Gas Collecting In Sewers May Have Been Cause

He was blown from the front of his shop into an automobile standing nearby.

Lindsay Hutchinson, deputy sheriff, was in the clothing store of Hunter and Egan at the time of the explosion. He described it as similar to an earthquake shock which he went through in Los Angeles a few years ago. He said there was a rumble and then came the terrific blast. "The center of the store came right up," he explained. "Shelves and goods toppled over onto the floor. There were a number of customers in the building," Hutchins said, "but most of them were able to escape." Engineers said the explosion was similar to one which shattered a part of the business section in 1924. All the district affected is close to the river. There was no early estimate of the damage.

Tariff Measure Is Considered A 'Hoover Bill'

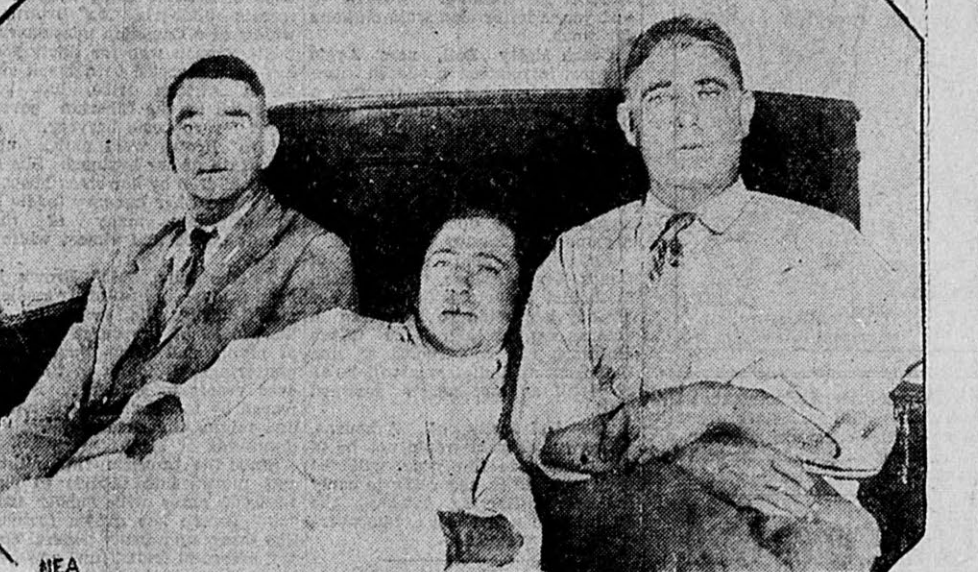

By PAUL R. MALLON, United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—In the face of continued silence from the White House administration leaders, the name of the president with his $500,000,000 tariff revenue bill. Answering the farm bloc charge that Mr. Hoover would not stand for such a general tariff revision, his congressional leaders are going as far as they can to spread the impression that it generally can be considered a "Hoover bill" in connection to the house bill which Mr. Hoover obviously did not favor. While this dispute goes on in and out of senate doors, the senate was approaching a vote this week on a most important phase of the bill, the proposal to continue the flexible tariff provision and the United States tariff commission.

Two other matters are on the calendar for the week, the Shearer naval lobby inquiry which will open Friday with Charles M. ### Rogers Hopes To Rest Wife's Case This Afternoon

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas, Sept. 16.—Apparently satisfied with his efforts to free his wife of a charge of bank robbery, Otis Rogers, chief defense counsel for Becky Rogers former co-ed, rested his case this afternoon and court was recessed in order to allow district attorney Fred Blundell time to arrange the order of his rebuttal witnesses. NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex., Sept. 16.—Becky Rogers let out a muffled "snicker" during her trial on Bank robbery charges in Judge John Watson's district court today. The cause of her sudden mirth probably will never be known for it was subdued almost as suddenly as it appeared. It came at the conclusion of Dr. W. A. Smith assistant physician at the San Antonio state hospital. Dr. Smith had just testified that Becky was insane when she robbed the Farmers National Bank of Buda back in 1926. Several bewildered farmers and women spectators sitting near the counsel table "caught" the slight snicker and grinned perceptibly. After the brief outburst Becky slipped back into her role of disinterested and stared blankly at a spot on the wall. It was the third time during the trial that Becky has given vent to her emotions. Once she laughed outright at Prosecutor Fred Blundell and another time she smiled at her husband and chief counsel, who is trying to keep her out of prison. The second witness of the morning session was Dr. Frederick Fink San Antonio. He testified that the defendant was irresponsible. Dr. Fink at one time lived at New Braunfels and was the family doctor of several members of the jury. NEW BRAUNFELS, Sept. 16.—Farm people from this little community of German-Americans came to the county courthouse today in spring wagons and astride horses to hear Otis Rogers, "young attorney" complete defense of his co-ed wife, Becky. Otis had won sympathy from the spectators who crowded into the room during the past week when he stoically built up a plea that his "Becky" was insane when she robbed the Farmers' National bank of Buda three years ago. Rogers had announced he would call four doctors today, exact from their additional testimony to the insanity of his wife, and rest his case. His final witnesses will be Dr. Livingston Anderson of Corpus Christi; Dr. Frederick Fink and Drs. W. J. Johnson and W. A. Smith of the state hospital at San Antonio. All were said to be familiar with the girl's case. Rebuttal testimony for the prosecution will be started by recalling Sheriff George Allen of Hays county, in which Buda is located. District attorney Fred Blundell said he would also use Dr. Joe Wooten, Austin alienist, in an attempt to refute defense testimony that Rebecca is unable to differentiate between right and wrong. Both the state and defense indicated they have surprise witnesses up their sleeves, the defense intends to save theirs until rebuttal testimony is over. Indications were today that the case would reach the jury about Thursday. With her mother, Mrs. Grace Bradley, Becky spent Sunday resting in their cabin at Camp Gieseecke, near here, while Otis sat in conference, planning the defense which is calculated to keep her out of prison. WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—A senatorial investigation of injunctions issued September 9 by Judge W. H. ### Robbery Occurs This Afternoon At 1:15 o'Clock

One Stands Guard While Other Scoops Up Money; Escape in Auto.

MINCO, Okla., Sept. 16.—Two bandits looted the First National Bank here at 1:15 p. m. today and escaped with $3,000. The bandits entered the bank and suddenly thrust a gun between the teller's window where Assistant Cashier C. E. Estes was working and demanded the money. While one stood guard, the other bandit scooped the money from the tills, opened the safe in the vault and took the money to their car awaiting outside. Several customers who came in during the robbery, were lined up against the wall. Their job complete, the bandits attempted to lock Estes in the vault. He pleaded with them that he would die if left there without a lock expert in many miles. They closed the vault door but did not lock it. The bandits drove their new Buick car northward and had gone a good distance before citizens' posses could be organized. ### Peacock Murder Case on Trial

Earl Francis Peacock, Dapper Radio Salesman, Charged With Killing His Wife

By JULIUS FRANDSEN, United Press Staff Correspondent. WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Earl Francis Peacock, a dapper young man dressed in immaculate style, nonchalantly strolled into court today to defend himself of a charge of murdering his young wife, Dorothy Heintzelman Peacock. The imperturbability which Peacock showed when he was arrested after his wife's body had been found burned April 22, remained with the youthful radio salesman today. His manner was almost scornful as he sat down at the defense table and started conferring with his chief counsel Sydney A. Syme. His natty gray suit, black tie, polished black shoes and spotless white shirt contrasted vividly with the almost shabby black clothing his mother, Mrs. Catherine Peacock, wore. She seemed far more nervous at the impending events than did Peacock. The first hour was kept occupied with preliminaries. Defense counsel asked the court to call names of several witnesses before the defense could announce itself as ready. The first witness called was Eugene Buesey, former Johns Hopkins student and a radio operator, who allegedly kept several letters with Mrs. Peacock and who wrote several letters to her. He was not in court and it was announced he was on his ship in Central America and the commandant would not permit his returning to the United States before Oct. 15. His letters probably will be introduced into the hearing without his personal identification. The question of what defense is to be made for the young radio parts salesman aroused interest as examination of jurors started. He indicated the defense would admit many points. "We admit that he killed this woman," he said at one point. "We are going to admit that after killing Dorothy Peacock, Peacock carried her dead body out of his apartment and left it in a log cabin woods in Greenburg." "We admit that the body was left in Greenburg on April 22 and that Peacock returned to the States before Oct. 15. He poured benzoline on the body and then set it on fire so that it was burned badly."

Identity Of Holmes Slayer Believed Known

Widow of Dead Attorney Gives Name of Person She Believes Guilty.

By L. A. WILKIE, United Press Special Correspondent. BORGER, Sept. 16.—Texas rangers this afternoon were questioning a former pal of William J. (Whitey) Walker, notorious Southwestern bad man, in connection with the assassination of District Attorney John A. Holmes. The man was Eddie Bailey, who, along with Walker is charged with the murder of two Borger deputy sheriffs in 1927. Bailey voluntarily gave himself into custody of rangers when he heard he was wanted for questioning in connection with the Walker angle of the Holmes murder. State's witnesses in the case against Whitey, Bailey was released from jail last Monday on a $7,500 appearance bond. At the time Holmes was killed he had in his pockets a confession said to have been made by Bailey which implicated Walker in the deaths of the two officers, Deputy Sheriff Kenyon and Terry, who were shot to death two years ago when they accosted three men on a road near the boom oil town. Bailey said he had been in Oklahoma City since his release. Walker is in jail at Stinnett, awaiting trial. Identity of Holmes Slayer Believed Known Investigation. Brawley has been a prosecutor in the Panhandle for many years and has a record of many convictions.

Judge Pickens, however, said no prosecutor pro tem has been named by him, nor had a recommendation been made by him to Governor Moody except that very careful consideration be given as to the appointment.

"I'll be frank about it," he said. "If I should be named prosecutor here after this assassination, it would kill the blood in my veins, but I would get at the bottom of it."

"I told the governor I had no recommendations to make and I am sure when he names a man, he will name a good and fearless one."

Berger citizens with hundreds of friends from the Panhandle, were getting ready Monday to attend the funeral of Holmes at Panhandle at 4 o'clock.

The services will be in charge of the Masonic order of which Holmes was a member. Pastors of four Berger churches and other churches of the Panhandle will join in the last rites.

Mrs. Holmes, widow and pal of the slain man, was bravely trying to bear up under her grief Monday, after having spent a fairly restful day Sunday, under care of physicians.

Rangers were buying themselves in an attempt to find the missing confession involving Whitey Walker, who is charged with the attempt to hold up the Stock Yards National bank in Fort Worth, two years ago.

BORGER, Sept. 16.—Mrs. John A. Holmes, widow of Berger's assassinated district attorney, has given state rangers the names of the men she believes responsible for the murder of her husband.

The bereaved woman said that Holmes had told her of men in Berger that he had reason to fear, and it was the identity of these that she revealed to investigators.

It was intimated that the killing was done by a hired assassin, but Ranger Captains Frank Hamer and Tom Hickman, not entirely satisfied with this information, today were carrying their investigations along several other lines in the hope of running down additional clues before fixing any blame.

Rangers refused to divulge the widow's allegation.

Holmes was shot down Friday night in the back yard of his home, a half dozen blocks from the police station, while every officer in the city was attending a prize fight.

As a result prominent Berger citizens have suggested a mass meeting to demand strict enforcement of the law, full investigation and prosecution of the Holmes murder and resignation of the entire police department.

At the same time Mrs. Holmes requested that members of the police department not visit her home while the body of the slain prosecutor remained there. Holmes will be buried this afternoon at Panhandle.

As state officers continued their investigation today another killing occurred at Berger, Melvin Hotchkiss, a truck driver, was stabbed to death at a party.

Holmes was to have appeared before a federal grand jury here today to tell what he knew of anti-Volstead violations and general lawless conditions in the oil town, which is alleged to be the center of gigantic wholesale liquor rings.

Alex Mood, assistant United States district attorney from Fort Worth will carry on the grand jury investigation here. Holmes is the missing link and Mood may have to delay wholesale return of indictments until another term of

Conference Grid Teams Preparing For First Games

At the time Holmes was killed he had in his pocket a confession said to have been made by Eddie Bailey, which connected "Whitey" Walker alleged gang leader, with the murder of deputy sheriffs Kenyon and Terry near Berger two years ago.

Bailey was released from jail here Monday under $7,500 bond, and is now believed to be in Oklahoma City. Walker, arrested as a suspect in the Lamar, Colo., bank robbery and murders, was recently returned to Stinnett where he is in jail awaiting trial for the two Berger killings.

Mood declared he would carry on the liquor conspiracy investigation as best he could despite the death of his principal aide.

The names of men Mrs. Holmes believes responsible for her husband's death were given Sunday in a conference between the Rangers, District Judge E. J. Pickens, District Attorney Clifford Brawley, of the adjoining district, Ray Allred, county attorney for Hutchinson county and other county officials.

Ranger Captain Hamer was checking the whereabouts of two men and a stolen automobile in which it is believed the assassins made their escape.

wood in politics, declaring that Uncle Sam would be better off with a wife who could do a better job of housecleaning and manage a few economies.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—With the season's first week of intensive grid training behind them southwest conference football men are conditioning themselves for the early season games, the first of which are to be played Sept. 21 when Baylor meets Stephen F. Austin college and S. M. U. meets Denton Teachers.

After watching the candidates during their first training period, sport critics are sticking to pre-season forecasts that Baylor University looks like the best team in the conference, on paper, at least.

Coach Morley Jennings has a fighting bunch that will in all probability be composed entirely of veterans. Included in his wealth of material is a pair of guards that are almost unbeatable. One of them is Bochey Koch who had an excellent record last year but who is reported in better condition this season. He tips the scales at 197 pounds and is plenty fast on his feet. The other is S. L. Withers, regarded by many as having an even brighter future than Koch.

During the first week of training candidates for squads which are included in Baylor's schedule have developed the keenest sort of appetite for "bear meat." "Beat Baylor" has already become the watchword of every school.

Rice Institute at Houston is admittedly making no attempt to climb to first place in the conference standing. Instead, the Owls will wisely condition themselves and perfect their machine for the 1931 season. They are handicapped this year by the absence of veteran players and there is only a remote possibility of their causing any excitement this season.

The remainder of the teams in the conference have set out in a very serious attempt to win laurels for themselves—and any one of them stands a chance.

Texas University will have a strong team despite its forward wall having been shattered by graduation last year. There was plenty of good material the past week and from which Clyde Littlefield might choose to fill the gaps. More than 50 men answered the Longhorn call for training, including some of the outstanding backs and linemen in the conference.

Texas Christian University is expected to offer some excellent grid performances and is regarded as one of the strongest contenders for the berth which Baylor is supposed to occupy.

The Texas Aggies showed well the past week, despite unfavorable weather for training. Twelve of last year's letter men were on hand for work.

Coach Matty Bell, new Aggie mentor, introduced a dozen new plays and put his men through a quick succession of punting, passing and both offensive and defensive tactics. Bell is a coach of proven merit and he is certain to build a team that will be a dangerous foe to contend with. The Aggie schedule does not include a game with Baylor this season.

Under the able guidance of Coach Ray Morrison, the Southern Methodist University Mustangs are already beginning to look like a veteran aggregation. Line Coach McIntosh has constructed a line that from all indications will be as powerful as last year's forward wall.

The University of Arkansas, which rumor said would not be in the conference this year, will be very much in it, according to early indications. Barring mishap, the Razorbacks will boast a line averaging 200 pounds.

Markets

Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Impressive strength in shares of the eastern petroleum companies stimulated broad buying operations on the Stock Exchange today after the entire market had held within a comparatively narrow range in the early trading.

Attempts were made by bearish professions to force recessions throughout the morning but these met with failure following sharp advances in Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of New York and Royal Dutch.

Standard of Jersey changed hands in enormous blocks as it crossed the 82 level, selling at the highest price in its history. Royal Dutch also touched a new high. Advancing tendencies broadened in the afternoon with a wide assortment of issues running up sharply.

United States Steel common advanced more than 4 points over its early low, establishing a fair gain for the day, while gains of a point to more than 5 points were scored in the principal trading stocks. Radio again turned buoyant, running up several points while American and Foreign power featured the utilities.

It scored a sensational advance of more than 6 points to a new record high. Other utilities, however, were erratic with United Corporation under pressure.

Rails, likewise, were less prominent, although sharp advances were scored by leaders of the PARIS, Sept. 16.—Amid the thumping of drums in the devil bush of a tribal camp deep in the west of Liberia, "Ma" Brown, 55, widow of a Canadian missionary, a white woman who for thirty years has been married to a black chief of an African tribe, has been knighted by the Liberian government for supreme bravery.

"Ma" Brown went native upon the death of her husband. She has four children by her black husband, and around her hut now toddle her grandchildren, many of them blonde-haired and almost white in color.

To the tribe, "Ma" Brown has been a loyal and faithful "medicine man" curing ills more by her knowledge of the curative powers of plants and drugs than by evil mutterings, although at times she does resort to witchery. She is feared by the superstitious natives and reigns almost as a queen over thousands of blacks.

Since the American rubber interests moved into Liberia to plant 1,000,000 acres with rubber trees, "Ma" Brown has grown fortunate. She threw up a busy general store and caters in fruits, fowl and fresh bread for the Americans engaged in clearing the forest and their thousands of workers.

"Ma" was knighted for saving the Liberian army from almost certain extinction in an ambush in the depths of the forest. The army had as its mission the subjugation of one of the smaller tribes which refused to send men for contract work in a Portuguese colony at the instructions of the government.

As the army moved through the forest, the tribe deployed in ambush, "Ma" Brown heard of the ambush and ran ahead, argued the rebels out of their position and saved the army. She took her knighthood philosophically and announced she did not intend to become "Lady" Brown but would remain "Ma."

Despite thirty years in the tropical forest, she has kept her English and its Canadian accent. She has reviewed newspapers and can

Mob Violence Is Feared Because of Woman's Death

By UNITED PRESS

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Sept. 16.—Fearing mob violence, authorities today placed extra guards over five men, two of them negroes, charged with the killing of Blanche Bloodworth, 23, University of Mississippi senior.

Miss Bloodworth struck by an automobile in which the men were racing with another car, was thrown from a 50-foot high bridge. Annie Lee Crawford, 22, walking with her was knocked down and run over. Her condition was reported critical today.

The five prisoners were removed to another jail yesterday when townspeople and students gathered about the jail and shouted threats.

A university student driving the other car with whom the negroes were racing was arrested but later released. No charges were filed against him. Driver of the machine which killed Miss Bloodworth was a negro known to police as "Nine Fire."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—American industry now is in control of more than 96 per cent of "the greatest market in the world," the American Market, and is exporting in increasing quantities each year, Senator William C. Borah, Ida.

MOM'N POP

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

Here before him stood a girl who might be his own flesh and blood. And yet he did not believe.

her story and with your grand- daughter," Brent returned quiet- ly, "but with you, sir, I should prefer not to deal were it not forced upon me."

"Forced upon you, eh?" The remark seemed to puzzle the old man. But he was not at a loss for action. Swiftly he turned to Helen. "Who are you?" he cried excitedly. "An imposter, I sus- pect."

Helen jumped to her feet. "Oh, let us go!" she appealed to Brent. "Most willingly," he said in- stantly, "if I could forget my promise to your father."

"Then tell him, tell him quick- ly, and let us go," Helen pleaded, completely ignoring the man who struggled helplessly to rise from his chair.

Brent faced him. "It is an ob- ligation to a friend that brings me here, Mr. Cunningham," he said simply. "And this young lady is neither Miss Brent as I introduced her to spare you a shock, nor an imposter. She is Evangeline Nellin."

Mr. Cunningham sank back in his chair and closed his eyes. When he opened them they set upon Helen with a devouring eagerness that frightened her.

Here before him stood a girl who bore his daughter's name—a girl who might be his own flesh and blood. And yet he did not believe. He could not believe. It was unbelievable. He didn't want to believe. Yes, he did. He could make her suffer, make Evangeline suffer. They had sent her, sent the girl, here to make their peace with him. Well, he would show them how little they had to hope for. Show them quickly enough, too.

"Evangeline Nellin," he sneered. The sneer changed fiercely to a snarl. "What do you think I am, a doddering old fool?" he thrust at Brent.

Brent shrugged. "I believe you would not care to listen to my opinion of you, Mr. Cunningham," he said evenly.

"Eh? Eh?" Mr. Cunningham was surprised. "You see, I happened to have been a friend of Charles Nellin's," Brent explained. "I did not know your daughter, but I have seen her photograph. I do not care to ex- press my opinion in her daugh- ter's presence of a man who would ill-treat her?" "Ill-treat her?" Mr. Cunning- ham screeched. "Ill-treat her?" "Well," Brent passed it off with a gesture, "let us get this inter- view over with as quickly as pos- sible. I assure you it is as dis- tasteful to us as it is to you. Miss Nellin came to you only because her father gave your daughter a death-bed promise to bring her here."

The shriveled figure stiffened, sat upright with the erectness of a mummy. A quiver ran across the thin lips and down to the thin hands. Pallor as deep as death settled upon the worn countenance. And those who watched were con- strained to pity.

Dead! Evangeline was dead! They saw the remorseless truth of it eat into his soul. He bowed his head upon his hands and suffered his blow in silence, except for the painful expulsion of his breath.

"I'm sorry, sir," Brent said with a touch of gentleness. "I should have broken the news less harshly but..." He left the sentence in the air to imply that he had be- lieved in Mr. Cunningham's show of implacability.

Cyril Cunningham lifted his head. "Tell me about it," he said weakly.

"I'd suggest that you first sum- mon your valet or companion and let him give you something to steady you, sir," Brent replied, concerned with the effect of the shock he had dealt the old man.

"I'm all right," Mr. Cunning- ham insisted, but quite obviously he was in great physical distress. "Just hand me that glass, please," he directed, reaching out a hand toward a nearby table.

Brent did as he requested. The glass was, he thought, contain- ing something Mr. Cunningham had been on the verge of taking when they entered his room, for the liquid was of a pale, grayish tinge.

Mr. Cunningham swallowed it quickly, and settled back in his chair to rest a moment before speaking again. Brent and Helen waited.

Finally he turned his eyes upon Helen and in them was a softer light. But there had been no miraculous change in him. His sorrow still was colored with bit- terness.

Who these two were and what they wanted of him he had yet to when he said: "I grant you that Nellin had his faults, but he was an artist and he loved his wife enough to prefer vagabondage to losing her."

"Vagabondage." The word came as a mere whisper and Brent went on without a pause.

"I have kept the secret of Helen's parentage for 15 years," he said at the end of the story. "Frankly I had no wish to bring her to you, sir, but as I've said, I was compelled to do so. And I have not hesitated to reveal your character to her as it came to me from my friend, Charles. Every- thing rests with you and Helen now, but I hope..." He paused and looked at Helen.

"Yes, yes," Mr. Cunningham cut in abruptly, "what is it you hope?"

Rather pretty acting, Mr. Cun- ningham thought, if it were act- ing. Very convincing.

"Yes," Brent said, "I have it." "And you never let me see it," Helen wailed in reproach.

Brent smiled wearily. "Remem- ber," he said, "that I didn't want the past to claim you."

Mr. Cunningham broke in with an impatient tapping of his cane. "Have you come here to discuss this matter with each other or with me?" he asked acridly.

"I beg your pardon," Brent apologized quickly, "but you see, Miss Nellin did not know until yesterday who her mother and father were."

Mr. Cunningham's gaze went from one fact to another, seeking an answer to this amazing state- ment.

"Perhaps," he suggested, "since you have come here it would be better if you told me your story from the beginning."

"Right," Brent agreed. "When we have done that we shall have no further obligations to you or to your daughter and her hus- band."

"Nellin! Is he alive?" "He is not, and please listen, sir, without interruption."

Mr. Cunningham nodded in as- sent. Brent told him then of how he was called to Mexico to the bed- side of his dying friend, Charles Nellin, and given charge of the little girl who was named for her mother, Evangeline.

"They called themselves Mr. and Mrs. Page," he explained be- fore he went on to tell how he had brought Helen up, "because Charles feared that one of your agents might find them and suc- ceed in separating him from Evan- geline."

"So he had cause to fear that, had he?" Mr. Cunningham did not express his thoughts aloud, but Brent sensed it, as he revealed

Ranger Mother Says Anyone Can See the Improvement Orgatone Has Made in Them.

The merits of a medicine are spread by testimony, and this explains the phenomenal demand and wide spread popularity of the remarkable medicine, Orgatone, those who once buy it invariably buy it over and over again and tell their friends of the splendid results they have derived from its use. Mrs. E. T. Matthews of 414 South Marston St., Ranger, Texas, feels very much indebted to Orgatone for what it has accomplished in the case of her two daughters, age 19 and 22 years. Mildred and Willie, and in a statement a few days ago said:

"Both of my daughters had been nervous and complaining with their stomachs for about two years. They seemed to have no appetite, their food would not digest and they were restless. They just seemed to be weak and debilitated, half sick all the time and I was very worried about their condition.

"But they're looking all together different now. I noticed in a short time after I started them on Orgatone they got full of life and energy and began to eat and enjoy their meals. I had given them one bottle of Orgatone and their appetite is good and they are much stronger and better in every way. They look brighter, seem more cheerful and take an active part in amusements and social affairs with the younger set. I'm glad I gave them Orgatone, for it certainly has done them a world of good and any one who knew their condition can readily see the wonderful improvement they have made."

Genuine Orgatone may be bought at Eastland at the Texas Drug Store.—ADV.

She Landed It!

Mrs. Paul T. Boityn, above, of Fargo, N. D., has seen so many quizzical looks when tales of big fish being landed are told that she decided a picture would be ample proof of her big catch. And this shows Mrs. Boityn with a 42-pound muskallonge, 26 inches in girth, which she captured in the Hainy river district of Ontario after a 25-minute struggle. She used an ordinary casting rod and light tackle.

A surprising feature of the proceedings at Yankee Stadium was the turnout of some 40,000 fans, despite the fact that the world's champions were mathematically out of the race for first place.

The Detroit Tigers, who are reduced to battling for a place at the top of the second division in the American league, downed their nearest rivals, the Washington Senators, 16 to 2, in the opener at Griffith Stadium. A second game, with Marberry and Uhl engaged in a pitcher's battle, was halted by darkness at the end of the eighth inning, with the score tied, 3 to 3.

Watching the Scoreboard.

Yesterday's hero: Willis Hudlin of the Cleveland Indians, who helped maintain the club's grip on third place in the American league race by shutting out the New York Yankees with three hits, 10 to 0. Old Tom Zachary shared the day's honors by blanking the Indians with only four safeties in the first game of the double header, 1 to 0. It was the veteran's eleventh straight victory, but came after the Philadelphia Athletics, who were not scheduled to play Sunday, had clinched the pennant.

The Chicago Cubs drew up to within one game of clinching the National League pennant by trouncing ruthlessly over the Brooklyn Robins, 13 to 4. Charley Root pitched as well as was necessary while his mates fattened their batting and base stealing averages. Rogers Hornsby hit his 37th homer.

Bill Walker of the New York Giants shut out the St. Louis Cardinals with six hits, 4 to 0, but a comparatively unknown rookie, known as Jim Lindsey, turned the tables and beat the New Yorkers, 6 to 4.

The Boston Braves took two more defeats at the hands of the Cincinnati Reds and saw their last hopes getting out of the cellar vanish. Jackie May beat them 6 to 1 and Gudat, a southpaw rookie, starting his first game in fast company, won, 4 to 0.
