Too Much Cotton Will Bankrupt Farmer, Is Claim

BY RAYMOND BROOK AUSTIN, Tex., May 24.—Bankruptcy for Texas farmers may be the result of a good cotton crop this year.

Farmers in West and Northwest Texas who have not yet planted their cotton had better leave the land lie out in pasture, or plant something else, to help in a way avert a threatened disastrous overproduction, he said.

Mr. Terrell said the 5 per cent decrease in cotton acreage still will leave about 17,000,000 acres prospectively in cotton this year, that ought to be good for 5,000,000 bales.

Mr. Terrell said the crop condition in the 58 counties of North Texas, as of May 15, was 71 per cent normal, or approximately the same as last year, and the 44 counties of West Texas 82 per cent normal.

Mr. Terrell said about one-fourth the total acreage remained unplanted May 15, and of the northwestern district, one-half the prospective acreage was unplanted.

M. H. Wolfe, general manager of the Farmers Marketing Association of America, Inc., says:

My forty years of experience in the cotton trade teaches me that if we can organize enough farmers into our Association to control one million bales of cotton, joined by others who will follow our lead, we can influence the price of cotton four or five cents per pound this fall.

Unless something definite is done quickly the next cotton crop will likely sell very cheap. Every man and woman in the South is under sacred obligations to help prevent such a disaster.

Gould To Return To America After Seventeen Years

By RALPH HEINZEN United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, May 24.—Frank Jay Gould, now firmly enthroned as gambling czar of the universe, is going to break his 17-year voluntary exile and go back home to the United States for his first trip since prohibition, either in June or July.

"I want to see for myself what havoc prohibition has wrought, if any, for all I know of my country since 1913 I have learned through others or the newspapers," Gould told the United Press today.

In 1913, after winning a long legal fight over a mid-western railway system, Gould came to Europe on vacation. After deciding to stay in France, Gould started making investments, all of which have proven very profitable.

Many see in him a reincarnation of the old Jay Gould, with a Midas-like touch that can turn anything into gold.

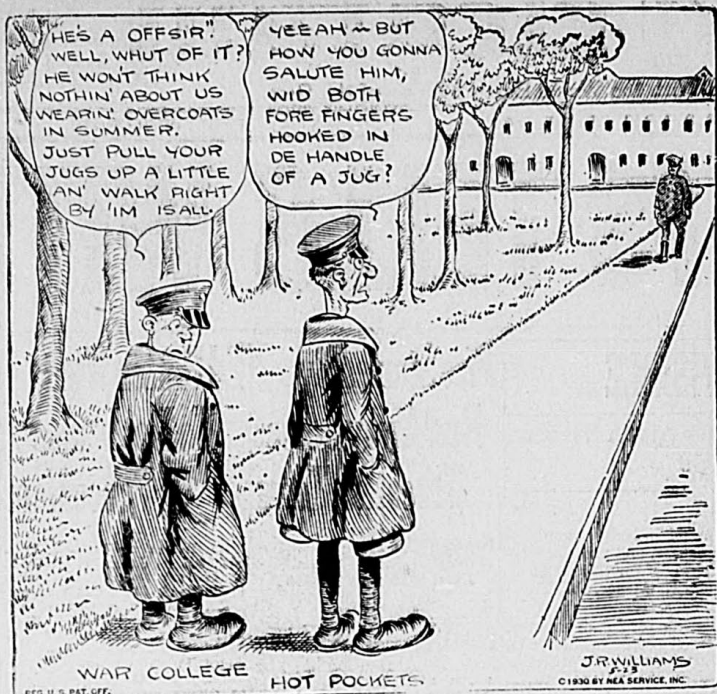

He has bought up the whole town of Granville to make a rival to Deauville. Whenever he drives across country and finds an inn which appeals to him, he buys it, advertises it and draws the tourist crowds.

He owns other industries making white paper and automobile bodies, owns sawmills and forest acres, and has in all between fifteen and twenty million dollars tied up in his foreign investments.

In the 17 years, he has held to his American investments as well as has maintained a New York office.

Although he has one of the largest wine cellars in the world, in his monster gambling casino, in all Nice, where there are 4,000,000 bottles stacked side by side, Gould does not drink. He is anxious however to see what change prohibition has worked on American resort life, and for that reason will spend the summer along the east coast with a trip to Hollywood and San Francisco.

Plane Made Ready For Buenos Aires Non-Stop Flight

BRAINARD FIELD, Hartford, Conn., May 24.—The big, single-motored Stinson monoplane "K" was moved out of a hangar today and made ready for a non-stop, refueling flight to Buenos Aires.

The take-off, which has been postponed for various reasons several times, was scheduled for Sunday, although the pilots had been confident they would get away today.

Mechanics had several tasks to complete, however, before the ship could be pronounced fit for the hazardous 7,700-mile air voyage, which, if successful, will establish a new distance flying record.

Three pilots will occupy the fleet cabin plane when it leaves Brainard Field, Captain Herbert C. Partridge, flight commander; Lieut. Commander George R. Pond, U. S. Reserve, former commandant of the Squantum, Mass., Naval Air Base and Lieut. Geo. Peed, former Pan-American Airways flyer.

Pond and Peed took the plane aloft last evening after mechanics had labored all day to make it ready for a start this afternoon.

The test flight resulted in a decision to revise the oil cooling system. A generator and radiator had to be installed today and tested and it was believed the "K" would not leave until at least one practice of refueling contact had been made.

Two Injured In Attack By Boys

DALLAS, Tex., May 24.—Two residents of Melissa, Collin county, were in a Dallas hospital today while police sought a gang of youngsters who attacked them near White Rock lake last night.

Jesse Jordan, 32, was stabbed several times, while J. G. Graves, 30, was badly bruised about the face. Robbery was believed motive for the attack.

The half dozen youths signaled the two men as if in distress, and when they slowed down, two boarded the car and assumed a belligerent attitude. The car was stopped and the ensuing free-for-all ended only when Graves shouted a threat to shoot, though he was unarmed.

Here's a steeplechase fish that actually leaps the hurdles—and it isn't just another "fish story," either. This queer "walking fish" recently exhibited at a Chicago sportsmen's show actually does move over the ground, stand erect and jump—and if you doubt it, here's the camera's evidence.

NEA Chicago Bureau There is a sea gull flying around somewhere over Lake Michigan today flapping his wings and bragging to his fellow gulls about his "operation."

Two small boys were fishing off the lake shore. The gull spied their bait and swallowed it, hook and all. The boys dragged in the bird, but could not remove the hook.

Anton Koenig, employe of St. Mary's hospital, was passing. He carried the gull to the hospital where Dr. Paul S. Epperson and Dr. William Studley performed the strangest operation in the history of the institution. They gave the gull an anaesthetic, removed the hook, and sewed up the incision. The gull soon regained consciousness, wobbled about for a while, marched toward a window, and flew out over the lake.

A recent compilation of new

those on which work was beginning or ready to begin—showed a total expenditure of more than $3,500,- 000 in the twenty-four communities enumerated. . . . Texas may rank 37th or 38th in education rank, measured by some criteria; but the kind of school buildings it maintains cannot be one of them.

Rural electrification is making rapid headway in the Rio Grande Valley, where farm density is high.
Last year the Central Power and ded 670 farm users to its line and brought its total to 2,123. . . . The big Brownwood water project with irrigation as a major element is held up by the necessity of condemnation proceedings to acquire some of the lands that will be overflowed. With the money in the bank and many citizens anxious to see the project get under way, it is at a standstill until condemnations

CELLULOSE INDUSTRIES MAY USE PEANUT HULLS

Peanut hulls, now regarded as a farm waste, with a value of only about $2 a ton for fuel
may become commercially important as a source of cellulose to supplement cotton linters and wood pulp in America's rapidly say D. F. J. Lynch and M. J.
Goss, chemists of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, who have been seeking to discover and develop profitable outlets for this farm waste of the Southern States.

Several attempts to dispose of the 70,000 tons of peanut hulls which collect annually at the shelling plants in the Southern States have as yet met with only small success. Hulls have been used experimentally as roughage in cattle feed but they have little feed value; small quantities are incorporated as a diluent in fertilizers; and attempts have been made to use the hulls in magnesia plaster, tiles, and fiber concrete, but the Bureau of Standards reports that the fiber concrete is weaker than the concrete prepared with hardwood chips.

It is only a matter of time,
say the chemists, until the depletion of the forests and the attendant scarcity of wood pulp, together with the rapidly increasing demand for a cheap, high-grade cellulose inadequate. The search for a supplemental supply would naturally turn to our cheap farm waste products. Peanut hulls, because of their cheapness and their availability in large quantities at the shelling plants, appear to offer a promising source of cellulose for the future.

"I suffered for a long time with "stomach trouble," said Mr. Frank
B. Norman, 825 Mississippi street, Amarillo. I had a very poor appetite and after eating I was subject to painful accumulations of gas. I was becoming very nervous and did not sleep well at night. I was troubled with constipation and found it necessary to take cathar-tics constantly. I was losing strength and energy and no matter what I tried in the way of medicine nothing seemed to help me.

"I seemed to improve in health
from the time I began taking Kon-jola. My appetite picked up and I was able to assimilate my food better. I did not have that tired feeling in the morning and my work was easier and more pleasant.
Constipation soon passed and cath-artics were no longer necessary.
After continuing the treatment for a time I realized that Konjola was the medicine I should have taken long ago. I am continuing to take Konjola and am recommending it to all my friends."

Given a real trial over a period of from six to eight weeks, Kon-

All tires aren't alike. Maybe you can't see the difference. . . . but it's there! And that difference is what the tire can give you in the way of mileage.

Now comes a tire that actually shows you what it can do. . . . on a car like yours and over roads such as you travel.

It's the Goodrich Silvertown. . .

tires that made this record. Tires identical in materials, construction, workmanship, ability to perform.

When you buy tires, buy good tires. Come in. . . and we'll show you tires that have demonstrated just how good they are.

The Husband Hunter

© 1930 by NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Natalie Converse, jealous of her husband, quarrels over Bernadine Lomant. Alan seeks sympathy from his secretary, Phillipa West, who successful schemes to arouse Natalie's suspicions, and she leaves Alan. Wounded pride prevents either from seeking a reconciliation, and Alan turns to Phillipa, who plays her part so cleverly that they soon become engaged.

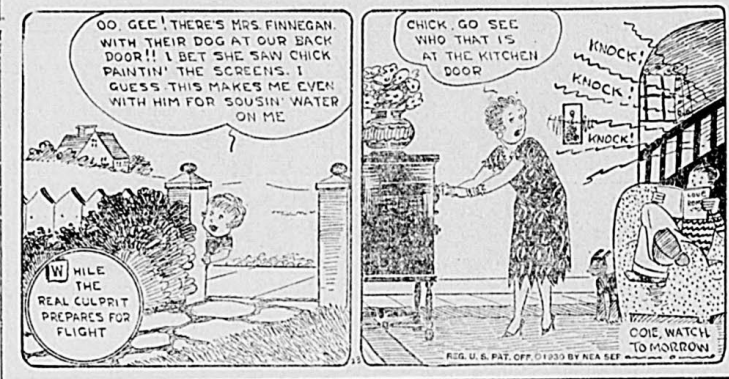

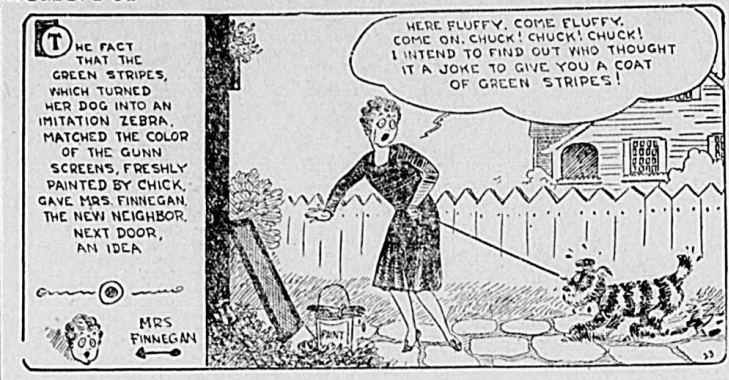

Natalie writes Alan, informing him of her return to Phillipa, fearing of losing Alan, tells him she is obliged to leave home, because of trouble with her father. Alan's meeting with Natalie, who brings her young sister, Florence, with her, leaves Alan hopeful, but baffled as to Natalie's intentions. Ashamed of his neglect of Phillipa, he goes to her apartment the next day, and without directly asking it of him, he agrees to pay for the furnishings. Natalie asks to talk to him, and he invites himself to dinner. He goes home to dress and is about to leave when the Phillipa telephones. She appears distraught and hurt when he tells her he cannot take her to dinner.

After an evening of friendly but evasive talk, Natalie appeals to his love for her, and Alan, torn by his knowledge of his love for her and his entanglement with Phillipa, is silent. Natalie believes that Alan does not love her. Alan goes, asking if he may return the next evening.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI

It was not a week before Alan was back in his home. Though there had been a short period during which he believed he never would live there again, Phillipa had flatly refused to release him from his engagement. When he left Natalie to seek this release, he went to Phillipa's apartment, and found her engaged in making it habitable with the few pieces of furniture that had been delivered that day. He could see on her face traces of the mental storm she had been through. But he did not know that it was temper; he thought it was pain. He felt like a brute all evening over the way he let her down about dinner and getting moved. His feeling had perhaps made it impossible for him and Natalie to reach an understanding. Phillipa, less on his conscience, might not have stood so immovably in his way. But he decided to face the issue with her square, and now he had to go on with it, or know he was a moral coward. She plainly showed her surprise at seeing him, and essayed a sweetly welcoming smile. He had enough of that at home. Tell me what you came here to say. What's a ghastly mistake?" Alan's eyes wavered. He hated what he had to do, frankly called it rotten. But Phillipa was ready for it. She did not draw back an inch. "Say it," she commanded. "About us," he said finally. Phillipa choked back the bitter laughter that rose to her lips. She realized suddenly that she must get herself under control. She could scratch just as effectively if she kept her claws sheathed until she needed them.

She retreated to her chair and sank into it, weakly. "You mean—our engagement?" she asked with as much calmness as she could summon up. "Yes," Alan nodded. "I never can love anyone but Natalie, Phillipa. Phillipa slumped in her chair, with a heartrending moan. Alan looked away from her. God, if being sorry would help... Phillipa began to sob and gasp out broken sentences at the same time. "Why do I have to be the one to suffer?" Oh, Alan, Alan, why weren't you sure? You needn't have done it! I can't stand it, oh, don't you see? I can't stand it!" She had slipped from her chair to the floor, a huddled heap of misery that wrenched and tore at Alan's heart. He was speechless with contrition. Phillipa raved on. "Oh, what a fool I've been. What a fool, to love you like I do. My whole life is ruined." She swayed writhingly, as though in actual physical pain. "Phillipa, for God's sake, don't," Alan entreated her.

She looked up at him. Her face was contorted, but her eyes shone dry of tears. Alan did not notice, being stricken by her startling expression. He drew back as though she had struck him a blow. "Don't you see?" she wailed. "If you desert me now, Alan, I just can't stand it. It would be too terrible to live here alone, and I couldn't anyway, I couldn't afford it, and I'd never work for you again!" Alan opened his mouth to speak, but she rushed on, stopping him. "I couldn't go back home, either. Dad wouldn't have me, and Mother would be heartbroken."

A Quaint Old Indian Custom!

"Stop it, Phillipa, please," Alan exclaimed in desperation. "I'm not a brute. We can talk this thing out sensibly."

"Sensibly!" Phillipa flamed at him. "That means that you don't care how I suffer!"

"It means nothing of the kind," Alan answered resignedly. "Please get up." He put his hands under her arms, and lifted her back to her chair.

"I'll kill myself," she sobbed, relaxing against him. "I can't lose you, Alan, I love you too much."

"But Phillipa, what could I make of it after what I've told you?" he asked helplessly.

Phillipa lifted her face. "Were you happy with Natalie?" she retorted hotly. Then, beseechingly: "Oh, Alan, you weren't. You know you weren't. It would just be like that again. I'd let you go if I thought you would be happy, but I know you wouldn't. Natalie couldn't have loved you, to leave you like she did. I'll make you happy. Think of the wonderful times we've had together. I know we'll be happy. And I won't, I won't, I won't let you go!"

Her voice had risen in a crescendo of emotion, her hands were flung up to his arms, pulling him down to her. "Alan, Alan, kiss me, kiss me," she begged.

Alan stooped over her, blank despair in his heart.

Alan did not go to Natalie's the next night. She did not expect him, for he sent a message to say he would not come. He offered no explanation, but said: "God bless you," at the end of it. Over which benediction Florence uttered a knowing "Humph," when she read the telegram.

She had refrained from taking any direct action against her sister's supposed rival until after Alan's expected visit. But now that he was not coming, she went ahead and perfected her plans.

Andrew was necessary to them. She wanted him to take her to a public library. She hated to leave Natalie alone, but she already had a date with Andrew, and she was eager to get into action.

"Take an aspirin and a hot bath and go to bed," she urged her sister, when she was ready to leave the house. Natalie's pallor and quiet hopelessness worried her.

"If she would only rave and rant and break up a few pieces of furniture, I'd like it better," she said to Andrew, for she had to tell him what she intended to do, so he'd be a help and not a nuisance.

He agreed to aid her, and said: "Gee, kid, you've got a sacrifice!"

'A straight line is the shortest distance.'

You need a flashlight or an alarm clock. That's one point in a common geometrical problem. Somewhere a manufacturer is making, a store is offering for sale, exactly the flashlight or alarm clock you should have. That's the second point in your private problem . . . And advertising is the straight line that shows the shortest distance between the two!

Day after day, in the advertising pages, you'll find straight lines drawn direct to the products you need. Look for them. Follow them. They may save you hours of searching.

And more than time, they'll save you money. Advertised products are those whose honest worth has made them popular. Merchants and manufacturers who advertise regularly have passed the public's test of fair dealing and reliability. By studying their announcements in the light of your own needs, you can buy most wisely and well.

Read the advertisements and practice straight-line buying.

PRIMO CARNERA

Primo Carnera faces a heavy date in Philadelphia, June 23, if the proposal to match him with George Godfrey goes through. The Black Shadow test often has spoiled the chances of other heavyweights and many ring critics believe Massa George can prove conclusively that Primo is not a Powerful Panatela, but merely a Big Bologna.

bureau's teachings of never giving a man up until he has been worked on at least three hours. The educational motion picture film, "When a Man's a Miner," in three reels, was made in the Illinois coal fields. It tells the story of "Lucky" Burns, a careless miner, who first derides all safety instruction, but is moved to take a safety course given by a Bureau of Mines rescue crew after his life has been saved by a miner applying first aid measures. Trapped underground following an explosion, "Lucky" assembles a group of miners and organizes them for the building of a barricade where the air is still good, and from whence they are eventually rescued by the mine rescue crews.

Plane Cracks Up In Load Tests

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 24.—The new plane in which Lieut. Harold Bromley hoped to span the Pacific Ocean to Japan was wrecked and the test pilot was critically injured when the plane crashed at Muroc Lake while it was undergoing load tests today. W. H. Catlin was the flier who was injured. It was understood that he was attempting to take off with 900 gallons of gasoline when the machine cracked up. The report of the accident was made by the Lockheed plant at Burbank, but only meager details were available.

Aged Soldiers Of The "Old South" To Hold Convention

AUSTIN, Tex., May 24.—One hundred soldiers of the Old South, garber in faded gray, their aged, dimmed eyes kindling to the sight of the Stars and Bars under which they trudged to glorious defeat, will leave Austin June 1 for Biloxi, Miss., to attend what is expected to be the last all-Southern gathering of Confederate hosts. They will go from the state Confederate home here, and will be by far the largest Texas contingent. The aged soldiers who laid down their guns 65 years ago this spring, will make the trip comfortably by train, in special cars furnished them by the Southern Pacific lines free of cost. They will be accompanied by Col. A. W. Taber, superintendent of the home, by attendants, nurses and a physician.

Col. Walter Acker, Sr., of Houston, last remaining member of the Confederate army in official position in the state government, likely will accompany the Gray cohorts from his state. Mr. Acker is a member of the legislature; but he will retire, and in his going the Confederacy will lose its last representative in the government of Texas, when the legislature reconvenes next January.

in designated street package collection boxes. Previously, it had to be taken directly to post offices. Metered postage may also be used on miscellaneous parcel post shipments, whereas it has been permitted heretofore only on parcels of identical size and shape, in lots of two hundred and fifty. The extent to which the use of postage meters has increased since its first approval in 1920, is indicated by the government's announcement that in the fiscal year 1929 approximately one billion five hundred million letters bearing the metered postage symbol were handled. With the recent broadening of the regulations, permitting local mailings, general use of postage meters by all concerns having considerable amounts of mail daily is predicted.

for their consideration. Mr. Barton has lived most of his life in Eastland County and until the past few years was a resident of Gorman.

He makes the following statement:

"After careful consideration, and upon the earnest solicitation of my friends over the county, I have decided to enter the race for Sheriff."

I have lived in Eastland county most all my life and have had considerable experience as a peace officer. I was appointed sheriff of this county to fill out the unexpired term of Sam Nolley, who resigned in 1922, and served for two years. My friends have long felt that I should serve a second term as sheriff, and especially has that been their desire during the past several months.

"I shall submit my name as a candidate for nomination at the Democratic primary in July, with the assurance to Eastland County that if elected, my policy as sheriff will be one of fair and equal enforcement of law, diligence in the service of processes of court, a square deal to all who may be charged with crime, and a recognized responsibility for the reasonable comfort and safe keeping of all prisoners in my custody."

I court the active support and confidence of every man and woman in Eastland county, pledging my best efforts in maintaining the dignity of the law and creating an environment that will encourage obedience to law."

WEATHER MAN TELLS HOW TO OUTRUN A TORNADO

"In level, open country," says the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, "an automobile often affords the best means of protection from tornadoes, except where a well-constructed tornado cellar is available."

"Tornadoes occur chiefly during the day, and thus in open country they can often be seen for several miles. Though by far the most violent of all storms, the tornado covers, at any one moment, a relatively small area; generally not greater than that of a few city blocks. While the winds blow at enormous speed around its center, the progressive movement of the storm is a whole is quite moderate, averaging about 40 miles an hour, and in very few cases reaching 60 miles an hour."

"Most tornadoes move toward the northeast, a few toward the southeast, and the rest, with almost negligible exceptions, in some other easterly direction. Moreover, the path generally varies but little from a straight line, so that the direction in which a storm is seen to be moving is likely to be the one that it will follow until it dies out."

"From these facts it follows that when a tornado is sighted several miles away a person generally has

time to escape by taking a course at right angles to its path, and the automobiles obviously a valuable adjunct for escape, provided there is a road leading in the right direction.

One positive proof that a storm is a tornado is the elongated, funnel-shaped, or cylindrical cloud dangling from the sky toward the earth. This cloud is not always seen, but the general appearance of the sky in the direction of a tornado is usually very striking. The clouds are thrown into a wild turmoil and are strangely colored; jet-black, greenish, or purple where dark, but often mingled with steamlike grays and whites. A terrifying roar, which has been compared to thousands of railroad cars crossing a bridge, may be heard at considerable distance."

Foe Of Treaty

The London Treaty "was not necessary at this time," Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, chairman of the Navy General Board, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington. He is pictured above as he testified that, in his opinion, the United States navy should have been built up to its maximum strength under the terms of the Washington treaty before a new pact was formulated.

WOMEN'S CLUBS ASKED TO HELP IN "BUYING" STUDY

The modern housewife must choose what she needs for her home from hundreds of different retail articles. Her mother and grandmother found only a limited number of kinds and qualities of articles offered for sale, and because they made many things themselves at home they knew quality. The homemaker of today has little to guide her in respect to quality and is greatly in need of authoritative buying information.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture and the American Home Economics Association have been interested in the possibility that specifications might be provided on the most commonly used household articles offered for sale. One necessary step in drawing up such specifications, or statements of facts concerning quality and performance, is to learn what information the homemaker lacks; what facts she wants, especially in the case of larger purchases.

Discussion of points connected with the purchase of food, clothing, textiles, and equipment, by women's clubs, would help in the formulation of specifications in several ways. First, as each topic comes up every homemaker can list the commodities under that head which could be purchased more satisfactorily if they were labeled with quality or performance information. This will help indicate which articles should receive attention. Then each woman can give in detail the particular facts she wants to know about each article on her list.

One woman wants to know how to choose a blanket. Is all-wool better than part-wool? How should table linen be judged? What is meant by weighted silk neighbors for their kindness and it wear. There are dozens of other commodities on which questions immediately suggest themselves. Careful consideration of a few articles will be more helpful than casual attention to a larger field.

The Bureau of Home Economics and the American Home Economics Association will welcome lists of commodities suggested by women's clubs, along with a statement of the points needed on each as an aid in buying. Forms for recording this information will be supplied on request to the Washington headquarters of either of these organizations.

A series of definite programs for women's clubs on the subject of consumer purchasing has been outlined by Ruth O'Brien, of the Bureau of Home Economics. It also may be obtained by writing to the bureau in Washington, D. C.
