Both investigations showed that city water was not being used by the two families where the disease was reported.

PRESIDENT HOOVER AND HIS AMAZING FLIPFLOP

President Hoover is a slow traveler. Four years ago Alfred E. Smith declared that the 18th amendment was a colossal failure and that its revision as well as the revision of the Volstead act would be only a matter of time. President Hoover declared that the 18th amendment and the Volstead act were the warp and the woof of the noblest experiment in history and that repeal or revision would never come. Smith was crucified for his courageous attitude as to the pro amendment and enforcement act and the tragic evils which had followed in the wake of their enactment. A "holy war" was declared against the democratic standard-bearers. Smith had ever been a state's right democrat. He did not change in 1928 and he stands today where he did in that famous year which led to democratic slaughter at the polls and also led to a million Southern democrats, inclusive of 200,000 in Texas, bolting the nominees of their party and voting to keep the reins in the hands of the man who viewed the amendment and the acts as "the noblest experiment of history" and never to be changed by the American people. All this is ancient history—perhaps.

Now all these bolters from the democratic states did their level best to crucify National Chairman John J. Raskob. They hammered him unmercifully. They branded him as a republican wet in the holy atmosphere of the synagogue of Jefferson. Less than a year ago Raskob enunciated his famous home rule plan for state control and national legislation to safeguard or rather to protect the states that would go dry under the new dispensation. All this from invasion by the states which would go wet by majority vote of their citizenship. It was then that the dry leaders, democratic and republican, proceeded to give Raskob a merciless trimming or skinning for his so-called audacity for recognition of the rights of the state to say how the liquor problem should be handled and again he was denounced as a wet republican in the camp of holiness of modern democracy.

Why continue? President Hoover has made his speech of acceptance. He jumped far in advance of the platform declaration of his Chicago convention. He swallowed the Raskob plan of state control of the liquor problem with the federal government as the police power to see that there should be no invasion by wet states of the dry commonwealths by wet states of the dry commonwealths of the sisterhood. Of course, the great engineer preached a long sermon, but he tossed the noble experiment in the ditch of doubt and disgust and in doing it he performed an acrobatic somersault that should place him in the hall of fame as one of the nimblest as well as one of the most swift-footed performers that ever attempted under a big circus political tent to ride two horses going in opposite directions. This is his common ground for all reasonable people to bring about a solution of the noble experiment problem of liquor control.

"EACH STATE SHALL BE GIVEN THE RIGHT TO DEAL WITH THE PROBLEM AS IT MAY DETERMINE BUT SUBJECT TO ABSOLUTE GUARANTEES IN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES TO PROTECT THESE STATES FROM INTERFERENCE AND INVASION BY ITS NEIGHBORS. AND THAT IN NO PART OF THE UNITED STATES SHALL THERE BE A RETURN OF THE SALOON SYSTEM WITH ITS INEVITABLE POLITICAL AND SOCIAL CORRUPTION AND ITS ORGANIZED INTERFERENCE WITH OTHER STATES."

This was the state's rights plan of solution advocated by the democratic standard-bearer four years ago. This is the home rule plan that John J. Raskob, the predecessor of James A. Farley, advocated. This is practically the plan of the Chicago platform plank which has as interpreters Franklin D. Roosevelt and John Nance Garner, ever ardent and loyal champions of the rights of the state to settle its own problems as guaranteed by the makers of the federal constitution and remain wet or dry as the majority of the electorate of a commonwealth shall declare at the ballot box.

Now where will the democrats go who bolted the ticket four years ago because they said that Herbert Hoover was the patron saint of prohibition and its noblest champion under American skies? On which the battle for the constitution of the fathers for a government of all the people, and their sacred interests, for the destruction or uprooting of special privileges to the few at the expense of the many under the flag of Jefferson carried in this campaign by a distinguished statesman of New York and another distinguished leader of the people who was born and reared and has fought his battles not under the skies of Texas but as a national lawmaker in the federal halls of legislature.

PUMPING FACTS INTO THE PEOPLE

It is a matter of record that since Ross Sterling took charge of the state highway department in 1927 there has been built in Texas 9432 miles of all types of roads. It is said that the way the calculator proxy arrived at his $100,000,000 canard is to multiply the total miles of road built in the last six years by the present day cost of construction per mile, and deduct that amount from the total money received for the department in the six years. He knows, and if he doesn't know he should be told, and everyone else knows, that the present cost of construction is about 50 per cent less than it was six years ago.

State Auditor Moore Lynn's report shows the average cost of concrete pavement in 1925 and 1926 to have been $2.54 per square yard while the present average cost is $1.19 per square yard. Think of the insult to the intelligence of the people of Texas to attempt to cram such political rot down their throats. Publicity is the thing the state over, newspaper publicity, and it should be the sacred duty of the sons of the fourth estate under Southwestern skies to place before the people all the real facts and figures taken from the record of highway building during two years of proxy government and nearly six years of constitutional government. Pass it along the line. Distribute printer ink literature. Smash the smoke-screens and the mirages which obscure the vision of the uninformed or misinformed or those who have been led astray by the flimsiest political harangues ever broadcast from the stump in Texas.

This Is What They Mean by Good Round Dollars

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

"Only recently we came across your interesting article in the Ranger Times," writes the National School of Pressure Cooking of Eau Claire, Wis., from the Chicago office, about the rusting of tin cans, and the possibility of the water used in canning as being the cause.

"We are wondering if any of the vegetables that caused rusting had been sprayed with something to prevent disease and to discourage insects? If these vegetables were sprayed, would it be possible for you to obtain information about the composition of the sprays used? If you can, we will appreciate the favor very much."

We took that last sentence to mean that if we can find the information about the sprays and not if we can vegetables, so we asked Roy Jackson about the city water and Ben Whitehouse about the use of sprays on the vegetables that caused rusting. Mr. Whitehouse said that in his opinion the hard water of Ranger made it necessary for the vegetables to be cooked longer than when soft water is used and the fact that the soft-water directions were used in many instances was the cause of the rust. As he expressed it, vegetables cooked in hard water had to be cooked longer in order to expell all the air from the cans. When all air is expelled iron oxide forms, causing the rust on the tops of the cans.

This information was relayed along to the N. S. O. P. C. and it is hoped that it will be of some benefit to them. Maybe someone else is having trouble with the canned beans rusting on them.

The Breckenridge bowlers defeated Ranger Monday night, but not without a struggle. The Ranger team led in the first and second games, but was far outclassed in the third, losing to Breckenridge by a score of 2,198 to 2,172. One foul was the cause of part of Ranger's grief in the last game, which was lost by a score of 682 to 779, the only game in which the Ranger bowlers scored less than 725.

Pearl Cox was high man for Ranger and third high for the match, lacking but five points of equaling the score made by J. Brezner and lacking but three points of equaling the score of H. C. Grushaw. The three high scores were 487, 485 and 482.

The fourth annual invitation golf tournament of the Thurber club will be held at Thurber on Sept. 3, 4 and 5 this year. An elaborate program has been worked out with closing play of the qualifying rounds of 18-hole medal play being played on Sept. 3. A driving contest will be held at No. 1 tee at 9 o'clock and a dinner and Calcutta pool will be held in the clubrooms at 8 o'clock.

On Sunday 18-hole match play will start in all flights. Monday the semi-finals will be played in the morning, as will the consolation in all flights. Finals start at 2 p. m. Monday, Sept. 5, with a presentation of prizes at 5:30. A dance will be held Monday night at 9 o'clock.

The SKELETON OF AN INSECT IS ON THE OUTSIDE OF ITS BODY!

CONCERT AUDIENCES of the 18th century were a severe trial for the performing artists. Conversations kept up right through the best concerts, and silence warnings were liberally scattered through the programs, with special requests that the "ladies be governed by a becoming silence and decorum." Egg and vegetable throwing was common, and the fear of having a ruined dress kept many a true music lover at home.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

DAVID GIBSON, publisher of the Lorain (Ohio) Journal and Mansfield (Ohio) Journal, says: "Did you ever stop to think that the true basis of prosperity in every community is the home?"

"In the past we have believed that business must prosper before the home would prosper—we have been putting the economic cart before the horse; for sooner or later, directly or indirectly, everything that exists is for the home.

"In these American cities, even the smaller ones, within the past 12 years we have been building elaborate commercial structures that are in a large per cent vacant, and monumental public edifices that are now a tax burden to citizens of reduced incomes.

"All the while these same cities have been 50 per cent underhoused—that is, below a decent standard—often 12 persons sleeping in a single room and frequently two families within the same space separated by an improvised partition or curtain. This is what a banker friend of mine calls the inharmonious distribution of expenditure.

Death Halted Manoel's Work On His Books

LONDON. Historians and bibliophiles hope someone will carry on the valuable literary research in which the late ex-king of Portugal was engaged when he died.

Manoel, whose library at Fulwell Park, Twickenham, contained what is said to be the greatest private collection of Portuguese literature and documents in existence, was writing a history of Portuguese literature at his death.

The story of Portugal's great 15th and 16th century exploits overseas, of her famous navigators and explorers who wrested a rich and vast empire out of distant lands and blazed new trade routes around the world, is told more completely in ex-king Manoel's old books and manuscripts than anywhere else.

Manoel's survey of Portuguese literature is drawn from these rare books and is in the form of an elaborate catalogue with many reproductions of the original texts. Several of the most magnificent books in his library were printed in the 15th century. Two are in Hebrew, and appeared in 1489. The only book known to have been printed in Portugal at an earlier date is a single copy in the British Museum. Another 15th century book is the perpetual almanack (1496) of Abraham Zacuto, the astronomer and mathematician whom Vasca da Gamma consulted before he set off on his pioneer journey to India.

The first book known to have been printed in the Portuguese language also is in the library. It is Ludolpho of Saxony's "Life of Christ" in four volumes, which appeared in 1495.

What ex-king Manoel described as "the first Baedeker" is one of the most interesting volumes. It is a "Sumario" of Lisbon for 1554. There is also a volume of commercial regulations printed at Lisbon about 1539, notable chiefly for its illustrations of animals (among them the squirrel and the Pekinese dog, unknown in Portugal at that time).

Abilene Post To Have Two-Day Rodeo and Races

ABILENE, Texas.—Plans have been mapped and dates are set for the annual American Legion rodeo and race meet—slated this year as a two-day celebration. The dates will be Sept. 5 and 6, the first day Labor Day, and the place will be the West Texas fair grounds.

Featuring two complete days of horse racing, rodeos, dances, minstrels and barbecues, the affair is being scheduled as one of the biggest of its kind ever held here, the committee pointed out.

Approximately $1,500 in prizes are to be given away in the horse racing and rodeo events, and the best performers and horses are to be asked to take part in the attractions.

Legion officials are planning still more forms of entertainment for the host of people expected in Abilene for these two days. They will be announced through the press at a later date.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—All the Washington correspondents are reminded that a presidential campaign is in progress because the mimeographs of the publicity machines of the Republican and Democratic parties are limbering up and increasing production with such accelerated gusto.

We are all aware of it anyway, of course, but any old worm likes to turn over on its back and rest for a moment occasionally, forgetting the immediate exigencies and trying to pretend that this is just an ordinary summer in which no more than the customary amount of effort and celebration, if any, is necessary.

As Chairman Jim Farley of the Democratic National Committee well says: "The opening of a campaign such as we are about entering is always a period of more or less confusion of thought, as well as of action."

Main Adopts New Patriarch

ADRID.—The Second Spanish Republic now has its patriarch—recently given Don Alejandro Pux y Garcia.

Showing the death of the 84-old deputy, Dr. Narciso Vas-Lemus, only one or two elderly republicans were left in the Cortes and Lerroux in age and vigor.

Don Alejandro has been out of cabinet since the radical party drew its members from parliament in the government last summer. For a few months after the socialists and the republicans were quite rivals, and it was the big gulf was being bridged between them. Lately, however, this animosity has disappeared. Although officially in the position benches, the radicals on the left recent occasions have dealt with the governmental coalition of left republicans and socialists.

When the multi-millionaire depu-rom Majorca, Don Juan March, asked the minister of public works, Indalecio Prieto, and the minister of finance, Jaime Carner, as Lerroux who rose on the floor of the Cortes and declared the attack was not against ministers, but against the government, but against the republic. At that moment on, the title of patriarch of the Republic" was conferred on the white-headed Lerroux now is 68. He was born March 4, 1864. The radical party, however, was founded in 1911, now is the oldest republican party in existence. In the course of its 21 years' existence, however, it is not considered a center party will go home not a left party. The patriarch of the Republic is not in perfect health, but still able to be able to continue to render valuable services to the republic for some years to come.

for LOVE or MONEY by H.W. CORLEY

MONA MORAN, receptionist in a wall street office is in love with BARRY TOWNSEND, rich and socially prominent, whom she has known since childhood. Steve and Barry have just returned from South America where—largely by chance—Steve became associated with Barry in operating a diamond mine, once believed worthless but now valuable. Steve owns a huge diamond called "The Emperor of Peru." Gargantuan try to steal the stone but he outwits them. Steve has earned Mona's gratitude by befriending her errand brother, BUD, sending him to South America and giving him a job at the mine. Mona needs $500 for hospital treatments for her invalid father. Her employer agrees to loan her the money and then makes an amazing proposal. He tells Mona a wealthy client wishes to marry her immediately with the understanding she shall occupy her own apartment, have unlimited charge accounts and do whatever she wishes for a year. At the end of that time she may become the man's wife in actuality or secure a divorce. She asks the man's name and is told it is Barry Townsend.

Mona agrees. Her friend, LOTTIE CARL, meets her in a fashionable dress shop. She goes with her to the Townsend home. There Mona meets the man who is to marry her, Young Barry and Steve have sailed for South America.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

In a flash Mona understood what had happened. Barry and his uncle had the same name. But only Mr. Garretson and a few intimates ever called the older man "Barry." On legal documents the name was "John Barnett Townsend."

Mona had given her word to marry this stranger. The wedding had been arranged, beyond doubt, to harass young Barry further. Someone—Barry himself possibly—had blurted out his interest in the red-haired girl in Garretson's office and this had been his uncle's retaliation!

She saw the whole revolting plot. She would be John Barnett Townsend's wife in name only but young Barry would not know that! She could secure a divorce within a year! Doubtless (Mona's lip curled at the thought) she would be persuaded, with no choice in the matter, to get a divorce. The divorced wife of his uncle would not appeal to young Barry. She was practically being hired to hoodwink Barry—hired as surely as though the account opened in Mr. Garretson's bank in her name had been doled out in salary checks.

Mona turned to Mr. Garretson and was amazed to see only the kindest concern on his face. Was it possible that he knew nothing of the fraud? Garretson must have inferred all along that Mona understood it was the older man she was to marry. Mr. Garretson had not even dreamed she knew young Barry, much less was in love with him.

"Can you sit up, Barry, if I hold you?" Mr. Garretson was saying anxiously.

The minister, a lean-faced young man, drew nearer. Mrs. Faxon arrived from somewhere and the nurse cleared her throat expectantly.

"But you aren't going to marry this old man!" Lottie whispered sharply to Mona. "They've fooled you—don't stand for it. If you lose your job I'll see you through."

Mona shook off Lottie's objections and moved nearer. She'd go through the ceremony. She would live up to her part of the bargain and she'd take the money they offered and use it, too. In some way, somehow, she would make John Barnett Townsend pay! He would pay for ruining her life and ruining Barry's life.

"So Barry wouldn't stay," she repeated, smiling, with no sign of the turmoil in her heart. "Possibly he didn't approve of your choice of a bride." Her voice sounded metallic, unnatural.

FOR once Lottie was speechless. She watched Mona calmly remove her glove, clasp hands with the man who had betrayed her trust, and in a few swift sentences become his wife.

"And now shall we go?" Mona smiled, when she had become Mrs. John Barnett Townsend. "As I understand it, I am free to come and go as I wish, to make my home at the Townsend house in 53rd street."

Her husband bowed. "To come and go as you like with, of course, one stipulation almost unnecessary to mention. You are to conduct yourself so that no action in any way reflects on your new name."

Mona bowed.

Mr. Townsend waved a generous hand. "Go anywhere you like for a few days—the Ritz, Atlantic City. A suite in the 63rd street house is being renovated for you. Garretson will arrange all financial matters. Suppose you take a week enjoying yourself. Shopping possibly, visiting your family, getting adjusted to your new—er—situation. Take your friend here with you." He broke off in a spasm of coughing.

The two girls left the room in silence. Mona, head held high, said nothing as they walked down the wide staircase. At the foot she turned to Lottie.

"A year isn't forever—" Flinging her head back she turned to the butler. "Tell Mr. Garretson that he'll find us at the—er—"

"Ritz," supplied Lottie hopefully.

"Ritz," Mona repeated firmly, drawing on her gloves.

Mr. Garretson appeared at the top of the staircase. "Miss Moran, er—Mrs. Townsend," he called. "One moment." The lawyer descended hurriedly. "Here is the ring, the engagement ring, you know. It hadn't been completed yesterday when we talked matters over. Possibly you would like to wear it with"—he pointed to the platinum circlet almost shyly—"with that."

THE ring he held was magnificent. Even Lottie gasped. A huge emerald surrounded with diamonds gleamed in the palm of his lean brown hand. "Your birthstone," he explained. "Mr. Townsend ascertained that you were born in May."

Mona took the ring absently, weighed it in her closed hand for a moment, a faraway look in her eyes. When she lifted her eyes they held an infinitely weary look in their depths.

"If you need anything," Mr. Garretson was saying, "call me. Or call Stroud. Wait a minute—I'll call him from here. Going to the Ritz? That's fine. Get Stroud on the phone about any cash—"

"To the Ritz, Jackson."

"Yes, Madame. I found out about the car, Miss. Jackson turned to add confidentially. "Mr. Steve drove back to town last night and Mr. Barry followed in the V 57. We call the cars by their license numbers here. And the roadster went aboard the Miranda with the young man, Miss. The V 57 came back alone."

"Thanks," was Lottie's brief rejoinder.

As the car glided forward Lottie saw that Mona's eyes were filled with tears.

The two girls spent the next few days at the Ritz in what Lottie termed an orgy of shopping. True to his word, Mr. Garretson had notified Stroud. They found, upon arrival at the hotel, that a suite had been set aside for Mrs. Townsend and her companion and an account opened. Mrs. Townsend was to draw on the hotel for any amount.

"I suppose you'll be dropping in to see your mother," Lottie asked casually the second day as Mona stepped into the car.

Mona snapped her purse open and in the recesses of the car powered her nose thoughtfully. "Soon. This afternoon, as a matter of fact. Want to come?"

FOR answer Lottie stretched herself yawningly but with a meaningful glance.

"Listen, I crave lunch. Never mind what time I had breakfast. Just for a lark, let's gallop up to the Claremont. What do you say? I've always wanted to see that place by daylight."

"Anything you like," Mona responded indifferently, handing the speaking tube to Lottie without glancing up.

Lottie gave the driver instructions briefly and then bent toward Mona. "While you were in that shop I started a conversation with the boy friend outside," she said in a low tone.

Mona raised her eyebrow, intent upon the shaping of her lower lip.

"Boy friend?"

"Jackson. Remember he said that he had driven the doctor over to see—er—your husband? He told us that yesterday while we were driving up to the wedding? Well—She paused importantly.

"Maybe I should break this gently. The doctor was a specialist, see? Heart specialist. Dr. Dunn, the local physician, had him up from New York. Jackson heard this specialist say that Townsend wouldn't live a year! Any shock might kill him outright. Any shock?"

"Not a year? Then I'll never have to decide about things—"

"A year at the most" was what this doctor said. But they didn't tell Mr. Townsend or any of the people around him. Didn't want him to know because that would be a shock. His business affairs are all in order. They always have been. Mr. Garretson sees to that."

"He can't live a year," Mona repeated.

"Will or no will, you're in for quite a slice of his money," Lottie said thoughtfully. "There is a will, though."

What Other Scribes Are Saying

Pertaining Mostly To Comment Concerning High School Football in the Oil Belt.

(By Bobby Campbell in Breckenridge American.)

He Wins the Title.

We dug around in the voluminous county records Saturday afternoon and finally found Ben B. Grant, the keeper of same. We thought that as hot as it was at that time of the day he would be in no mood for argument and would concede anything. But not a Grant. The months old argument as to whether Herman Price, potential center of the 1932 football team of Breckenridge high school, will be or will not be eligible when the fall comes, is finally at an end. We contend that any man who survives the heat of a July campaign, goes running around the county with perspiration dripping off his brow, and still insists that he is right must be right. Price will be eligible, or Ben Grant doesn't know what he is talking about.

Incidentally.

Grant offered the statement that Price will make the greatest high school center ever to come out of the Oil Belt circle. He is, Grant advises, doing his daily dozen on a pipe line and now tips the scales in the vicinity of 185 pounds and thereabouts. Harrison, fullback of last year's runnups, also is rounding into shape via the hammer and tongs method. Northcutt, the potential gem of the 1932 backfield, is shooting upward, and Billy Pitzer, first bidder for the quarterback post, is in good shape. We saw young Wohlford at a dance the other evening developing his side shift. He, too, has put on inches and is now as tall as some of the glass doors he wrestled with a lot last year.

Bad News Ahead.

Cisco high school hearing the news of all of these big fellows, probably will hustle their officials over to the courthouse to withdraw their protest against being booted out. Cisco, with two new coaches, but no new players like Fred Hightower and Chuck Van Horn, will have to depend entirely upon legal tomes and habeas corpus this fall in case the latching string is again put on the outside for the Lobos.

Past History.

Someone remarked to us the other day that our love notes tossed in the general direction of Cisco might serve to create a feeling of ill will when the 1932 grid season trots around. We know not, Cisco couldn't feel any worse toward Breckenridge than she does already. It reminds us of the greatest honor ever bestowed upon us. It was during the 1930 grid season and we were following a club that won one and lost plenty. It came time for the tilt with the San Angelo Bobcats and at that time none other than the Great Man, Scrap Iron Grimes, the Bobcat fire fighter, was the mainstay of the San Angelo team. As we strolled into the spacious lobby of the hotel where the local team was encamped, his eyes blazing and his hand running through his hair like a sheep comb goes over a sheep, cornered us.

"You've fixed things, you have," he exploded.

"Sure," we smirked (always smirk when you just can't do any better), "we're the little fixer."

"If we beat today, it's your fault. You've done it already," he continued.

"What, may we inquire, have we done already?"

"You've made Scrap Iron Grimes mad with those things you wrote about him having no hair on his head and few teeth in his mouth and being a leather-faced

Rumored Connie Mack May Quit Game

There are pretty definite rumors going 'round and 'round the baseball circuit that this will be Connie Mack's last year as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Mister McGillicuddy, as he is known to his birth certificate hasn't said yes and he hasn't said no, but those who worry about such things are hoping that the aging veteran will make it yes.

For the Athletics, one of the greatest teams of all time in '29, '30 and '31 are displaying all the symptoms of a team about to fall apart at the seams. I mean the A's are beginning to break, and when ball clubs start breaking, they break fast. The infield, never any too potent, is downright mediocre, save for the slugging Foyx at first base. Cochrane, while still a great catcher, is not the inspiring player he was two years ago. Simmons has slipped half a mile. Bing Miller is just another old man, with twinges in his back. Walberg has gone the way of all flesh. And even the mighty Grove and Earnshaw are showing plenty of signs of wear and tear.

Mack faces the same problem he did in 1914. A team that marched from one triumph to another is founded on the rocks. It took Connie a decade and a half to climb back to the top after his 1914 outfit went to pieces. It may take him that long again. For the Yankees are once again riding high, wide and handsome. The Cleveland Indians are coming along. And so are a couple of other teams in the league.

The re-building of a baseball team from a few spare parts is a job that requires time, patience and a world of energy. Mack, well along in his sixties, has reached the age where he ought to turn the job over to younger hands.

Ask any Yankee fan what one man is more responsible than any other for the success of the Ruppert Rifles this year, and you'll get Joey Sewell for an answer. Kicked off by Cleveland as a has-been last year, Joey was signed up by the Yankees, who at that time, couldn't offer any logical reasons for the move. But what a swell break it was for both the Yanks and Joey. Right now the little Alabamian is playing more third base than any player in either league, and slugging the ball harder than ever before in his life.

When the season is over, and the Yanks have the pennant tacked safely away, the boys ought to get up there on the bench and give a rising vote of thanks to the steady, hard-driving little boy from Alabam.

HERE-- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

The Lady of the House was quietly enjoying a few moments of leisure in the quiet living room, when her rest was interrupted by a deep, manly voice at the front door, accompanied by tapping, and in response to the call by the lady, "Who is it?" the answer came, "Do you have moths?"

No, answered the lady haughtily, we are not bothered with this variety of insects.
There was no argument coming. The man quietly walked away; no moths, no sale!
This set a train of thought in action. The government is taking a hand in moth eradication, and has issued instructions in pamphlet form, for the householders' care of clothing, woollens, curtains, upholstered furniture, and anything in which moths find a feeding, and larvae depositing place.

But one of the best preventative against the pest is of the most simple nature. Shake the garments thoroughly, brush well, hang in the air and sun a half day, then fold into newspapers, that carefully exclude air, and lay the garment away until needed.
Layers of newspapers between blankets and comforts, with a sprinkle of insect powder on the paper, will prevent any moths any time.
Another easy method, and absolute moth destroyer, is to run your vacuum tube over the surface of upholstered chairs, and furniture, once or twice a month.
Whenever the housekeeper sees a moth miller floating around then that is the time to get busy. Kill the miller. Otherwise the eggs will hatch, these will hatch into tiny worms, and the first time you hold a woolen garment up to the light, you will find irregular holes, snawed by these little worms.

Get rid of the moth miller, and you will have to add as a rule, to worry about moths.
But that inquiry, "Have you moths?" coming out of a silence, was rather startling.
Suppose someone should come to your door and in the quiet of the hour, ask these will hatch into tiny worms, and the first time you hold a woolen garment up to the light, you will find irregular holes, snawed by these little worms.

Humphrey and Miss Blanche Walker, missionaries in China.
The Message of a Magazine that we laid, these will hatch into tiny worms, and the first time you hold a woolen garment up to the light, you will find irregular holes, snawed by these little worms.

A pretty feature was here introduced in the appearance of a group of young misses dressed in white, with touches of purple, the Women's Missionary Society colors who formed in line and gave a trumpet call, announcing the special magazine of the W. M. S. These misses were Geraldine Terrell, Faynette Campbell, Jean Kitley and Bennie Kate Wood.
The program closed with singing, "A Song in Song" the words of which were written by Mrs. Marvin Hood and set to the air of "He Lives on High."
The final address of the afternoon, "The Word of Work," was given by Mrs. Carl Springer, followed by scripture reading, "God's Promises," presented by Mrs. Paul McFarland.
During the singing of "I Can See the Light of Home," by Mrs. Lynn Hilburn, the moment was made most impressive by the sketching of a home, done in charcoal by Mrs. Hood, the picture growing beneath her fingers as the song was rendered, and illustrating the features of the song.
The session was closed with prayer by Rev. O. B. Darby, pastor of church.
Announcement of the meetings of the Women's Missionary Society for next Monday was made: Circle No. 1 with Mrs. Jess Seibert.
Circle No. 2 to be announced later.
Circle No. 3 with Mrs. Ghent Sanderford.
Circle No. 4 with Mrs. Frank V. Williams.
Those present, Rev. and Mrs. O. B. Darby, Mmes. Lynn Hilburn, Tucker, Marvin Hood, S. C. Walker, Nora Andrews, Terrell, J. B. Overton, T. J. Pitts, J. P. Truly, A. O. Lionel Barrymore Scores a Hit In Engrossing Film

Washington, with its swirl of political intrigue, social splendor and the dramatic details of the "inside" of national political machinery, forms a spectacular background for Lionel Barrymore's newest appearance on the screen in "The Washington Maskerade."

Based on "The Claw," one of the famous actor's greatest successes on the stage, the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which is now playing at the Lyric theatre, presents the actor in a truly "Barrymore-sized" role, as the master and political power who is superior of men, but nevertheless the tool of a designing woman.

Intimate details of Washington and its "inner circle" were written into the screen adaptation on which John Meehan collaborated with Samuel G. Blythe, famous Washington political writer.

Woman Turns Traitor
Barrymore plays a Middle Western senator who becomes a senatorial ladder and national power. Unable to reach him any other way, the lobbyists try a woman, employed to charm recalcitrant legislators. The senator falls in love with her, marries her, sacrifices his career and resigns from the Senate at her behest. After he turns traitor to his party, he discovers the trick that has been played on him. How he battles it out before the Senate, tearing down the structure of political manipulation in a final sensational victory forms a powerful climax.
Charles Barbin directed the story with deft skill, and many deft human touches are interspersed amid the spectacle of president's receptions and state banquets, impressive speeches on the floor of the Senate and sensational exposure of the "inside" of Washington politics.

Garen Morley goes as the political vamp, married to Barrymore. Nils Asther offers a skillful portrayal as the suave foreign affairs manipulator and C. Henry Gordon, who played the secret agent in "Mata Hari," is excellent as the lobbyist. Diane Sinclair, Reginald Barlow, William Collier, Sr., William Morris, Rafaela Ottiano, C. Henry Gordon, Burton Churchill and Henry Kolker are equally effective in their roles.
