

HIGH SCHOOL HILL STREETS NOW BEING IMPROVED

Tree Planting Campaign Starting in Eastland

LIONS CLUB TO ENCOURAGE TREE PLANTING

May Order Them By Carload. Chinese Elm Appears Popular. Hillcrest To Have Trees.

Eastland Lions are now making necessary preparations to inaugurate an intensive drive to encourage the planting of five thousand shade trees in the City of Eastland during the coming fall months. At their meeting next Tuesday they will open bids for various nurseries over the state and at the meeting decide the kind and age of the tree to be selected so that, as near as possible, a uniform tree in kind and size will be adopted, with the view of encouraging the property owners to plant one uniform kind and size of shade trees. It is stated that the Chinese Elm seems to be the most popular tree for this section of the state and it is being recommended by most of the different nurseries.

President Donald Kinnaird, of the Lions, points out that by the property owners co-operating in the drive several thousand trees may be ordered at one time and the tree, delivered and planted, will cost the property owner less than one-fourth of the customary price of the tree alone.

Committees are to be appointed to work every street in Eastland, to solicit each property owner to subscribe for trees, to the end that there will be no gaps in the tree line from one end of a street to the other.

According to Mr. Kinnaird, the City Commission is aiding in the movement and has agreed to furnish a "tree line" to be established on each street in order that there will be no irregularity in the straight line of shade trees on any street. This service of the city engineer to be furnished free of cost to any citizen desiring to plant trees on his property front.

J. S. Grisham presented the matter, Wednesday, to the commission, and was assured of hearty co-operation.

Bender & Bean, who are developing the Hillcrest addition to Eastland, will, it is stated, order at least 500 trees and see that they are planted throughout that section.

Walthall, is giving helpful and practical talks each evening and the attendance is increasing each night, many of these pledging themselves to invite others to attend.

The services are being held evening on the lawn in the rear of the church. I. L. Gattis is chairman of the invitation committee.

PRINCE CAROL SEES BELGIUM AS ONLY HAVEN

Switzerland and England Are Cold Toward Scion of Roumanian Royalty.

PARIS.—European diplomacy is following closely the movements of Prince Carol of Roumania and wondering whether he will select Switzerland and Holland, for centuries the abode of political and future home.

During the summer months the Prince, now legally separated from the mother of King Michael, has spent most of his time at Honyet and his new villa at Cog-sur-Mer, near Ostend, in Belgium. His difficulties with the British government, it is considered, has made his refuge in England virtually impossible. The Belgians have treated him with great respect, his numerous difficulties having evoked a traditional sympathy, and it is not unlikely that the father of the King of the Roumanians will find a permanent abode there.

This will not be opposed by the chancelleries of the rest of Europe since the war, there has been no country as free from intrigue as Belgium. Not only are the national police alive to such emergencies, but the special agents of other countries are constantly on the alert, recalling their deficiencies before 1914.

Switzerland, which received the former nobility of Austria, Hungary, Greece and the refugees of Italy has so far shown no desire to welcome Prince Carol. He is always able to obtain a Swiss visa for his royal passport, but no enthusiasm is shown when he arrives in either Geneva or Berne. As for Holland, one undesired monarch is all that The Hague cares to be worried about for the time being, and it is said that a few weeks at Schevingen was officially opposed.

ROBERT HILL MAY YET GET DEATH PENALTY

Convicted Bank Robber Can Be Brought To Trial On Three Capital Indictments.

Twenty-four hours of liberty—purchased at the price of a broken promise not to try to escape—may cost Robert Hill, Cisco bank robber, his life.

County Attorney Frank Sparks this morning stated that he is "seriously considering" having Hill brought back to Eastland County to stand trial in the remaining capital cases against him. The young bank robber is under indictment for the murder of Police Chief Bedford, the murder of Officer George Carmichael and the robbery with firearms of Ellis Harris, whose car was seized by the robbers as they were fleeing from Cisco.

The maximum penalty in each of these cases is the electric chair. In addition, Hill confessed to the robbery of the bank at Bangs and to taking part in the holding up of Carl Wylie in Callahan county. Wylie, it will be recalled, was held prisoner by the bandit bang for 24 hours as they were alternately hiding from and dodging the posses after the Cisco Crimes. Hill could be tried on these two charges in the adjoining counties with the chance that his life would pay the forfeit.

The only trial that Hill stood after his capture in Graham was for the robbery of the Cisco bank. He pleaded guilty, told a pathetic story with downcast eyes and in a voice so low it could hardly be heard, seemed repentant and was given 99 years by the jury. When he was sentenced, Hill promised the court and his attorney that he would make no effort to escape from prison but would try to live right. He had only been in the penitentiary system a short while however when he escaped last Monday from a prison farm but was re-captured the next day.

Of the four men who held up the Cisco bank, one is dead—Louis Davis, who was mortally wounded in the gun-battle, and Marshall Ratiff and Henry Helms have been given the death penalty and their cases are on appeal.

WALES STARTS ON TRIP INTO EAST AFRICA

It is Likely To Be His Last Empire Tour, As He Has Home Work To Do.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 6.—The Prince of Wales, accompanied by his brother, Prince Henry, started today on what may be his last empire tour as Prince of Wales.

The Prince and his brother left by train for Dover to sail for East Africa, one of the few parts of the British empire that Wales has not visited. The tour might be described as the final stage in the training of the prince for his eventual reign over 400,000,000 subjects.

The home engagement of the prince has grown so numerous that soon it may be impossible for him to spend more than a few days at a time away from home. In addition King George, now 63, occasionally experiences periods of inefficient health. The Prince's tour will include visits to several towns in South Africa, covering in all about 3,000 miles by rail and automobile.

SICK MAN SHOT TO DEATH AS LIES IN HIS BED

Killing Occurs In Corpus Christi. Two Beeville Men In Jail On Murder Charge.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Sept. 6.—E. C. Young, 45, Beeville automobile man, is dead here, his body riddled with bullets fired as he lay on a hospital bed recovering from an appendicitis operation.

Two men are in jail charged with murder awaiting examining trial. They are Robert Lothringer, about 34, owner of a Beeville barber shop, and Ralph Whittington, a Beeville barber.

The shooting occurred last night and threw inmates of the sanitarium where Young had undergone the operation Sunday into a panic. A quarrel between Lothringer and Young, in which the automobile man was charged with paying too much attention to Mrs. Lothringer, was said to have led to the shooting. Young was said to have departed from Beeville last week to avoid further trouble. He was joined here for the week-end by his wife and their two children. Mrs. Young took a room next door to the hospital.

Three shots rang out after Lothringer and Whittington had entered the hospital and were shown to Young's room. Mrs. Young heard the shots. "My God, that's my husband," she screamed as she ran toward the hospital. Young had been instantly killed. Powder marks on his hands and night clothing indicated the revolver had been placed against his body. There were no witnesses to the slaying.

Lothringer and Whittington descended to the first floor of the hospital where a nurse shouted to them to stop. Call the Sheriff, a man has been shot," Lothringer said, as he handed his pistol to the nurse. Inmates of the sanitarium became hysterical and cried out, "Lynch them." was started by a woman patient. Lothringer and Whittington made no statement to officers.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Sept. 6.—Four persons, two of them young women, today were charged with the murder of E. C. Young, 45, Beeville automobile man, who was shot to death as he lay on a hospital bed recovering from an appendicitis operation.

The women are Mrs. Mamie Lothringer, 26, wife of Robert Lothringer, and Mrs. Hortense Whittington, 25, wife of Ralph Whittington. The husbands were charged with the murder earlier in the day.

None of the quartet has made a statement since Young was slain.

PRISONERS SET JAIL ON FIRE AT HUNTSVILLE

Start Blaze In Futile Attempt To Obtain Freedom For Some of the Most Desperate Convicts.

HUNTSVILLE, Sept. 6.—The state prison was quiet here today after a fire late yesterday, which was started in a futile attempt to gain liberty for 10 or more of the most desperate convicts in the prison system. Six bank robbers were locked up earlier in the day, when Warden Harrell learned a break had been planned.

Three men in solitary confinement and nine men condemned to die would have had good chances to escape had the fire been successful.

Warden Harrell was certain today that he knew who started the fire, but he was continuing his investigation with a view to obtaining evidence which would insure conviction in court. "He is serving 99 years; you can't punish him much," the warden said.

The fire was started among some cotton mattresses piled high near a row of cells. Guards and about 30 convicts fought the flames which had spread to the attic and then called on the Huntsville citizens volunteer fire company for assistance. The blaze was brought under control after an hour's work.

The nine men in death cells were moved to another part of the building when it was feared the floor above them might fall.

On orders of General Manager Witt Mead of Houston, all newspapers were forbidden convicts. Mead refused to discuss his order. The movement was taken, it was believed so convicts would not learn the officials had had a tip that the break and fire were planned.

BRIGGS FINDS PLENTY TO DO AT PAMPA

George W. Briggs, former secretary of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, writes to a friend that he finds plenty to do as secretary at Pampa. At the present time, he writes, "several brick buildings, three fine churches and about 50 houses are going up. There are that many houses going up all the while and still there is a house shortage."

He expresses interest in the approaching Oil Belt football contest and mentions that Pampa won the baseball tournament held in Amarillo recently.

Of 230 miles Old Spanish Trail across Texas, only 65 miles is unpaired.

Pick Up Chaffeur Turns Bandit and Robs His Employer

HOUSTON, Sept. 6.—W. Larkin, of Fort Worth, lost $50 and a $3,000 deed to some land early today but he saved twenty-seven cents.

Larkin picked up a chauffeur at Cleveland, Texas, because he could not drive a car. When they reached Houston, the chauffeur turned bandit and took all of Larkin's cash and the deed and prepared to leave the automobile.

"Let me have some carfare, I cannot drive this automobile," Larkin told the thief. The bandit handed his victim twenty-seven cents.

EASTLAND FAIR PREPARATIONS BEING MADE

Catalog and Premium List Will Be Ready For Distribution Soon. Attractive Program.

The printed catalogue containing the premium list, awards, information and rules governing the Eastland County Free Fair will be ready for distribution in a few days. The fair management will make every effort possible to get catalogs to all interested in exhibiting at the fair. The Eastland County Free Fair will be held in Eastland, September 27-29, inclusive.

At this time it seems that a larger display of exhibits will be seen at this year's fair than at any other ever held. The different communities over the county are interested in showing the products of their farms, and will compete for the cash prizes that have been offered.

Other features of the community department in which there seems to be increasing interest are the community chorus contest, for the first night and the community play contest for the second night. Notice of entries in these contests have already been received. The community chorus contest will be under the direction of Judge R. L. Rest, the community play contest under the direction of Miss Mary Sue Rumph.

SAFE AND EASY WAY TO SCHOOL IS PROMISED

Three Streets To the High School Being Improved To Lessen Danger In Driving.

City Engineer Wright has members of his staff now at work establishing the grades along Ammerman, Oak and Valley streets for the improvement of these thoroughfares to the top of high school hill. It is expected that the grading machine will be assigned to duty there before the end of this week, after which gravel or chert will be placed so that all three streets will be made easy and safe for driving.

This work has long been in contemplation, but was delayed for lack of funds. Not one of the four street leading to the top of high school hill has been safe for travel during wet weather, and all have been especially dangerous during the winter when wet ground would be frozen and made very slippery. There were a number of days last winter when many careful drivers practiced to park their cars one or two blocks from the top of the hill, thinking the streets unsafe to drive either up or down.

One of the first thoughts of City Manager Tatum after making his first survey of the city was the improvement of one or more of the streets leading to the top of high school hill. In this he found members of the city commission entirely in accord with him. Instructions were given to have at least three of the streets improved and made safe for travel before opening of the school this month and these instructions are to be carried out for the streets are to be completed before the end of next week. The schools will open September 17.

NATIONAL SIDELIGHTS. Whenever the head of a great industrial concern decides to take an active part in the democratic campaign, he resigns his corporation position. Sinclair didn't resign as head of his company when he contributed a few hundred thousand to the republican campaign nor did Will Hays resign as the chief purifier of the movies when he was receiving donations for the G. O. P. that it is charged were juggled in order to conceal from the public who it was that actually gave the money.

Will Rogers says politics is so dead in his town in California "that there wasn't but one sermon on it in the whole town Sunday."

Music may have charms to soothe the savage beast but Senator Curtis, the republican nominee for vice president, has a right to feel a touch. Soon after his nomination, he went to a circus and, as he entered, the band struck up "The Sidewalk of New York." And a few nights ago, immediately after Curtis had delivered his speech of acceptance, a Cincinnati orchestra played "It's the Bologny."

If anyone doubts that Al Smith is going to give Herbert Hoover a race in the east, that crowd at Seagirt, N. J., is an evidence of the democratic nominee's popularity. The throng was estimated at from 100,000 to 200,000 and it was wildly demonstrative. New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Rhode Island and Massachusetts are causing the republican leaders lots of secret concern.

A MISCONCEPTION. Charles A. Waters, Pennsylvania's secretary of labor and industry, feels that Pennsylvania has been discriminated against at Washington.

In a public speech the other day, Mr. Waters declared that although Pennsylvania is one of the greatest industrial states in the union, it has no representatives on the court of customs appeals, the tariff commission, the supreme court or the interstate commerce commission. This gentleman, obviously, quite misunderstands the functions and purposes of those several bodies. They are national bodies, each one of them; they exist to serve the whole people, and not any one section. Strictly speaking, no state has any "representative" on any of them. Justice Pierce Butler, of the supreme court, does not, for instance, represent his own state of Minnesota. He represents the country as a whole.

To demand state representation on one of these bodies is to misunderstand completely the whole scheme of government under which they were established.

ELECTRIC PEN HELPS IMPROVE CHIROGRAPHY

By United Press. LONDON.—A new method of teaching writing by an electric pen to stubborn pupils has been successfully demonstrated by Prof. A. E. Heath, in a grade school at Swansea.

The pen was connected by fine wires to an electric battery. When the pupil squeezed the pen too hard, he received an electric shock in the back of the neck. Beneath the piece of paper on which the pupil practiced, was a steel plate, so connected with electrical contrivances that if the pen actually touched the line, the contact rang a buzzer, while if he went below them, or too high above, a bell rang. At the end of six months practice, according to Professor Heath, the pupil had entirely corrected his habit of squeezing the pen too hard, and formed his letters with a beautiful even hand.

A touching feature of the session was the presentation by the Bethany class of a framed oil painting to Mrs. Frances Logan and Mrs. L. R. Hogan, a token of love and esteem, and regret over their departure for Winters, Texas, their future home.

The picture was the work of Mrs. Marshall McCullough and represented a bluebonnet landscape. Mrs. Logan's resignation as teacher of the Bethany class was regretfully accepted, and Mrs. J. H. Dressmaker Not to Blame for Failure of Swain to "Pop"

By United Press. PARIS.—Clothes may make a man, but a woman is not entitled to put forward the same argument. This has been decided by the commercial court of Paris, following a suit brought by the father of a young Parisian debutante against a well known dressmaker.

The young lady, with the advice of the "couturier," selected a model which was considered certain to please any masculine eye. She wore it for the first time at a dinner to which was invited the man of her choice. Apparently he did not realize the opportunity that was being offered. He failed to propose and the father refused to pay several thousand francs for a gown that had failed to achieve its purpose. The dressmaker resorted to law, and so did "papa."

The commercial court is ordinarily the most austere of the Parisian tribunals, its decisions reading as seriously as those of the Assizes. In this case, however, the judges showed not only wisdom worthy of a Solomon but a sense of humor. The gown was brought into court. They found it "charmant," the prospective fiancée was also found "charmant." So the court's ruling commenced: "Whereas, even if the robe may have not been really elegant, the father has nothing to regret, for a young lady should never count upon a dressmaker's art to find a good husband."

Suggestions For Health Are Made

By J. C. ANDERSON, State Health Officer. Why not make a few health resolutions? You do not have to wait until New Year. The following suggestions may be of worth in the event that you decide to try "resolving to be well" during the remainder of the year. Resolve to: Keep fresh air circulating in your sleeping room—if you cannot sleep outside. Exercise regularly every day, not forgotten that walking is the best as well as the cheapest form. Eat wholesome plain food and avoid intoxicants. Have reasonably frequent change of occupation. Keep in a good humor—laugh at small troubles—wait for the big ones to arrive rather than anticipate them.

Health is much a matter of sane living. Put on your thinking cap. Sum up your daily habit of living, eating, breathing and exercising. If it is not up to the common sense ideas you have on the subject, and you wonder why you have colds and coughs, indigestion or the "bilious blues," get your pencil and make a list of health resolutions. Then make up your mind to keep them.

Now Go on With the Story CHAPTER XXXIV

Rod bent his head far back and Lila drew away with a little laugh. "We can forget everything that's happened," she said softly, "and just take our happiness in our own way. Hold me in your arms, Rod, please. We've a right to each other."

Rod jerked himself free of her embrace and took a step backward. He came up sharply against the grill railing. "Lila, you're crazy," he said. "How could there be any happiness for us together?"

Lila looked at him with a touch of scorn. "Must I literally throw myself at your feet?" she taunted him.

"But there's Cy—and Bertie Lou," Rod reminded her with great simplicity. "What do you care about them?" "What do they count?" Lila laughed. "Cy ought to know what an old man gets when he marries a young girl! And Bertie Lou doesn't care a snap of her fingers for you!"

"Even so, we're married to them," Rod replied, a trifle wearily.

Lila drew in her breath and pressed closer to him. "What of that?" she asked. "Marriage need not keep us from being happy. And if you don't sacrifice for two people who don't know that it means to be in love!"

"Are you going to leave Cy?" Rod asked her. "I couldn't let you go for me, Lila. I just couldn't. You're my friend."

Lila ran a smooth finger along his cheek and curled it over his ear. "I don't intend to break his heart, Rod," she said, "but he's going on a trip next week—"

"My God, Lila, haven't you any decency?" Rod cried, breaking untidily free of her clinging arms. His words were like a lash across Lila's face.

"I didn't know you were queerish," she fired at him. "You ought to divorce Bertie Lou if you think so much of decency."

Rod moved toward the door without answering her but she was before him like a darting flame and stood with her back against the door handle.

"So that got you, did it?" she jeered him. "It isn't so pleasant to hear a truth like that, is it? All right to talk to me about decency, but how about a man who permits his wife to fall for another man and makes no effort to prevent it?"

Rod fairly trembled with outraged feelings as he stood before her and listened to her scathing enunciation.

"You've led me into this," she went on. "Everyone knows you don't care what Bertie Lou does. Well, why shouldn't you care?—less you wanted to be free of the same? You're a big fraud with your talk of decency. I'd like to know how you get that way!"

Rod tried to brush past her. Oh, no, she stopped him, "you'll carry the rest of it, Mr. Good. You'd do yourself that Bertie Lou's one out to Marco Palmer's place, he laughed shrilly. 'A house party! Are you kidding me or yourself? Decency, ha, ha. I'm not good enough to get on with you, but your innocent little wife, who belongs to Marco Palmer, is good enough to be married to—'"

"Move, or I'll make you," Rod roared in a voice that vibrated with suppressed fury. Lila threw her head back and closed her eyes. You'll have to make me," she cried. The next instant she was idly and very forcibly thrust aside.

When she righted herself Rod was gone. But his destination was given by thought in the blind horror at possessed him. Lila's words were like red hot irons into his consciousness. Oh how damnable she had been! Bertie Lou and Marco Palmer! Fool, fool, fool! could he see? It wasn't true! It wasn't true!

He found himself at home. Not a step of the way he had traveled and remained in his memory might have walked miles or oaks; he couldn't have told which had he not known the distance.

The apartment was unbearable. He went into Bertie Lou's room, that was the worst place of all, with a beaker of faded roses on a dresser.

Two hours later Rod was driven out of the place by his mental torture. Where had he left his keys?

He started without it, but saw in the hall and put it on. When he reached the street he hailed a taxi. "Where's the Palmer estate?" he asked the driver. "I don't know," the driver answered. "I don't know," Rod ordered recklessly.

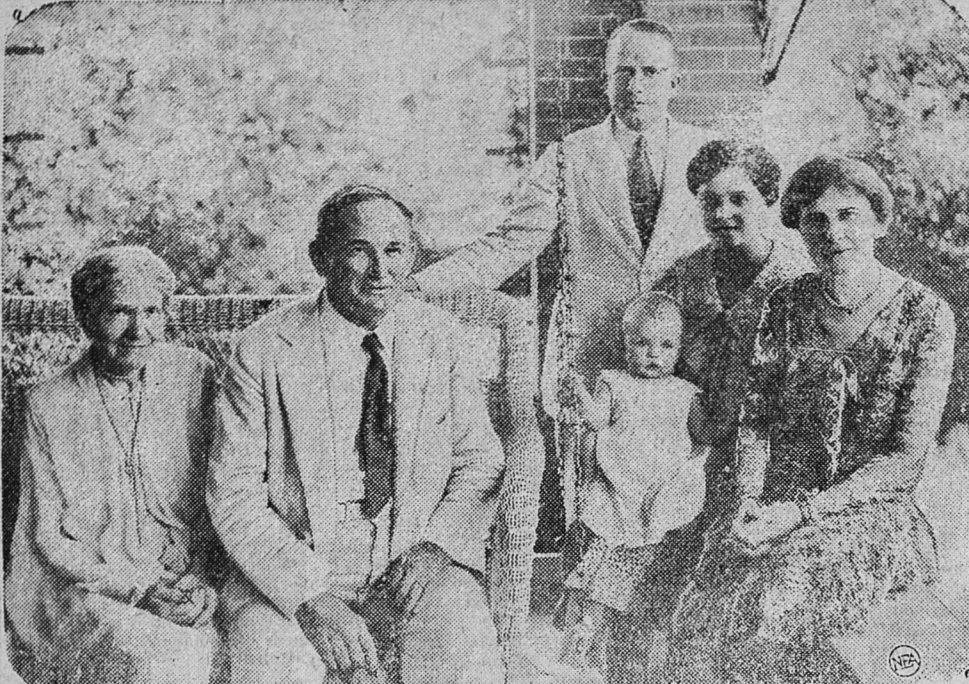

"It's some ride, but they" the man returned. He had his doubts about this wild-eyed fare and he had a relish for a long country drive with no pay at the end of it. A light, maybe.

"Get there," Rod flashed back. "It's 10 bucks in advance." Rod dug out the money, handed to the driver and climbed into the cab.

He drove that car with every nerve in his body, straining forward for more speed, now and then speaking to the man at the wheel, urging him to "give it a gas, man, can't you?"

"What is this, a race with the clock?" the driver barked at him. "I can't afford a ticket, but I'll ride in silence." "I'll break when the driver"

or turned off the state highway and took the road to the Palmer country home far out on the South Shore of Long Island. The husband set a quarter of a mile back on the blue stone driveway, appeared dignified and peaceful in the early morning light.

Most of the windows were shuttered, but a few on the second floor showed drawn blinds. There was a wooden door, used to close the house during the family's sojourn in the South or abroad, leaning against an outside wall.

Rod understood. Marco was using the house in his parent's absence.

He instructed the taxi driver to wait for him, and walked up to the door to ring. As he reached forth his hand he saw with surprise that the door was not on the latch. It swung open a few inches and Rod obeyed an impulse to enter without ringing.

Inside a strange sight met his eyes. The furniture of the hall was still shrouded in linen covers and the floor was bare. Top coats and hats were thrown over chairs and on stands, indicating that Marco had brought a butler out with him. But those carelessly placed coats and hats were a welcome sight to Rod.

It was a house party! A flood of relief that soothed him like cool water on a parched tongue swept over him. He strode on into the living room, oblivious of trespassing; not caring, had it occurred to him.

The living room presented a deplorable sight. The air reeked of stale tobacco smoke, and countless ash trays, filled with cigarette ends were everywhere. Trays with tell-tale glasses, green and brown pinch bottles, with an array of smaller bottles about them like chicks huddling around a squat hen, decorated the room lavishly.

Rod saw a piano with a torn record trailing out of it like a gigantic ticker tape. The floor was marked by dancing feet and some of the covered furniture was heaped in piles, or overturned. A few chairs and aavenport near the fireplace had been uncovered. On one chair, pinned to the back, was a corsage of orchids.

Rod turned grim at the sight of it. Bertie Lou and orchids. Did she get so many that she cared little for them? But who would think of flowers at a party such as this must have been?

Rod struggled hard against the memory of Lila's words. Had it been his fault that Bertie Lou was receiving orchids? Could he have stopped it if he'd tried? But they'd agreed to remember their marriage vows until they wanted them broken legally.

For half a moment Rod believed in Bertie Lou without doubt. Then he thought of Lila—of her trickery and faithlessness. Women were devils! Bad! A man was a fool to trust one of them! Rod would know soon. He'd find Bertie Lou somewhere in this warren of sleeping revelers and wring the truth from her!

He took the stairs two at a time, his feet making but little sound on the thick paper that was laid over the silencing rubber pads. When he reached the second floor landing, a broad, spacious central hall in reality, he paused to look about him.

There were three corridors leading to the sleeping rooms. Rod could see down the one on his right without moving. He took a step in that direction when a man's voice down the corridor that led to the rooms in the back wing attracted his attention. He heard an indistinguishable feminine murmur in reply.

He turned to the left and when he came abreast of the middle corridor he was just in time to see a young man step from a room and hear him say with a teasing laugh: "I won't be long, Mrs. Marco Palmer of the future."

So this was the man whom Lila linked with Bertie Lou! Rod noticed that he was wearing a silken dressing gown and bedroom slippers. Not a bad looking boy.

But what sort was he to pull a thing like this under his mother's roof, even if he was going to marry the girl?

Rod's lips curled in contempt, but he went on, intending to make Marco tell him where he could find Bertie Lou. Halfway down the corridor he stopped. A maid had appeared from some backstairs, bearing a breakfast tray in her arms. He could inquire of her, and possibly avoid a scene with young Palmer.

The girl did not take any notice of him, and just as he was about to speak to her she reached the door of the room Marco had left, and rapped upon it. It was opened at once by someone Rod could not see. But he heard a voice directing the girl where to put the tray.

The voice was Bertie Lou's.

No Pessimism Can Be Discovered in One Grid 'League'

DALLAS, Sept. 5.—Picking the winner of the Texas football conference is a task that no one cares to undertake at the present time. All indications are that the season will be a repetition of the 1927 season, which was so close that only one game separated the winner—Southwestern university, Georgetown—from the fifth place team.

According to the advance information being spilled from the various camps, every member of the conference will have fully as strong a team as it boasted of last year, and about the only prediction that sport dopsters can make right now is that none of the teams will come through the 1928 season without at least one defeat.

Coach Lefty Edens of the Southwestern Pirates, with two football championships to his credit in the three years that he has been coach there, will have a veteran line and backfield around which to build his 1928 aggregation. The Pirates will be led by Captain Wesley Blackburn, who is playing his fourth year with Southwestern. Blackburn is considered the peer of triple threat men among the six schools of the conference.

Simmons university, Abilene, coached by Frank Bridges, is touted to have the best material of all. With 14 lettermen returning from last season, coupled with several additions from the Olympic club of San Francisco, where he coached in 1927, the Cowboys should be a threat to other teams in the conference. Bridges is hopeful of getting into the Southwestern conference in the near future. For that reason, he is pointing for his games with S. M. U. and T. C. U.

Joe Bailey Cheaney, one of the greatest backs ever to wear a Howard-Payne uniform, will be head coach of that school, assisted by McAdoo Keaton, another former Yellowjacket star. Seventeen lettermen will head the opening whistle this fall. Brownwood people are predicting that Cheaney will bring a championship to the down-state city, in his first year. Bill Wright, three-year letterman at center, will captain the Yellowjackets.

The St. Edward's aggregation, from Austin, always known for their strong defensive tactics, will produce a team that will be strong on defense this season, according to McGeaher, head coach. The team will be built around Sammie Dyer, in the backfield, and Sarafine, in the line, both veterans of several years' experience at Trinity university, Waxahachie, which will have a veteran line, but Coaches Barry Holton and Leland Wilkins must find material for a new backfield combination. The forward wall will be one of the best in the state as it is composed of three and four year veterans.

Austin college, Sherman, is the dark horse of the conference. With the problem of building practically a new team, confronting them, Coaches Cecil Griggs and Ward, will take over the destinies of the Kangaroos. Sherman sports writers and fans are already claiming a championship for "dear old Austin" on the basis of the material the coaches will have. For the present, other teams are content to wait developments in the Kangaroo camp before they make any shows. Just how the Kangaroos show up in the first few games will decide the psychological force they hold over other teams.

The season is scheduled to get under way official, Sept. 10, when uniforms and equipment will be issued at the camps.

Choosing a College With Cost and Educational Results Considered

At this time of the year, just a week or two before the annual opening of all the colleges of our land, we hear from the lips of many boys and girls the question, "where shall I go to college this year?" and from the parents, "where shall I send my son or daughter to college?" With these questions are associated many others which bear of course upon the general theme, Choosing a College.

The typical American college has a distinctive place in the educational system, and this is determined from two points of view. First, from the point of view of the individual. The college must do two things: it must give the student that larger and general culture which will make above all else a man and a leader. It should give him a firm grasp of the boundaries and values of the various fields of knowledge and activity. It should give him proper social attitudes, it should train him to think clearly, to have the higher and finer feelings, and to express himself with precision and elegance. It should give him that grounding in a system of thought which will enable him to pierce to the core of an argument and determine for himself the relevancy and consistency. It must also give those ideals of life which will lift the man up to his better levels and send him out into life on a mission of usefulness. Secondly, the college should help the individual to discover himself by means of its curriculum, methods of instruction, and system of administration. In this way, the individual learns his weaknesses, his aptitudes, and his special abilities so that he may rationally choose his place in life. Not only this, but the college should fire him with enthusiasm for his particular calling in life and cause his education to crystallize into a definite and energetic purpose. The college should furnish the ideals and purposes that will maintain an enduring existence.

College Training. From the point of view of the welfare of society the typical American college should render service by training the "Directive Class" and cultivating a wholesome independence and wisdom in the choice of leadership on the part of those who by nature are disposed to be "Followers." From this point of view, the function of a college resolves itself into training men in those conceptions of life, in those principles of action, and in those purposes and ideals which will send them out to be leaders along paths of honesty and fair dealing and will cause them to preach the Gospel of Love, Work and Usefulness.

Having an understanding of the purpose of a college, the individual is then in a position to determine for himself whether he is just prepared to enter college or fully capable of profiting by what it has to offer. In the connection that is made upon matriculation, the college obligates to carry out its part as has just been discussed and the individual should likewise obligate himself to live up to what is required of him.

College Expenses. "How much does it cost to go to college?" can not be answered in a better way than by quoting an article titled "Cost of Attending Tarleton College" by Mrs. W. Chamberlin appearing in the Stephenville Tribune dated August 17, 1928.

"The privilege of attending college may cost much or little, according to the student's ability to live within his means. At this time of year, when so many are considering the possibility of going to school, it might be interesting to call attention to the cases of two girls who attended Tarleton last year. "The first was an Erath county girl whose people live near enough to furnish her with most of her groceries from the family larder. She and another girl did light housekeeping, paying five dollars each per month rent. They planned their meals ahead, choosing plain, wholesome foods rather than expensive canned foods and hastily fried lunches. At the beginning of the school year she had borrowed one hundred and thirty dollars. This amount she had budgeted carefully beforehand; and so faithfully did she adhere to this budget that when school closed she had ten dollars left with which to buy some things needed for the summer school. She had received in addition during the year only a coat which her sister bought for her, and a dress and pair of shoes furnished by her mother. All the rest came out of her borrowed money. And even then there was a small margin left for pleasures. There was an occasional treat, and a visit now and then to the picture shows, usually late in the afternoon, which did not cost so much as the night performances. She went about a good deal, and "The second girl whom I have mentioned came from a greater distance, consequently she boarded in the dormitory, where she paid all of her expenses. She was a girl who was active in many student organizations and took part in church and social affairs. She went about a good deal, and was very popular. But she was careful to keep within the limits which she had set for her expenses; at the end of the year she found that she had spent three hundred and twenty-five dollars, an average of about thirty-six dollars per month.

"These two girls represent two different situations—The first, the one who can feed mostly from home; and the other the one who must pay all out of her fund. This shows that in either case it need not take large capital for going to school. Now there are students who spend a great deal of money in college. Some of these lead their parents to believe that it is necessary to do so in order to keep up with the rest; but this is a mistake. It all depends upon the student's ability to plan ahead and live by his budget."

College Standing. The standing of affiliation of a college is an essential to always be determined before making selection, because it might be embarrassing to an individual to attend a school nine months and then learn that he can not transfer to another college or university without losing some of his credits. There are five regional accrediting associations in the United States. In the south "The Association of College and Secondary Schools of the Southern States" is the regional agency; and if a college is recognized by this agency, that should be sufficient endorsement.

There are many other points that would help in proper selection of a college, but just one other that will be mentioned in this article and that is that the test of a college is by its graduates just as the test of the individual is by "its fruits."

It is no wonder that we find the enrollment of some of our colleges growing by leaps and bounds. This is not an indication that that particular college is opening its doors to the unprepared but is an indication that its graduates and ex-students have been so fired with the school spirit that they wanted to be like Andrew who after meeting Christ could hardly wait to tell his brother Peter.

Such a college should be selected because then and only then will one find a college of students, for students, and by students.

MYSTERY STORIES AMONG THE BOOKS JUST OFF THE PRESS

Love by Latitude. "Jerome," the Goncourt prize novel, by Maurice Bedel, is devoted to a charming young Frenchman and his amorous experiences in Norway and bordering states.

Nouveau Riche ("Gettin' in Society") (Harris Brothers) by George Blake Lone social comedy that follows a pattern but which, nevertheless, is amusing through some of its content characterization, like Sam.

In the Deathhouse. Harry Stephen Keeler has written a most unusual mystery story in his "Sing Sing Nights" (Dutton). Unusual, that is, in its method of approach rather than in the material used.

Further we read from the typewriter of the Angelo sports writer: "It is of interest, incidentally, to recall that Ballinger played the highly touted Cisco team to a tie during spring practice. This may not indicate much in regards to the teams' relative strength as they line up for the fall campaign, but it's worth thinking about."

There is this to be said in behalf of the amateur who turns "pro"—Vincent Richards, Mary K. RECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

MOM'N POP. POP SITS LOOKING A MOONSHINE'S GUN IN THE FACE, A VICTIM OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY. MOM IS LIVING IN HOPE THAT THE OLD LINE 'NO NEWS IS GOOD NEWS' COMES THROUGH A WINNER.

It's Mom! I saw her last night, jamming her head into a new hat as she rushed into the street, just as nothing was on her mind—the whole neighborhood is talking of the way she gasped around and her husband missing, and more likely worse—I'm broad-minded, but—

I think it's just wonderful, you're so brave and strong to keep up such a courageous spirit.

—Um! If Bradshaw went up in an airplane and didn't come down, I'd stay off the streets, at least, just out of respect.

same, the individual players are playing under different mental reactions. There is a strain which does not appear through the regular course of the season. Mediocre hitters become heroes over night with a mighty wallop. Superb pitchers are liable to crack under the strain.

Did you know that? McGraw says that Hughey Critz of the Reds, is the best defensive second baseman he ever saw.

Love by Latitude. "Jerome," the Goncourt prize novel, by Maurice Bedel, is devoted to a charming young Frenchman and his anonymous experiences in Norway and bordering states.

Nouveau Riche. "Gettin' in Society" (Harper Brothers) by George Blake is a social comedy that follows the pattern but which, nevertheless, is amusing through some competent characterization.

The Faeds, central figures in the novel, were born and bred middle class Scots and might have remained so had not the war poured a golden shower on the family. Blake depicts the failure of the Faeds to withstand their sudden affluence, showing the parents baffled by new problems and the more or less likable children mal-adjusted to the new regime.

Sports Matter

Every year the roll of college men who have attained success in professional baseball grows longer and the season of 1928 is no exception.

There are several collegians who have gained fame on the big league diamonds this summer, among them Barnes of the Washington Senators, Batorcourt of the St. Louis Browns and Walsh of the White Sox.

The day has long since passed when a fraternity pin on a baseball player would have set him apart, a marked man to be shunned by his less elegant fellows.

And while the conversation of big league stars is not yet as literary as in the Oxford Union or in a meeting between Gene Tunney and Hugh Walpole it is no longer definitely lowbrow.

And it is an indisputable fact that the reign of poker has given way to bridge. The old-timers lament that four out of five rockers nowadays have never spent evening after evening trying to fill an inside straight.

Change Was Slow. At the time when Eddie Collins and the late Christy Mathewson were newcomers to the big leagues much was made of the fact that they were college men—Eddie at Columbia and Christy at Bucknell.

In those days many players who had been on a campus and knew the difference between integral calculus and thermodynamics tried their best to hide their past. It was not at all unusual for a diamond athlete to equip himself with a new surname and start all over again, trying to live down among his fellows the fact that he once had dwelt in a classroom.

But in these times the shoe is so nearly on the other foot that a man often claims a collegiate background if he never got any further toward a degree than an unsatisfactory interview with the registrar.

Several Well Educated. Since a university course does not always mean education it is a pleasure to report that a few players are actually well read and talented in fields other than the throwing, catching and batting of baseballs.

Art Nehf of the Chicago Cubs and Moe Berg of the Chicago White Sox qualify in that category. A four-syllable word is no longer a bar to diamond fame.

Baseball scouts of these days are spending a large part of their time watching college games and contests are scanned eagerly in the club offices.

But the particular fly in this ointment is that college baseball is not thriving. Very few college teams manage to pay their own way, the rest of them being supported by the football elevens.

In fact a few.

Widow Sacrifices to Contribute to Al Campaign Fund

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—It took her three months of scrimping and saving to do it; of going without things and of dropping little coins, one by one, into a china pitcher in the cupboard. But Mrs. Theresa A. Furey at last has saved $500 out of her yearly wage of $960, and she has added it to the campaign fund of Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Mrs. Furey lives at 384 Mott avenue, the Bronx, and is employed in the Municipal building, as a temporary clerk in the tenement house department of the city. Her husband, who was a contractor of the firm of Furey & Kelly, is dead, and she has no other source of income but her own earnings, she said.

She brought the money in to democratic national headquarters, her plump face flushed and smile ing and her eyes a little moist with the emotion and excitement she felt. She had had the coins changed into small bills and she drew the fat roll out of a worn, bulging purse.

"I always hoped I'd live to see Al Smith in the white house," she told Col. Herbert H. Lehman, chairman of the finance committee, who received her. "I guess I'm going to, after all. When he ran for governor last time I got 76 votes for him. I got every janitor in our neighborhood out to the polls to vote for him."

"Why did I save my money for him? Because I think he's such a just, honest, sincere man, who means right by the country."

Harold F. Payson of the finance department received the money from Mrs. Furey, and gave her a receipt. Col. Lehman pinned a gold campaign button on her and Governor Smith himself has arranged to receive her when next he comes to New York.

"How did you manage to save this much money?" she was asked. "Oh, I just went without things. You know I don't crave a lot. I can get along nice on just a little."

A trifle abashed, she looked down at her shoes, speck and span black oxford.

"I went without shoes for one thing," she confided. I would have been up here sooner, only I was ashamed to come with the shoes I had, so I had to wait until I saved enough to buy a new pair. I wouldn't want to come to Al Smith's headquarters in worn shoes."

TELEPHONE ADVANCE RESULT OF CONSTANT LABORATORY RESEARCH

Seventeen million telephones, 45,000,000 miles of wire, 6,000 telephone offices, 700,000 wire conversations a day, local calls completed in less time than a half minute—impressive as these telephone statistics are, they scarcely explain why telephone service in this country is without parallel.

The black instrument through which one can converse with the Antipodes is the offering of ninety types of transmitter, and more than sixty type of receiver, historic curiosities. If that instrument could tell its story, it would be a story of research applied in creating thousands of parts concealed in switchboards and buried in conduits.

Research in laboratories of telephone companies, manufacturers of electrical supplies and inventors has discovered ways to save telephone companies $1,000,000 a year by prolonging the life of "repeaters," to save $750,000 a year in lightning protectors, to save $8,000,000 a year by improving a switchboard part, to save $50,000 a year by using a new type of wire.

Research made possible trans-continental telephone conversation that can be understood and telephone service that is reliable and rapid.

ICE CREAM WARNING

AMES, Ia.—Ice cream is not a good dish to serve in hot weather if a cooling effect is desired.

According to Miss Ida M. Shilling, professor of foods and nutrition at Iowa State College here, the properties of ice cream are heating and begin to work on the body as soon as the ice cream melts. If nuts and rich syrups are added the heating effect is even more noticeable.

* A PLAIN, unvarnished statement of fact: "Mild enough for anybody and yet they satisfy". If you will light a Chesterfield and smoke it critically you will find no hint of harshness, but a certain mildness, with a rich, wholesome flavor. Chesterfields satisfy without being insipid or tasteless.

Lightly and smoothly.

STRIKING THOUGHTS FROM SEN. ROBINSON'S SPEECH

Some striking excerpts from Senator Robinson's speech of acceptance of the Democratic vice-presidential nomination follow:

Voters are interested, not alone in the problems and issues with which the campaign is expected to deal, but also in the personal characteristics of the candidate.

Numerous political serpents are coiling in the dark and striking from cover, and with venomous talons seek to poison the thoughts and arouse the prejudice of those who will decide issues of far-reaching importance.

Sound public policy encourages full, frank and fearless discussion of issues and records. It discourages misrepresentation, perjury and fadshood.

The spokesman of a party... proves himself unworthy if he knowingly accepts advantages from basehood, even though not uttered or inspired by himself.

The plan announced by Mr. Hoover for the alleged relief of agriculture, contemplated the concentration of the farm industry so that production in excess of the domestic demand would be eliminated, and the export field left entirely to the industrial exporter.

The Republican party is either incapable of successfully dealing with the (farm) question or has deliberately violated its express promises to the farmers of the nation.

Mr. Hoover, as the President's trusted advisor, is perhaps more directly responsible for the failure of farm relief legislation during the eight years referred to than any other single political leader.

Will the farmers of the United States, who have waited eight years for Mr. Hoover and his associates to serve them, accept the tariff as a remedy for depression in farm products whose domestic prices are controlled in markets shielded by the tariff wall?

If the farmers of the United States must wait until transportation rates are sufficiently reduced by means of waterways to bring them prosperity, they may as well give up the fight and accept the humiliation and ruin which has threatened them throughout the last eight years.

It is in no sense an attempt at nullification to suggest changes in the Constitution or the law.

Honesty in public affairs is of transcendent importance. Corruption is the real signal of decadence.

The safety of our political institutions depends on fair elections and honest government.

Many Republicans condemn the indifference of their leaders to the ignominious record—a record which never could have been made if the watchman on the towers had not fallen asleep.

Gullahorn Sues Barkley, Asking $20,000 Damages

Suit has been filed in the 88th district court by Gordon Edward Gullahorn of Ranger against G. C. Barkley, wealthy oil operator, of Ranger, asking $20,000 damages for personal injuries. Attorneys for plaintiff are Thompson, Knight, Baker & Harris of Dallas.

The plaintiff alleges that he was riding in an automobile belonging to the defendant and driven by Richard Barkley, minor son of the defendant, "a notoriously reckless and careless driver of automobiles," that the latter was driving at a speed of about 50 miles an hour and collided on the highway with another car, which threw the car in which he was riding, into a ditch, causing it to turn over and causing severe and permanent injury to plaintiff.

JUDGE AT AGE OF 25

DALLAS, Sept. 4.—A justice of the peace at 25, nominated for the office on his 25th birthday, Robert Ogden, expects to be the youngest "judge" in Texas when he takes over the office of the Oak Cliff precinct in December. Democratic nomination has always been equivalent to election in the precinct.

Ogden was born in Marshall, Tex. He attended Marshall high school, edited the school annual and was president of the student council. He went to Chicago university after graduating at the Marshall high school. Returning to Texas, he began work at a gas service station and studied law when off duty. He married Miss Violet Keith of Dallas in 1927 so has personal experience that will let him become a good marrying justice.

LOEWENSTEIN REWARD SMALL

PARIS—Finding of a multi-millionaire's body at sea is not always a profitable recovery, according to the five sailors who manned the fishing smack "Sainte-Theres de l'Enfant Jesus" which brought the mangled remains of Albert Loewenstein, the Belgian silk merchant and promoter, to shore after his mysterious fall from his private airplane.

Ten thousand francs were paid over to the maritime authorities of Calais by Loewenstein's lawyers who promised a further and larger payment. Ten thousand francs would not go far among five men who had a total of 31 children to feed and clothe. Besides, the fishermen lost a whole day's catch getting Loewenstein's body aboard, and another day in giving their testimony before the examining magistrate.

Mineral Water Now Piped From Wells To The Bathhouse

Pipe has been laid from the two wells of the Eastland Mineral Water company, at Halbyran and Plummer streets, to the company's bathhouse in the first block of East Commerce St., and soon water in a large tank placed behind the bathhouse reaches a certain level, and the pump will continue drawing water until the tank is filled. Thus it will be kept full all the time. The company has bought the land where the two wells were drilled. The water, according to Dr. R. C. Ferguson, is superior to the mineral water first obtained on the north side of the city.

Dr. Ferguson has moved his office from the Exchange National Bank building to the bathhouse building, to which he is planning to add a second story and establish a clinic and private hospital.

Southwest Has Representatives In Great 'Shoot'

Special to The Telegram.

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 4.—Thirteen outstanding Southwestern boys, the pick of 2700 youthful residents of Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico, who attended this summer's citizens military training camps, will uphold the rifle shooting supremacy of the Southwest against crack shots from all parts of the United States at the National Rifle matches, at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Brigadier-General Albert J. Bowley, commanding the Eight Corps Area, U. S. Army, at Fort Sam Houston here, under whose supervision the C. M. T. camps were held, selected the thirteen as the choice among the 2700, it was said at army headquarters, because of their "markedly good character, sense of responsibility and ability to become instructors in rifle practice."

Besides forming the Eighth Corps Area C. M. T. rifle team which will meet C. M. T. C. teams from all over the country for the National rifle honors, the Southwestern youths will toe the firing line with sharpshooters of the regular army, navy, marine corps and civilian shooting clubs, many of them marksmen of International fame.

No less than two thousand of America's leading rifle and pistol experts will participate in the big carnival of shooting events arranged by the National Rifle Association.

Here's a Chance For a Christmas Present of $2,000

BY W. C. DURANT

The major issue in our country today is the problem of law enforcement and obedience to law. To paraphrase the words of Lincoln, it is a question whether our institutions can endure with a citizenship half lawless and half law-abiding.

We are impelled by the widespread violation of the liquor law embodied in the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the highest law of the land.

Big business leaders who have the largest stake in law observance publicly and privately violate this law and countenance its violation by others. Instead of using their wealth and influence to create public opinion demanding law enforcement, our business men of character and position are the chief support of the master criminal class, the bootlegger.

It is not surprising that the flagrant example of lawlessness on the part of the men highest in their communities has undermined respect for law in their children, their servants, their employees and all classes of citizens including public officials and judges.

When thinking men generally come to realize that the responsibility is up to them to take the initiative in law observance then and not until then will the Eighteenth Amendment be given a fair trial. Until that time there should be no thought of writing this provision out of the constitution.

It is my belief that the majority of our people do not want the Eighteenth Amendment abandoned. Legislatures of forty-six of the forty-eight states voted it into the Federal Constitution because there was need of it. The people want it enforced and obeyed.

In order to give expression to the soundest thought in the country on the subject, I offer a prize of $25,000 for the best and most practicable plan to make the Eighteenth Amendment effective.

The prize will be awarded by a committee of prominent men and women now being selected. Competitive offerings must be typewritten and not exceed two thousand words in length and must be submitted prior to December first to the prize committee of the Eighteenth Amendment, Room 2401 Fisk Building, New York City.

Prize will be awarded and paid December twenty-fifth.
