Lynch Davidson Endorses Small And Jas. Young

WACO, Tex., July 4.—Senator Clint C. Small of Wellington and former congressman James Young of Kaufman are the choice in the Governor's race of Lynch Davidson, Houston capitalist, who two weeks ago announced his withdrawal from the race.

Davidson turned "thumbs down" on the other nine contestants in an address before a large audience here today, and urged that Small and Young be put in the run-off for the people to decide between.

"The rare both men of unimpeachable integrity and honesty," Davidson said. "It is my belief that the people of Texas would serve themselves best by voting to eliminate in the first primary all candidates but Small and Young. Put them into the second primary against each other, and then decide which one you want."

One by one, Davidson disqualified the rest of the aspirants as gubernatorial material.

"A candidate in his wife's name," he said of James E. Ferguson, husband of former Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson. "If elected she would only be the governor in name."

"Ferguson, Love and Mayfield—political triplets and tricksters. Professional office seekers and office holders. Worn out politicians."

Davidson said he had only kind words for Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller, but that his long anti-prohibition record was against him and he could never be elected.

"And neither has R. S. Sterling a chance to win," he said. "R. S. Sterling is part and parcel of the Moody administration. He is its hangover and its hope. With his long Standard Oil Association and viewpoint, he could not possibly do justice to Texas."

If the people elect Small or Young and the winner makes a "fizzle" in the Governor's office, then Davidson will break his promise never to seek office again and oppose him for a second term, he said.

Independence Rock Is Mecca For Boy Scouts

Wyoming Gathering to Pay Tribute to Pioneers on Oregon Trail.

CASPER, Wyo., July 4.—Independence Rock, Wyoming, the historic landmark of the Oregon Trail was mecca today for Boy Scouts from all over the United States attending their roundup and three-day ceremonial in honor of the Covered Wagon pioneers.

This encampment is the first in which so many Scout caravans have camped so far from civilization.

Independence Rock is 52 miles southwest of here. It is the point where the paths of the old Oregon Trail converged to a single wagon road. It is in the heart of the desert and yet but a short distance from the crest of the continent on the Great Divide.

Places represented by Scout delegations include New York City, Woodmere, Long Island, the first troop to place a monument on the Oregon Trail, Savannah, Ga., Cleveland, Ohio, Lincoln, Omaha and Scottsbluff, Neb.; Jersey City, N. J.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Kansas City and Atchison, Kan.; Pocatello and Boise, Idaho; Cushing, Okla.; Plainview, Tex.; Salt Lake City, Ogden, Provo and Ephraim, Utah and other points.

W. C. Wessel, camping expert for the Boy Scouts of America is camp director in charge of sanitation, feeding program and arrangements.

The purpose of the pilgrimage is to enable the Scouts of today to pay fitting homage to the scouts of the old Covered Wagon days. One of the ceremonies will be the dedication of a monument to the unknown pioneers.

Among the features of the three-day program is a Shoshone Indian village. The Chamber of Commerce of Lander, Wyoming, engaged the Indians with all their paraphernalia, to take part in the ceremonial Indian pageant which will be staged by Ralph Hubbard, son of Elbert Hubbard and a leading authority on Indian lore.

Father De Smet, the first priest to traverse the old Oregon Trail, will be honored by the Knights of Columbus of Wyoming, who will unveil a tablet to his memory. Father De Smet's initials were at one time traceable in the surface of Independence Rock, but they have been obliterated.

At the same time the Masons of Wyoming will stage a ceremony on top of Independence Rock, at the same spot where the first meeting of Wyoming Masons was held. There will be a series of musical programs by the Old Fellows Boys Band of Casper and the Professional Women's Club of Casper will dedicate a monument to the unknown pioneer women.

Another monument will be that composed of stones brought by Scouts. Each delegation will bring a stone about the size of a boy's head and these will be arranged in the form of a monument to the old scouts whose heroism opened and settled states West of the Mississippi.

The University of Wyoming with the scouts of Laramie will render a frontier pageant in which a stage coach will be held up and attacked by Indians. The coach will be the famous old "Laramie Stage" which has been preserved as a museum piece by the citizens of Laramie.

Governor Emerson of Wyoming and George D. Pratt, National Chairman of the Covered Wagon Centennial, will speak.

Troop 21, of Woodmere, Long Island, has the distinction of being the first troop of Scouts to raise the funds to purchase the monument by the sale of Oregon Trail Memorial half dollars. It is this one that will commemorate the "Unknown Pioneers" who died along the trail, and will be set at Devils Gate.

The Covered Wagon Centennial is sponsored by the Oregon Trail Memorial Association, and carries out a program of honoring the pioneers, marking and monumenting the Oregon Trail and gathering historical data.

Couple Married Under Binding Mutual Contract

NORFOLK, Va., July 4.—A marriage contract so binding upon the wife that she agrees never to claim a dollar of her husband's money and never to run up a bill of any kind without his written consent today caused possibly the widest domestic discussions in Virginia history.

"It emphasizes the true love of that union," Rev. Thomas A. Smoot, pastor of Epworth Methodist Church, who performed the wedding ceremony told the United Press in discussing the marriage of Mary Louise Baker, 29-year-old school teacher, and Carl Moore Jordan, 50-year-old wealthy lumberman.

Just who originated the contract, which was signed a month before the wedding, Rev. Smoot could not say. Its more than 2,000 words, however, stripped the marriage of every suspicion of mercenary motive and in effect reduced the wife to the status of a daughter of Jordan's 84-year-old mother, with whom the couple will live.

Even the widely-known words—"and with all my worldly goods I do endow"—were pruned out of the Methodist marriage ritual by mutual consent. Miss Baker, who met Jordan four years ago, solemnly agreed to "surrender her youth to meet the requirements of a man of fifty years of age."

In turn, Jordan made clear he undertook only "to assume the responsibilities and requirements of a man of fifty years of age" under the circumstances.

"No misrepresentation of misunderstanding of these facts is to be ever claimed by the said Mary Louise Baker," the contract demands, specifically adding that if either party ever becomes dissatisfied written notice to the other will be met "cheerfully" with mutual steps legally to terminate the whole arrangement.

Jordan legally recognized his wife's title to her own property, acquired before or after the marriage, and agreed she could do as she may see fit. Bills she may seek to run up against herself as his wife, however, must have Jordan's written consent.

The Jordans were married here Monday and now are on honeymoon.

The Housewife's Hand
Directs A&P's buying

If you hired a personal agent to buy food in the markets of the world for your own table, you would give him, first, money for the purchase and shipping costs; second, money to cover his expenses; and, third, a salary for his services.

You, yourself, would choose the kind of food he would buy.

That's just what you do when you trade with A & P.

Of every dollar which you pay over A & P counters, 83½ cents go to food producing communities in exchange for the food you ask for.

A & P's part is to find out what you want—by what you order in its stores—and to spend your 83½ cents as you direct. Of the rest of your dollar, 14 cents stay in your neighborhood to run A & P stores.

All you pay A & P for its services is the remaining 2½ cents.

*Another article will tell how your massed buying helps American food producers as much as it helps you—fair tit for tat.

BY GAD

Lest the local American Legion gets the swellhead over its numerous accomplishments, we want to call their attention to the fact on job they started has not finished. They started to clean up the old public school site and left it half finished.

Heard of a fellow who refused to donate to the Legion airpura fund because the field was not named for him. Has anyone a "sucker" for the baby?

Well, the Booster Band put on a little Fourth of July program of its own. Made a good showing, too. If the "I can't" bunch had co-operated in the program Eastland would have been thronged with people from all over the county today instead of everybody leaving town.

Keep your eye on the "Buz-zard's Roost" down on the corner.

July 6th, 1930. Mass at 10 a. m. This is the Fourth Sunday after Pentecost. The Gospel is from St. Luke V. 1-11. The words of Peter, "We have labored all the night, and have taken nothing," deserve our attention in particular, if we apply them to the business of the salvation of our souls. If we wish to get to heaven we must perform good works, for "every tree that doth not yield good fruit shall be cut down and cast into the fire."—Matt. III. 10. For a work to be meritorious, two things are required: the state of grace (that is freedom from mortal sin), and a good intention. Thus St. Paul says that without love the gift of all our goods to the poor and even martyrdom are fruitless. I. Cor. XI. I. Cor. III. It is possible that many souls now in hell did many good deeds but living in sin they did not merit for heaven. Hence sin robs us of our really good deeds. A good intention is also required because God will it. If we do good only for worldly

Their husbands fought for America's Freedom 118 years ago

These widows of the War of 1812 still live

Linking the present with the nation's dim but glorious past of more than a century ago when their husbands fought in America's second war of freedom, a handful of aged women who are carried on the government's pension rolls as widows of the War of 1812 still survive today.

Youngest of them is Mrs. Carolina King, 81, who lives alone with her memories in a little vine-clad cottage at East Aurora, N. Y., doing her own housework and tending her flowers. Her husband was Private Darius King of Stevens' Company, New York Militia, a sharpshooter, who is reputed to have been the soldier whose bullet brought down the British commander at Queenstown Heights, General Brock.

Her husband was born in Pennsylvania in 1796, three years before the death of George Washington. She married the old warrior when she was quite young. He died many years ago.

As a 23-year-old southern belle, in hoop skirt and pantaloons, Mrs. Mary A. Williams, now 97, married Dr. John M. Williams, then 65, at Baltimore on March 22, 1801. At 18 he had given up the study of medicine to enlist in Moore's Company, Maryland Militia, and fought under Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans. He died at 75, and thus she has been a widow for three score years.

With a friend, Mrs. Williams now lives in a little apartment in Philadelphia. She does her own ironing and cooking, but spends much of her time before her window, watching the children laugh and play on the sidewalk. "Do you wonder what her thoughts are?"

All told, only nine of these widows of the War of 1812 still survive, each of whom receives a government pension of $50 a month.

The others are: Mrs. Emma Arnout, Ashville, N. Y., widow of Private Samuel Arnout, Parker's Company, New York Militia; Mrs. Marion A. Clark, Iowa City, Ia., widow of Private John R. Clark, McClelland's Company, Massachusetts Militia; Mrs. Lydia Ann Graham, Brushy Run, W. Va., widow of Isaac Graham, musician, Bodkin's Company, Virginia Militia; Mrs. Mary Coleman, Claudeville, Va., widow of Private Robert Coleman, Davenport's Company, Virginia Militia; Mrs. Mary Isgrigg, Cincinnati, widow of Private Daniel Isgrigg, Cullum's Company, Ohio Militia; Mrs. Emma Mann, Greenbush, Mass., widow of Private Thomas Mann, Hastings' Company, Massachusetts Militia; Mrs. Arminia I. Anderson, Cedar Grove, Ga., widow of Robert Anderson, 11th, Naylor's Company, South Carolina Militia.

The last surviving soldier of the War of 1812 was Hiram Cronk of Ava, N. Y., who died in 1905 at the age of 105 years.

The last survivor of the Revolutionary War was Daniel F. Bakeman who died at Freedom, N. Y., in 1869, at the age of 109. The last widow of that war was Esther S. Damon of Plymouth Union Vt., who died in 1906 at the age of 92.

"If history repeats itself," says the U. S. Bureau of Pensions, "at least a quarter of a century will elapse before the chronicler of events will note the death of the last survivor of the great Civil War, and the 20th century will be drawing to a close before the last widow of a soldier of the Civil War will have passed away."

Judy ran up the stairs and flung herself into Chummy's room. She did not expect to find Chummy there, but they shared the little writing table, and she wanted to write a note to Bruce Gideon. She had just remembered that she had promised to lunch with him on the following day.

Never again!

Chummy had done wonders to her room, and it was quite presentable now. The screen around the bed and toilet table had been recovered. There were some cheap rugs on the floor. Her aunt, Miss Morley, had given her an old chest, a little writing bureau, and a tall, old-fashioned mirror. Out of her small allowance she had bought two wicker chairs, cushions for them, and a jar or two of pottery for flowers. She had the artist's capacity for imparting beauty to the simplest things; and the sun came into the room in the afternoon.

It was about five o'clock when Judy got back. She must have been later than she thought at Stornaway's. Her dancing practice had been very trying that morning. She had been practically no lunch, and she felt ready to drop. Her five senses seemed to have failed her, so that she was almost up to the writing table near the window, before she realized that the room was not empty.

Alan Steyne was standing in the window, with his back to her, reading a newspaper. He turned, hearing her, and she gave a little cry. "I thought you were in Maine!" "I came back this morning, sooner than I expected. I was just going to leave a note for Clarissa, asking her to dine. I've been with the lawyers most of the time. I'm letting my place."

"Letting it!"

"Yes—some people are very keen on it for the fishing, and the shooting later on. They're paying a big rent. I've let it for six months. It seems silly to leave it empty."

"But when you're married!" "Clarissa wants to go abroad," he said. "So do I." He was gazing at her earnestly. "Judy, you look tired to death."

"I am a bit fagged," she said, and dropped into a chair.

The mention of his marriage had started that mad fury in her brain again. Chummy was a girl good enough to marry—Chummy was not a girl of no account, like little Judy Grant! She burst into a tempest of tears, wailing and rocking herself to and fro.

Rifle Club Holds Important Meeting

RANGER, Texas, July 4.—At a called meeting of the American Legion Rifle club at the Chamber of Commerce office, after considerable discussion, it was unanimously agreed that the Sunday morning shooting would be discontinued until further notice. The range will open each Sunday at 2 p. m. The team shooting will include pistol and rifle only, followed by trap and skeet shooting for any member wishing to shoot.

A motion was made, seconded, and unanimously carried electing Roy Speed captain of the shotgun range, taking the place of Bill Clapp, who has moved from Ranger.

Considerable discussion ensued

"Will you please tell Mr. Stornaway," she said, "that I came to tell him I couldn't sit for him today? I'm his model. They said there was someone with him, so I waited a minute, but as there's no sign of him I've come away."

"That Miss Grant called to say that she was too tired to sit today. He'll understand. Thanks so much!"

And before the servant could answer she was running down the stairs and had reached the front door.

The maid went to find Stornaway and delivered the message. She found him with Bruce Gideon in his den. Both men assumed that Judy had just come to the front door and left the message. They made no comment, and shortly afterward Gideon took his leave.

Judy, meanwhile, walked as fast as her legs could carry her. She was deaf and blind with fury. She did not see where she was going, and it was a miracle that she was not run over at the crossings.

"Not the sort of girl one could marry!" It wouldn't be little Judy Grant!

The words rang in her ears like clashing bells. They roused the devil in her. She could gladly have killed both Gideon and Stornaway if she had been strong enough.

So that was what Mr. Punch thought of her! All this time he had been scheming to make her believe that he was decent—trying to deceive her. Then, when she was thoroughly blinded, when the time came, then, no doubt—

She ground her little teeth as she rushed headlong through the park.

She found herself, presently, and remembered that she wanted a new pair of stockings for her dancing practice. She was always wearing holes in her stockings, and they hurt her when they were too much darned. She was such a bad dancer and Chummy, who would have loved to do it for her, was worse.

She went into a shop and bought a pair at random. She was fiercely glad, inside her violent little being, that she owed nothing to Bruce Gideon—not a thing beyond the introduction to Guarvenius, except a few meals and motor trips. She need never eat at the same table with him or go to a theater with him again. When she wanted to see dancing, she could save up, as she used to do, and go and stand up in the gallery, or let one of the boys treat her, if he could afford it.

Never again! Never again should that odious man be allowed to do a kindness to one of her friends, as he had done to Dan.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY

DURING hot weather, much waste can be avoided if food-stuffs are given extra care and attention. Sometimes both raw materials and finished products are handled so thoughtlessly in the home that by the time food reaches the table it has lost much of its value.

An infinite amount of science and labor goes into food production. From the Department of Agriculture to the local dealer who handles the food in the last instance before it reaches the consumer, unceasing effort is made to deliver foods in the finest condition. Yet careless handling in the home defeats all these precautions.

Perishable foods should be taken care of as soon as they come from the market. Milk, fresh vegetables, fruits and meats deteriorate if not promptly prepared for the refrigerator.

Cleaning foods before putting them into the refrigerator keeps the ice box clean and saves ice.

When milk or cream or any food is allowed to stand in a hot kitchen or in unnecessarily long standing table an extra amount of ice is required to chill it and there is danger of the milk and cream "turning" sour.

Fry food delivered in paper should be stored in pans or tin cans for safety against mice and weevils. Sugar and flour are sensitive to moisture in the air

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: Gen. 12:1-3; 13:7-12; Heb. 11:8-10.

Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee:

And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing.

And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee, and will bless the earth because of thee.

And there was a strife between thee and in thee shall all families of the herdmen of Abram's cattle, and the herdmen of Lot's cattle; and the Canaanite and the Perizzite; dwelled then in the land.

And Abram said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.

Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto Zoar.

Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east; and they separated themselves the one from the other.

Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan and Lot dwelled in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went.

By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for acity which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

There are great new triumphs to achieve in the attainment of human welfare and in the progress that is registered not merely in material prosperity but in the goodness and happiness of a people.

Raw Material Control Basis Of New Study

Institute of Economics Reviews Efforts at International Regulation.

By HARRY W. PRANTZ, United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, July 3—Economic problems presented by governmental control of exports of basic commodities, a potent source of international differences since the World War, are studied comprehensively in a new publication by the Institute of Economics, of the Brookings Institution.

Benjamin B. Wallace and Lynn R. Edminister, in "International Control of Raw Materials," have reviewed the history of such important commodities as natural camphor, cinchona bark (quinine), citrate of lime, coffee, long staple cotton, currants, kauri-gum, mercury, nitrate, pearlshell, potash, dalwood, oil, silk, sisal, sugar, sulphur and tin.

The study, although unofficial, has more than academic importance because the United States government in recent years has pursued a policy calculated to protect American consumers against foreign attempts at monopoly control of important commodities, and the American influence was exerted against the British rubber restriction plan and some phases of program.

At one time the United States administration supported a plan to legalize buyers' pools in the case of raw materials subject to foreign monopoly, but legislation to this end never was complete. Recently the question of policy has become more acute because many foreign observers have felt that the United States government in its federal agricultural marketing program was embarking upon a policy substantially similar to the policies of other governments which were criticized here.

The present survey concludes that the United States never has adopted the policy of imposing restrictions on the export of raw materials, but notes a few cases that bear resemblance to the foreign controls. None of these, however, involves government monopoly of a raw material. The nearest analogy is said to be the monopoly, begun during the war, and maintained by the war department, of all the helium produced in the United States. This gas is not, however, a raw material in the accepted commercial sense, being regarded as a deficient war material.

Other resemblances to foreign controls are:

- (1) Certain state taxes on minerals, as the Pennsylvania anthracite coal tax and the Minnesota iron ore tax.
- (2) Federal aid to American agriculture.
- (3) The federal legalization of combinations for export trading, under the Webb-Pomerene Act of 1918.

The survey points out that the federal farm board has greater authority than the Department of Agriculture ever possessed; and recently there have been developments that may lead eventually to restrictive practices in American agriculture bearing a closer resemblance to foreign controls such as the Brazilian coffee defense.

They Couldn't Know

BACK IN 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

The mind of 1818 couldn't conceive of the miracles that human ingenuity would perform during the twentieth century. It couldn't imagine the wonders that would be wrought by new agricultural methods and modern manufacturing genius. It was ignorant of transportation as we know it, or the progressive sales methods of today. It could not see the vital part that would be played by advertising.

Even today there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, antiseptic surgery or automobiles. It keeps us up to date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

Don't lay aside this paper without reading the advertisements

IN THE REALM of SPORT

WITH THE TEXAS LEAGUE

The Waco Cubs, defeating Houston, while Wichita Falls was losing to Dallas, went into a triple tie for the first place in the Texas League race for second-half honors Thursday. The Cubs, Buffs and Spudders all have won six games and lost three.

Waco playing ban gup baseball behind the tight pitching of Bill Harris, defeated Houston, 5 to 2, proving they can win as well in the daytime as at night time. Harris held the Buffs to five scattered hits while the Cubs made ten.

The Dallas Steers scored regularly in the late innings to erase a five run lead made by Wichita Falls in the second inning and won, 8 to 6. Lee Meadows, former major league star, limited the Spudders to five hits in the seven innings he pitched.

With Hamilton, shortstop, hitting two home runs, San Antonio nosed out Beaumont, 9 to 8, in a ten-inning game. The Exporters, outpitching the Indians by 17 blows to 11, were unable to brush their hits and had 11 men stranded on bases.

Two home runs by Larry Cox, Fort Worth right fielder, one in the eighth inning and one in the ninth, defeated Shreveport, 8 to 6. His eighth inning blow tied the score at six-all.

With The Majors

There is an old baseball axiom which says that the clubs out in front of Independence Day will go on to win the two major league pennants.

With a two game lead in the American League, the Philadelphia Athletics seemed certain to hold their front line trench over the holiday.

The Athletics were pitted against the Red Sox at Boston in a double-header, while the Senators and Yankees, their closest rivals were battling each other in a twin bill at Washington.

In the National League Brooklyn held a lead of .0065 of a percentage point over the Chicago Cubs, and by nightfall either club may be on top.

The Robins clashed with the Giants in two games, morning and afternoon, at the polo grounds, while the Cubs were pitted against the Pirates in a pair of battles at Pittsburgh.

The New York Giants, in fifth place, were only 5 games from the top, and a double victory over Brooklyn would transform the National League race into a three-cornered affair for the time being, anyway.

The Athletics have won 15 out of their last 19 games, are traveling at their fastest clip of the season. After their last disastrous western trip, the Athletics seem to have found themselves at home, and won 14 out of 18 against the western invaders.

Washington is hanging doggedly to the Philadelphia's heels and has won 14 out of its last 18 games. The Yanks have won 12 out of their last 16 games.

Earle B. Mayfield, and to a lesser degree, Barry Miller, have profited by a general distribution of their vote. And the general uniformity will be a bulwark of strength to Chmn. Sterling.

The campaign is being forced into a clear-cut division of candidates into the camps of those on economic issues and those on political issues.

Sen. Small's support is tied primarily to one locality; but he has sensed the significance of a statewide spread—even though thin—and is insisting in his speeches that he be divorced from the idea of sectionalism.

Earle B. Mayfield, and to a lesser degree, Barry Miller, have profited by a general distribution of their vote. And the general uniformity will be a bulwark of strength to Chmn. Sterling.

The campaign is being forced into a clear-cut division of candidates into the camps of those on economic issues and those on political issues.

Thirty beef tongues will play an important part in the celebration to be staged by the Blackfeet Indians at Heart Butte today.

The tongues will be sliced in transparent strips by the women of the tribe. If the woman niches one of the strips during the slicing, even slightly, the Indians believe it is an indication she has sinned and must confess to the medicine woman in the presence of the entire tribe.

Its front feet were but but five toes, the appearance of a thumb. Its ears also resemble phants, being large and flat. It had only three teeth, each side of its jaw and in the middle.

It had only one eye, its peculiar snout. The freak weighed three and lived only a short time.

political aspects of even the business or economic issues.

This division practically amounts to professional vs. amateur in the realm of candidates.

R. S. Sterling is running for his first elective office. Small is seeking his first state office.

The rest are old-timers in the game of politics. Love has been one of what Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald has called the "moleworkers," or inside politicians of professional politics for many years. Mayfield and Miller and Young are seasoned veterans at the game.

It is a paradox of the resourceful, skilled strategists of the area, using every trick of the professional, to get out on the stump and talk about "less politics" in state affairs.

The biggest single factor that points to growing advantage for Sterling, the amateur of politics, is this:

Every one stresses the fact that a large part of the vote is still uncommitted. Thousands of voters are undecided, even this late with only three full weeks to go before election day.

Mr. Sterling came into the race much later than any of the others. The voters were dissatisfied with all the array of willing talent in the field. Obviously they were dissatisfied with all these candidates. He is a middle ground man. He is free of the alignments and the drawbacks of the old political wrestling bouts of the past.

Logic points to the greater part of the uncommitted vote milling into the Sterling camp.

It may be said this drift has accounted for a degree of his growing strength that has been so strongly emphasized by his supporters and campaign workers.

Except for Mr. Sterling, Sen. Small was the latest candidate in the list; and his own entry was prompted by obvious dissatisfaction with those earlier in the lists. So it may be said that he likewise shares in the benefit of the late swing of voters into final alignment.
