are in three feet of water—the beach authorities insist upon this depth of propriety—and there have even been cases of the discarded garments being lost and couples spending hours awaiting sundown so that they could enter their hotels without causing a scandal.

With the first hot spell came an unusual number of novel beach amusements. The latest, said to have been brought from Poland, or perhaps it was Hollywood, by Pola Negri, consists of the "human pyramid."

Cocktails a la Neptune.
Someone is always picked for the innocent victim, and placed at the bottom of the pile, with a bevy of the best-looking girls of the resort ready to mount upon his back. The scene takes place in about a foot of water, and when the pyramid is high enough, someone pulls the victim's feet from under him and—Deauville roars with laughter at its latest splash!

It took the "swimming cocktail," however, to provide the climax of the Deauville season. Little raft-like trays carried Bronxes, Manhattans and Martinis to the bathers. At each corner of the tray was placed a toy balloon, which provided amazing stability, and the trays were pulled across the ripples by cords tossed out by the waiters. The innovation didn't last long, the waiters complaining of loss of time and a tendency on the part of the bathers to forget their tips upon reaching the shore.

Deauville styles are any criticism as to the trend of French art, we are to have a period of cubism. Instead of cube-like designs, the majority of the feminine bathing garb bore stripes of dazzling color and obliqueness. Many were fitted with detachable capes, used only when promenading on the sands. The capes, however, were more or less a feminine bluff, as they were so designed as to leave just as much of the wearer's charms visible as did the abbreviated costume.

Sports Matter

By GEORGE KIRKSEY, United Press Sports Writer
Knute Hansen, Tex Rickard's choice to succeed to the heavyweight title vacated by Gene Tunney, has done most of his fighting outside of the prize ring.

Although Hansen began his professional career in 1925, he has engaged in less than 25 professional bouts in six years. Managerial troubles early caused Hansen to leave the prize ring in disgust and seek adventure in other worlds.

As a kid, he learned to use his fists in neighborhood battles in Racine, Wis. One day he and his brother fought two hours over a nickel to see a movie, and at the end both of them were blinded and they couldn't go to the show.

A quartet of Wall Street men acquired Hansen's contract shortly after he entered the professional ring. He boxed in several bouts around Racine and Milwaukee and then Tom McArdle, Milwaukee promoter, sent him east. The Wall Street syndicate appointed Joe Woodman and George Lawrence to handle Hansen. They signed him to a long-term contract, and under the terms he was guaranteed $75 a week to live in Fought in Orient

For an obscure youth, Hansen did some pretty good fighting, but he never received any money from his managers for his bouts. Disturbed over the turn of affairs, Hansen bolted and headed for the Pacific coast.

He worked his way across the continent on a cattle train, sleeping in the same cars with the steers. In Oregon he met an old friend who was captain of a freighter. When the boat sailed for China Hansen was aboard.

College Athletes Do Not Lower the Academic Standard

RIPON, Wis.—College athletes do not lower the academic standing of a college student body, according to Dr. S. R. Ellis, professor of education at Ripon college. Professor Ellis soon will submit a detailed report, covering a study and examination of class marks of Ripon college students over a period of four years from 1922 to 1926, to the Carnegie Foundation, as refutation of findings made at other institutions to effect that athletes undermine academic standings.

Estimating on the basis of 12 as a perfect standing, Dr. Ellis found that an average of 85 non-athletes per year received a standing of 6, while 63 athletes received 5.5. "This difference in average scholarship is rather too small to be significant," his report declares.

PRICE EXCUSE IS A NEW ONE

EL PASO, Sept. 6.—El Pasoans were perplexed when local milkmen attributed the rise in the retail price of milk to the increased cotton acreage near Elephant Butte dam.

Farmers near the dam have turned from alfalfa to cotton, which has caused the dairymen to be forced to import alfalfa for cattle feeding. This increased production costs, they said, and necessitated a one-cent a quart increase.

Safety Will Have Part in the Great Tulsa Exposition

TULSA, Okla.—The national safety council, the safety division of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association, the United States Bureau of Mines, and officials of the International Petroleum Exposition, will combine to "sell" safety to executives and employees of the petroleum industry when the exposition is held here, Oct. 20-29.

During the exposition the U. S. Bureau of Mines will demonstrate the bureau's safety cars, gas masks, asbestos suits and other features for eliminating hazards from the industry.

The Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association, safety division, will have charge of safety tests, demonstrations and safety exhibits.

The National Safety Council will cooperate with the organizations mentioned in the demonstrations and in the banquet at which medals will be presented to safety teams which have shown greatest proficiency.

The banquet will be held in the Crystal Ball Room at the Mayo hotel on the night of October 22. Besides the presentations to the teams, awards will be made near the close of the exposition, Oct. 29, to the persons who have made the longest journey or voyage to attend the exposition, by train, automobile or airplane, three prizes. A loving cup will be presented to the petroleum company having the largest presentation at the exposition where the home office is not in Tulsa; another cup will be awarded for representation from Tulsa offices.

Don Wallace, chairman of the exposition safety and demonstrations committee, and his committee will arrange and supervise the entire safety program during the exposition.

Exhibitors in the scientific and technical building will lay particular stress upon guards to the safety of industry employees. A moving picture of first aid treatment and other safety features will be shown in this building.

Not speed, but efficiency and knowledge, will be considered in grading the safety teams in their demonstrations.

To avoid the aspect of a purely laborious routine in the demonstrations, lighter elements will be introduced. Office workers and field employees will be given an opportunity to demonstrate their proficiency in the new complicated science of horse shoe pitching, in the tug-of-war and other athletic pursuits; in the operation of adding and calculating machines, typewriters and other office equipment, and in stenography.

It is expected that keepers in the various exhibit booths will point out particularly the safety features of their wares. Petroleum industry equipment which presents a menace to the safety of the operators will receive no commendation of the exposition authorities and the safety associations.

MULE MARKET UNSTEADY.

WARRENSBURG, Mo. — As goes the cotton market so goes the mule market, in the opinion of Walter Jones, local mule dealer.

Now, said Jones, the mule market is unsteady because the outcome of the cotton crop and the price for cotton are unsteady.

"Rusty" Hill Will Again Be In The Trinity Backfield

WAXAHACHIE, Sept. 6.—Five regulars of the 1927 Trinity university football team will be missing when the candidates report to camp on Sept. 10, and Coaches Barry Holton and Leland J. Wilkins must develop men to fill these places within less than two weeks as the Tigers play the Texas Aggies at College Station, Sept. 22.

Edward Burleson of Waxahachie, third-string center for the last two years, is expected to fill the pivot position left vacant by the graduation of Ben Moore and Emory Thompson. He will be aided by Dudley Keiningham and William McCluney.

Herman Kozelski will return and play right guard again and he is due to be one of the best in the state this season. Several reserves will stage a merry battle for the other guard left vacant by the graduation of O. D. Roland, four-year veteran, with Ward Crow being the most likely candidate. Horace Duncan, Sam Sawyer, Allen McCypney and George Rodieck are the other men who will bid for the guard position.

At the tackle positions, Coaches Holton and Wilkins will have Capt. J. Houston Allen and Ralph Holenshead, the two regulars of the 1927 team. Louis Cochran, all-Texas conference tackle of 1926, who was out of school last year, will return, which will start a three-cornered fight for the tackle positions. Dickie Bennard, Campbell Pugh and Archie Robinson are reserves from last year's team.

Four lettermen will be available for the end positions. They are Byron Rhome, Patte Allen, both of whom will be playing their fourth year on Tiger teams. Tracey Varnell and Clyde Martin. Knox Minns and Huc Montgomery are two capable reserves. Pre-season reports indicate that from the ranks of the newcomers who will enter Trinity for their first year, this fall, a host of high school ends will be available. This will make the wing positions probably the hardest fought for of the team.

"Rusty" Hill, one of the most powerful backs ever to play in Texas, and George Flourney, former Waco High star, are the only two lettermen who will return for the backfield, but the Tiger mentors have a number of reserves who are due to make good this fall. Connor Robinson, a reserve for two years, and Clyde Verheyden, former star of Waxahachie High, will play quarterback. Hill will be placed at one half and Flourney will be at the other half or possibly at full. Other backfield candidates with college experience are Jack Campbell, Douglas Jackson, Carroll Gregg, D. E. Kinnamon and Jack Ingle.

With these veterans and a number of high school stars, as well as a few coming from the junior colleges, the Trinity coaches should be able to develop a winning team. They should have little difficulty in moulding a line that will rank with the best in the Texas conference. The backfield, which will be built around the giant Hill, should compare favorably with Trinity teams of the past that have gone through to a conference championship.

The Tigers will face one of the hardest schedules ever tackled by a Texas conference team as four Southwestern conference eleven will be played and the five other members of the Texas conference will be met. Two other non-association games also have been scheduled.

Cigar Ability to Advantage of Gov. Smith

(By Frank Sullivan)

Another reason why Governor Smith will make a better president than Secretary Hoover is because he handles his cigars better. When Al wants to get his cigar from one side of his mouth to the other he slides it deftly thither without missing a single attempt of the republicans to put something over in the line of a water power monopoly or the like.

In order to get any constructive work accomplished Mr. Hoover, if he were elected president (laughter and shouts of "If he were elected president. That's rich, that is!") would have to hire a man, probably C. Bascom Slemm, to do this cigar switching for him. This man would have to be eternally at Mr. Hoover's side, ready at a given signal, previously arranged, to shift Mr. Hoover's cigar for him by removing it from one end of the Hoover maw and replacing it in the other end.

For instance, if the cigar was on the right side and Mr. Hoover wanted it shifted to the left, he could run up a string of multi-colored pennants, by day. If by night, he could display two green lights, one if by sea. The attendant, seeing these signals, would immediately get on the job. Now Al Smith, by performing his own cigar shifting, would save the taxpayers the expense of one more public servant and that money could be used to buy tea pots for needy families impoverished by the selling of the Teapot Dome teapot mines to Harry Sinclair.

LEAGUE TO BAN BANQUETS GETS START IN PARIS

Members Would Open a Drive to Save Pocketbooks and Digestion.

By J. MacGREGOR-MORRISON, United Press Staff Correspondent. PARIS—A new league that will probably save more lives than even the League of Nations is being organized in Paris. It is to be international in scope and known as the "Anti-Banqueting League." Membership is to be voluntary and gratuitous, for the league owes its inception to a desire for economy as well as freedom from dyspepsia.

"The banquet evil" in Europe is really a serious one. Doctors are inclined to doubt this, because their fees come in a terrifying number of cases from the victims of the evil. But the average well-known citizen, business man or politician, it has been estimated is invited to attend luncheons or evening banquets at least 100 times each year.

Not only does his pocketbook suffer, but he rapidly becomes the victim of dyspepsia, torpid liver and, if he is a worshiper of Bacchus, there may even be heart complications. Rich sauces, heavy meat courses and the score of perfumed desserts without which a French banquet cannot be a success, are likely to ruin most constitutions within a remarkably few years.

The financial side of the question is also being emphasized. Before the war, a fairly good banquet would cost 15 or 20 francs. Today, with the cloakroom tip, the taxi ride to and from the hotel, and the preliminary cocktail, it is impossible to escape for less than 200 or 250 francs.

The banquet habit has been disturbing public men ever since the quota of Knights of the Legion of Honor and other promotions began, shortly after the war, to take on serious proportions. Every time the little red ribbon found a new wearer, his friends were expected to organize a congratulatory banquet. While friendships remained, digestion became impossible, and men like Aristide Briand, who rarely has time to have a quiet meal in his own dining rooms of the Quai d'Orsay or Passy, ceased, some time ago to eat at such gatherings.

The new movement also has the support of men like Courtelme, Sacha Aguiry and Monsigneur Baudillard, of the French Academy. The several gourmets, organizations of the capital say that it is all a question of knowing when and where to eat and drink—but even they agree that there are far too many eating festivals in Europe today and only hold their own reunions once a month.

Not only does his pocketbook suffer, but he rapidly becomes the victim of dyspepsia, torpid liver and, if he is a worshiper of Bacchus, there may even be heart complications. Rich sauces, heavy meat courses and the score of perfumed desserts without which a

HEAD HUNTERS DECLARED NOT BLOODTHIRSTY

Practice Merely Part of Moral and Religious Code, English Lecturer Says.

CAMBRIDGE, England—School boys and adventure-seekers will be disappointed to learn that the savage head-hunters of New Guinea are not really very bloodthirsty after all.

That is the opinion of Prof. A. E. Heath, who is lecturing before the summer school here.

"Head-hunting," he declared, "does not arise out of any peculiar blood-lust; on the contrary it is part of a moral and religious code."

He explained that when the custom of going to a neighboring village and bringing back a head or two was prohibited there was a terrific outcry.

"How else can we judge the worth of a young man?" demanded the women. They felt, the professor added, that they were entitled to some means of judging prowess.

When it was suggested that the task of capturing a wild boar unarmed would serve equally well as a test of manhood, the tribe accepted the plan at once, he said.

"Nevertheless," he concluded, "it is extremely difficult to get rid of head-hunting in some part of the British empire."

hopes that he has brought back a new kind of armored dinosaur, which would be hot news to paleontologists. The curator's specimen consists of a complete skull and 160 bones, about half the bones the critter originally had.

The bones were scattered all over the place and Gilmore is having a lot of fun putting them together because if this dinosaur isn't a new species it is certainly another of whom only one trace has previously been found. The other find was near the Red Deer river in Alberta, and Gilmore was quite a few more bones than were picked up there, so it's a big thing anyway, even if this type of dinosaur was only 13 or 14 feet long.

"The nicest part of the whole work," Mr. Gilmore told your correspondent, "is to find a second specimen adding to existing knowledge of the skeletal structure of something found before. We seldom find a full skeleton. They're generally built up on a series of discoveries."

The prize bones, of course, are specimens new to science. For instance, a new kind of pterodactyl was recently found in Oregon. It was the first skeleton of the bird to be found west of the Rocky Mountains and this extended its known geographical range. One never can tell what will turn up—think of the reptile bird with teeth which never flew and was found millions of years after his time in Kansas!

LUNCHEON—Scalloped spinach and tomatoes, white wheat bread, sweet potato pie, milk, tea.

DINNER—Pan broiled pork chops, lima beans, carrot and celery and cheese ball salad, apple sauce and ginger bread, milk, coffee.

Sweet potato pie is a hearty dessert and many adults will find a piece of this pie and a glass of milk a sufficient luncheon.

Sweet Potato Pie One cup cooked and mashed sweet potato, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon molasses, 1 lemon, 4 tablespoons butter, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon ginger, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1 1-2 cups milk.

Beat eggs until light. Add sugar, grand rind and juice of lemon, molasses, salt and spices. Beat well and gradually beat in milk. Add mashed sweet potato and butter melted. Mix thoroughly and turn into a pie pan lined with plain pastry. Bake 10 minutes in a hot oven to set crust and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a slow oven to cook custard. Serve cold.

Are Arranging for the 'Big Parade'

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 6.—Work on detailed arrangements for handling the great parade of the American Legion and its auxiliary on Tuesday, Oct. 9, during their national convention here, is going forward rapidly under the direction of Colonel Beaumont B. Buck, grand marshal, General Convention Chairman Nat M. Washer announced today.

Plans for the various assembly areas and routes from these areas to the line of march are being worked out at present. The order and route of the march, the location of reviewing stand, traffic regulations, routes of dispersal, establishment of first aid stations and of signal communications have all been under study. Plans for three divisions, organized as an army corps, are being developed. In each division will be two brigades and in each brigade, three regiments. Each regiment will be made up of one or more delegations, depending upon the size of the delegation.

Trade Shows Gain Over a Year Ago

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 1.—Wholesale and retail trade during July shows a seasonal decline from that of June, but an increase over business in July, 1927, according to Bernard Nichols, assistant in charge of index numbers in the bureau of business research at the University of Texas.

"Sales of 82 department stores located in 26 cities of the State were $4,044,626, against $3,967,980 in July a year ago," he said. "Twelve cities recorded gains and fourteen show losses. Gains in most cases were larger than the losses, which accounts for the fact that a gain of one and nine-tenths per cent is shown for the State."

"Some complaint of slow sales reported, but most merchants are encouraged by the outlook for business over the rest of the year. Retail trade in the United States in July gained three and two-tenths over that of July, 1927, according to the Federal Reserve Board; all of the districts except two, Philadelphia and Cleveland, show gains. Wholesale trade is somewhat slow."

PLAN SPECIAL TRAINS

DALLAS, Sept. 6.—Arrangement of schedules for trains into the new territory to be served by the Fort Worth and Denver railroad are being undertaken by the Dallas, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls and other North Texas chambers of commerce. This being done so that delegations will arrive in the several cities on the same dates. John Boswell, manager of the Southwest Development Service of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, and J. W. ### Obscure Temple of Justice Scene of Tremendous Suits

FORT STOCKTON, Sept. 6.—A two-story stone building sitting on top of a hill holds the records of the greatest oil litigation ever carried on in the history of the petroleum industry.

Here in the Pecos county court house are the maps and deed that will determine ownership of the now world wide famous Yates pool.

Seventeen "vacancy suits" seeking to declare that the land in this famous oil pool is still public land have centered the attention of oil men here this week. Labor Day delayed activity in the litigation.

To establish a vacancy, it must be shown that the land was not properly included in any of the surveys. Most of the suits center about the Mrs. M. A. Smith properties. In all, 76 suits were filed by W. H. Colquitt, receiver for the Smith oil lands. One of these suits, tried last fall, occupied 28 days. It resulted in a verdict for the receiver. Some of the other suits have been settled by agreement.

Here, a hundred miles from any city of 10,000 the most noted oil and land attorneys will fight out the titles. Of the less than 7,000 residents in this county of 4,134 square miles more than half are in the oil fields. Outside these people there is not a resident to the square mile in what the world's biggest oil well recently demonstrated to be the richest spot in Texas.

J. Oscar Humphrey, armless nominee for state auditor of Arkansas (upper right) is pictured above as he writes and shoots. LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—The Arkansas electorate is preparing to put into office two men who have, probably overcome more handicaps than any other pair of office-seekers on record. One of them is J.
