Anti-Al Smith Democrats Grip Eastland County

RICHARD TO LEAD FORCES OF THE DRYS

Judge At Head of Campaign Here To Keep Al Smith Out of the White House.

Judge Ed S. Pritchard led the Eastland county organization of the Anti-Al Smith Democrats of Texas, according to a report taken at a mass meeting in Eastland Wednesday night.

C. C. Roby will be chairman of the woman's section and S. P. Rumph will be vice-chairman.

More than 300 men and women gathered themselves Wednesday in Eastland to support Al Smith for president of the United States, signing a petition which reads as follows: "We, the Anti-Al Smith Democrats of Eastland County, Texas, do hereby endorse the signature of the undersigned hereby endorsing a member of the Anti-Al Smith Democrats of Texas, to use my best endeavors to elect Al Smith in Texas and to the Democratic party from control of Tammany Hall and its interests."

At the meeting in Eastland Wednesday night, a number of local citizens in response to a call that a "flying squadron" of Anti-Al Smith Democrats would be organized to make addresses and organize in Eastland county. This flying squadron consisted of Judge Pritchard, Dr. B. A. Copass, of the faculty of the Southwestern Seminary at Fort Worth, and J. T. Bloodworth of Fort Worth, former national Democratic campaigner for Texas.

Sartin was the first speaker, introduced by the Rev. A. W. Sartin, Baptist pastor at Eastland.

Stranger Condition Sartin said that the present campaign presented a dangerous condition, each of the domestic parties having changed its position. The Republicans, he said, had selected a leader who might be classed as a non-alcoholic Democrat and had been a Democratic candidate in several years ago, a friend of the greatest of states, Woodrow Wilson, and for whom Democrats might without wavering from Democratic principles. The Democratic party, he said, had named a leader who had sought to nullify the Constitution of the United States by repealing the prohibition law; had selected for national executive committee chairman John J. Raskob, an "ardent drinker and a dripping wet," and was receiving counsel and financial support from Duane Delaware, long known as the Republican stalwart.

The Democratic party has turned Republican and the Republican turned Democratic," said Sartin. "But the people of Eastland do not belong to the Democratic party," he continued. "On the contrary, the Democratic party is the people of Texas. It is their servant and it is not the people of Texas the Democratic party, or any party, should call on them for support."

Sartin said he had always been a Democrat and is a Democrat, and purposed voting the Democratic ticket with the exception that he would vote Republican rather than Democratic presidential electors.

Exposures Tammany Hall Tammany Hall has obtained the support of the Democratic party to make the people of the United States its servants," declared Judge Sartin, who thereupon adjourned the meeting.

WILD HORSES
TO BE HUNTED
FROM RANGES

They Eat Grass Needed To Feed Cattle Herds and Must Die.

By United Press.
EL PASO, Tex.—Wild horses on the plains of the southwest are in a great death march as a result of the increase in beef prices.

Range grass is not plentiful enough to feed both the cattle herds and the thousands of unproductive wild horses that roam the plains. Ranchers have declared that the wild horses must die probably in reduction plants.

By a curious irony of fate, the only route by which many of the doomed animals can be driven to the plant at El Paso, is over the desolate 100-mile highway from Hillsboro, N. M., that thirt tortured Spaniards three centuries ago named "Jordano del Muerto"—the Journey of Death.

For the bronetail ponies and the wild burros, the barren trail is truly a journey of death. Water is scarce on the trail and lockjaw breaks out in some of the herds. For the animals who escape death on the trail, there are the bullets of the slaughter house executioner.

There have been wild horses in West Texas and New Mexico ever since animals escaped from the camps of Cortez and Del Soto in the 16th Century. Little disturbed by man, and in recent years constantly augmented by strays from ranches and cavalry posts, immense herds formed.

Round-ups Are Held.
Once in a while cattlemen round up a few and break them for ranch purposes. In 1918 several thousand were corralled and sent to France to drag artillery pieces for the Allies. Only recently have the herds been considered a menace.

The doom of the wild horse was sealed with the record price of beef in 1927. As a result of the barring of animals from Argentina on account of the foot and mouth disease, American beef commanded the highest price since the World War. For the first time in years there was an incentive for the cattlemen to raise maximum herds. They are doing that this year and the wild horse must make room.

Reduction plants pay from $2 to $10 for the horses, depending upon the condition of the hide, which is the most profitable item.

American Cities
Now Crying For Wider Streets

By United Press.
NEW YORK.—More and wider streets is the best solution for traffic congestion in New York and other American cities, Irving T. Bush, president of the Bush Terminal Company, writes in the North American Review for September.

"Within the metropolitan district of New York, and the same is true of every other American city with which I am familiar," writes Bush, "there is abundant room for industry and for a population much greater than now exists."

"It is a well-known fact that a much greater number of square feet of floor space than now exists could be provided in Manhattan if a uniform height of six stories for buildings were provided. It is also true that we could devote a large part of Manhattan to gardening if a height of 50 stories were established."

"Each of these limits may seem absurd, but somewhere between them there is an intelligent medium."

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Lou Ward marries Rod who had previously been to Lila Marsh. The only on the bride's happiness is habit of telling friends that Rod's first love.

herself that she was willing to give Rod up.
Oh, it was a hideous mess. Her head was aching furiously now, and little darts of white light flashed before her eyes. She opened them for relief and the dressing room swam about her like a rock-ing house at a fair.
She was so long recovering from the nervous shock she had suffered that Rod had gone to bed when finally she crept, heart sick and weakened, to her pillow.
In the morning, after an hour or two of fitful slumber, she was no nearer a decision in regard to her future than she had been the night before.
She did not get up and breakfast with Rod as was her habit. He left the apartment without the slightest idea that she was troubled with anything more than a headache, to which she confessed.
It required considerable steeling of her will to face her engaged husband with Lila. They were lunching together and then going to a matinee.
Bertie Lou telephoned that she would meet Lila at the theatre.
Lila seemed relieved to omit the luncheon. As soon as Bertie Lou hung up the receiver Lila called the office and asked for Rod. Would he come up to lunchon? She wanted him to meet the man they were talking about. Rod understood that she meant the detective. He promised to be there promptly at 1 as Lila requested.
He had not been out of the office more than five minutes when Bertie Lou called into tell him about a telegram she had received from Wayville. The girl at the switchboard told her he had gone up to Mr. Loree's apartment.
Rod found the detective waiting for him when he arrived. The man's eyes bored uncomfortably into his when he asked about the lock on the case. Had he, Rod, for any reason sought to open it?
"Certainly not," Rod replied emphatically.
The detective turned to Lila.
"But you say it was in good order when you gave it to Mr. Bryer?"
"I didn't say anything of the kind," Lila snapped. "I said I assumed it to be in good order."
"You had no trouble locking it?"
Lila hesitated a second. "No," he admitted reluctantly. "But see here, Mr. Weeks," she added suddenly. "You're entirely on the wrong track if you think Mr. Bryer put that lock out of order." Weeks scowled. "Did you discover any clues at the office?" he asked Rod. Rod said no.
"Why are you paying for the jewels?" the detective questioned, his words coming like machine gun bullets.
"Because they were in my care and I was responsible for them," he said. "Your first thought was that I had stolen them. Wouldn't everyone else think so, too? Well, I didn't do it, and when Mrs. Loree consented to let me pay the insurance on them I considered that a wiser course than trying to convince the world of my innocence."
The detective decided to do what was asked of him, regardless of his private opinions. There was something fishy here, but as no one seemed to be crying for redress he was willing to go on with his investigations along the lines laid down for him by his employer.
Before he left they arranged a way for him to search the office.
Rod would remain after the other employees were gone and admit him.
Lila made up her mind to be there too, but she said nothing of her intention at the time.

When Rod got back to the office after lunching with Lila he found a memorandum of Bertie Lou's call on his desk. He tried to get her on the telephone but there was no answer.
Lila, too, tried to reach her, after standing 10 minutes in the lobby of the theatre and losing her patience. She thought, when Bertie Lou did not answer, that she was on the way. It was nearly curtain time, so she left Bertie Lou's ticket at the box office and went into the theatre.
Bertie Lou did not arrive during the first act. Lila was getting a little worried. She called the apartment again. Still no answer.
Well, if she didn't come by the end of the second act it might be a good idea to telephone Rod. But if he couldn't get the apartment either he would go tearing off home and forget about the detective. And Bertie Lou might arrive after all, and make the up-stating of their plans a needless sacrifice.
The play ended and Bertie Lou did not come to the theatre. Lila got into her car, the cabriolet that had thrilled her so the first time she rode in it, and which now she would have exchanged, on occasions only, for the old rattlebang car that Rod and she had climbed poles and jumped fences in once upon a time.
The detective was there ahead of her. Through the open door of Cyrus' private office she could see him moving about the safe when Rod admitted her to the ante-room.
For a moment she stood looting against Cyrus' desk and watched the search. A queer smile played around the corners of her mouth.
Half an hour later the detective left them. Lila turned to Rod.
"Cy keeps some good stuff in his safe, doesn't he? Let's have a drink."
"I'd rather not open it again," Rod demurred. "In fact I think I'd better be getting along. Lila, Bertie Lou was trying to get me by telephone and I haven't been able to reach her. I have a feeling that something is wrong."

CHAPTER XXV
She begged Rod not to tell Lila of the theft Lila did not lie to account his inemprtance.
Minutes after he left her she had occasion to telephone Lila. In the course conversation she mentioned Rod had just returned from and before he reached Rod decided not to say anything about the matter to Bertie Lou.
The Lou knew he had lunched Lila on the day he took the and bracelets to the office naturally she expected him of having returned them.
The evening wore on and Rod gave explanation for his late-coming home. Bertie Lou his wonder. Oh, well, perhaps she had slipped her mind. He was to be deeply troubled something.
That's the matter with you, she asked him finally.
"None," he answered shortly and brusquely.
She stiffened his resistance.
"You said," he worked late last night, he had lied, been cleverly careful to tell Lila that he was at Lila's apartment.
Bertie Lou it was a She shrank back in her seat though he had struck her she went white. Rod was at the dancing flames; he saw the effect of his words moment or two she got up and said she thought she retire. Somehow, willing it all the proud strength of she possessed, she walked out of the room.
Instantly the door closed behind her in the bedroom Bertie Lou went. Her world had turned topsy-turvy with a ghastly quality that left her giddy and dizzy. She rushed over to the bed and flung herself upon it, wrenching sob tore at her throat.
She remembered it and received a flood of tears that followed.
The Lou raised her head and looked at her charming bedroom with loathing. This was the place of Lila's victory. The sop to allay a credulous wife's susp-she'd got to stop it, she told Rod wouldn't sit out there with her. And she didn't know she was going to do. She got under the pillow over and into her dressing room. Rod was of his own; he would not do here.
She tore off her pretty dress—Rod liked her in fluffy things and she dressed for him—she was beginning to feel more calmly.
She plain to her now that had wormed her way back their good will with but one eye in view—to reach Rod.
Why she had induced Cyrus to employ him, to pay him a large salary.
Beyond realizing that chance had exposed Lila's hand at this Bertie Lou had no idea what she should do. Tonight Rod in the time she had caught Rod in that did not mean that it was the first lie to her.
She impulse was to go and ask Rod to give a velvet negligee her shoulders and started for the living room. But an-thought stopped her. Hadn't been second choice when she had Rod? What would happen went to him now and taxed with being still in love with the choice?
Wounded soul, struggle in the dreadful conjure up many torments. Bertie Lou's mental anguish was as real and intense as all the painful conclusions reached were true ones.
She had lied to her. He had from Lila and lied about it, and she might step aside, she could not find happiness with Lila. And then Bertie Lou thought that Cyrus never would step down. He wasn't that kind. Rod would have Lila.
Bertie Lou hadn't said to cent. The tariff commission is confined to recommendations based on any inequality of production costs working to the disadvantage of our farmers.

The Farm Bureau Federation says, using the year 1926, that that was a difference of about 35 and 26 cents a bushel between the Argentine and American production costs for corn.
The Argentines told the commission that Argentine corn didn't enter into competition with ours and pointed out that in no year under the present tariff had the price of corn in Chicago differed greatly from the price in Buenos Aires by the amount of the existing duty.
They produced evidence from grain importers who insisted that Argentine corn couldn't compete with domestic corn more than 200 miles inland because of present duties and high freight rates. I is used almost entirely by eastern farmers for feed, they said, and these farmers would suffer if higher duties caused higher prices.
In their brief, they held that their protest was largely a matter of principle—the proposed duty boost would further aggravate the unfavorable position under this country had been placed.

Less than half of 1 per cent of Argentina's corn exports are sent to this country, but that amount represents 55 per cent of our corn imports. Corn imports from the Argentine dropped from 2,220,000 bushels in 1924 to 793,000 bushels in 1926. The Argentines say this would be virtually eliminated if the tariff were increased.

They were shocked to hear the charge that many shipments of Argentine corn had contained weevils.
They are convinced that the agitation for increase was motivated by political considerations on the part of those seeking to give some semblance of relief, real or imaginary, to the American farmer.
But in the likely event that the commission finds itself sharply divided on the question it is believed that President Coolidge probably will take no action.

EXPECT 1,000 TO GO ON THE GRID SPECIAL

DALLAS, Aug. 29.—Although more than a month remains before the date of the S. M. U.-Army football game, in New York, Oct. 6, interest in the inter-sectional tilt is increasing by leaps and bounds. Early in the summer, predictions were made that at least 400 persons would make the trip to New York on the special leaving Dallas, Oct. 3. The promoters then had little on which to base their predictions and the 400 estimate was more or less a wild guess. Now, with reservations coming in from all sections of the southwest, the goal has been set at 1,000. Never before have the people of this section of the country evidenced such interest in football, especially at this time of the year.

When plans for the special were first being formulated, it was planned then to run two trains from Dallas. Already solid carloads are practically complete from Fort Worth, Waco, Austin, Wichita Falls, Houston, San Antonio and Abilene.

Bill Hitzelberger, of Dallas, who is in charge of arrangements for the trip, points out that the West Point special is not a hastily arranged affair. The trip has been carefully planned in regard to all details from the time the special leaves Dallas until all members of the party have arrived back on Texas soil.

The special will be run in two or three sections, no one of which is to carry more than nine cars, with two diners for each section. Railroad officials have arranged to transfer their most expert employees, especially those in the culinary department, to those trains, to assure the best of the service.

The cost of the trip has been reduced to $135, which does not include the return sleeper or meals because there will be no special on the route back. The trip is for 15 days and patrons may return as they desire. Stop-over privileges are allowed.

The specials will leave Dallas, Wednesday, Oct. 3 and will arrive in New York city, Friday, Oct. 5, in the afternoon. Buses will meet the party and convey its members to the Vanderbilt hotel where reservations will be made in advance. In the lobby, a clerk will exchange choice seat coupons for the game and tickets to a special theatre party, for stunts that will be given with the railroad tickets. In addition to these, other bits of entertainment are included in the round trip rate.

On Saturday, Oct. 6, the trip down the Hudson to West Point will be made by boat, the return trip to New York city to be made immediately after the game. One of the best features of the trip is the 15-day option in leaving New York. This will give those interested an opportunity to witness one or two of the world series baseball games which are scheduled to start Oct. 3.

Although applications for the trip may be arranged for until almost the last day before leaving Dallas, it is pointed out that those persons making reservations first will receive the choice of berths and cars. Hitzelberger reports that reservations are coming in fast now and the goal of 1,000 is almost assured from the advance sale.

Sports Matter

By MAX BUCKINGHAM United Press Staff Correspondent A presidential year in Brooklyn without a baseball club fighting for the pennant is discouraging to the chances of Uncle Wilbert Robinson again leading the Dodgers. Steve McKeever, one of the major stockholders, has said that Robbie must go, has claimed the club needs a managerial change and has claimed that Robbie hasn't extended his full wizardry towards the 1928 club. Robbie points to his contract, which has a year yet to run, says he intends to fulfill it—and there the matter rests.

Brooklyn team was one of the big laughs of the league. Whenever they get within speaking distance of first division the Brooklyn fans get excited but speaking distance was about as close as they ever got.

World is Wagged By 10 Per Cent

DALLAS, Aug. 29.—A tenth of the people run the world, Col. C. C. Walsh, banker, told the Dallas Lions club at a recent meeting. This ten percent maintain their leadership by developing use and control of the faculties and facilities of the sub-conscious mind. Tunney's success in the ring and in love, Col. Walsh attributed to an early determination to accomplish a purpose and then concentrating on its accomplishment.

One of them, a Virginia Leaguer, said hello, went out and sprained an ankle and was seen no more. The Nashville Lucas and the hero of this story had little better luck.

Adults Learn as Well as Younger Folks, Tests Show

NEW YORK.—The old saying that "You can't teach an old dog new tricks" is not true either of dogs or human beings, and science has proved it.

The adult of 30, 40 or even 50 years of age can learn a new trade or profession, a new language, a new art or new habits as readily as a college student, according to Edward L. Thorndike, distinguished research psychologist of Columbia University, who, with a corps of associates, has recently completed a two-year comparative study on the learning capacity of adults, adolescents and children.

"If I had to draw a general conclusion from these investigations, I should say that they demonstrate that the ability of adults to learn is very close to that of persons from 17 to 19 years of age," asserts Dr. Thorndike.

The only reason the average person is not doubly as well educated at 40 as at 20 is because he believes his education ended with his school days and consequently has not tried to learn, Dr. Thorndike believes.

Adult Study More Valuable.

The fact is that an adult usually conquers a new study more completely because he is in a position to apply it practically, he points out. The young student of French or German, for example, is likely to regard the study as a novelty and to lose much of it before he has a chance to practice it. The adult going abroad for pleasure or business will take the language seriously and apply it at once. "The best time to learn a thing is just before we need to use it, for it is using a thing that makes it an organic part of our education," Dr. Thorndike points out.

One of the Thorndike tests of general ability to learn was made with 465 persons divided into three age groups, 20 to 29 years, 30 to 39 years and 40 to 49 years. The first two groups made about the same grades, while the oldest group did a bit better.

The tests completely contradict the old belief that children learn languages more readily than adults. "We are convinced that the gain made by a group of any age from 20 to 40 will be greater than the gain made by a group aged 8 or 10 or 12 of equal native capacity," says the investigator.

A new trade or profession can be mastered as readily by an adult as by a youth, it is asserted. The most striking practical example cited is the experiment made by the New York Central railroad which, when it electrified its metropolitan lines, quickly converted the men of its locomotive crews into expert electrical engineers.

PRITCHARD TO LEAD FORCES OF THE DRYS

launched into a recital of Tammany Hall misdeeds, citing its origin, its success in acquiring political control of New York City and then of New York State, and how it further seeks to shackle the people of the United States. Pointing out how Al Smith had gone outside the Democratic party to put Republicans at the head, he said it was a scheme of Tammany Hall, with Al Smith its sachen, to get control of the White House. He declared that before the Democratic platform adopted at the Houston convention was ten minutes old, Al Smith had etched that platform and had made a platform of his own to stand upon. He declared that Tammany had opposed every good Democrat who had run for office, among them Grover Cleveland, Woodrow Wilson and John Davis. He told of seeing a New York gang at the Houston convention rush into the convention hall and seize the Texas flag and tear it to shreds, angry because Texas had not supported Smith. He declared that Tammany Hall was composed largely of aliens who did not wish to abide by the laws of this country, but they sought to abrogate the 18th amendment, sought to throw the country wide open to immigration and wanted control of the White House chiefly to make money for themselves and for Wall Street interests. He said other things, too, that indicated strong opposition to Al Smith for other reasons.

Appeals to Women

Mrs. J. T. Bloodworth spoke briefly, appealing to the women of Eastland county to vote for Hoover in preference to Al Smith. She said the liquor issue was the dominant issue for the women to consider, as it concerned the happiness and welfare of their homes, and that if Al Smith was elected president he would do his utmost to restore to its one-time honored place in trade.

Dr. B. A. Copass also spoke briefly, citing chiefly that the negroes of the country had gone over in force to the Democratic party. He said that "Goosenock" Bill McDonald of Fort Worth, leading negro Republican politician in Texas, had announced he would support Al Smith, that the negroes of New York and in other cities had banded together for Al Smith, and that the negroes generally were giving their support to Al Smith and the Democratic party. "What an upset!" he declared. He said it was the duty of Christian ministers of the gospel to work for the right, politically or otherwise.

Touring the State

Judge Sartain said that four sets of speakers are now touring Texas, working in the north, east, south and west and organizing each county. This week the yare touching about 50 pivotal cities in the state. "Sentiment against Al Smith is strong," he declared. "If a vote should be taken today, the Republican presidential electors would win in Texas by 150,000 majority, and ten weeks hence this majority will be larger. Joe Robinson has seen the writing on the wall and has called on the Democratic executive committee to send speakers and money into Texas and other southern states to try to stem the tide that will surely break over the levee that has heretofore held the South solid for the Democratic party. But the people of Texas will not be misled. The state will be one to break from the solid south and there may be others."
