

ELECTION CONTEST IS BEFORE COURT

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

Lots of news today for the customers, if any. Some is good, some bad and some more or less indifferent. Most of it probably comes under the latter heading.

Coch Tricky Ward has announced the approximate weights of the members of his squad. The weights are not all authentic, but most of them are accurate to the best of Ward's judgment and his ability to guess.

The district egg race committee over in district 3 met in Big Spring Saturday and decided that Red Sheridan and Speegle Wood, about nine-tenths of the Sweetwater Mustang backfield in playing ability and half the backfield in numbers, were ineligible.

Glenn Wyatt, Abilene Eagle, half, who played at quarter last year, was on the same team back in 1928, so it seems reasonable that he will be just as ineligible.

L. E. Dudley and R. D. Green, officials of the Abilene High school and members of the Oil Belt executive committee, agree between themselves that the Oil Belt committee will be more sympathetic, or something, and will let the ineligible Wyatt prance around on the gridirons of the district without any protest.

The Eastland Mavericks are the only undefeated team in the Oil Belt. That is it is the only team which has competed against a class A team without meeting defeat.

HOOVER WILL CAMPAIGN IN THE MIDWEST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—President Hoover prepared today to carry his case to the voters. He arranged to leave by special train this afternoon for Des Moines, there in the heart of the corn belt, where more than a decade of low prices, heavy mortgages, rising taxes and economic depression, have made men and women critical of their public officials.

He makes his main address tomorrow night. This marks the opening of the counter-attack. Republicans plan as an answer to the western trip of Governor Roosevelt, which has just been completed.

Not since 1916 has a president in office gone out on a campaign trip. When Coolidge ran for reelection in 1924 he remained in Washington. President Hoover has consented to make three major campaign speeches.

Survey Shows Texas Business On the Upgrade

AUSTIN.—While the business horizon is still far from clear, cheerful news bearing on a variety of business items and covering many sections of the country is becoming more and more common. Dr. F. A. Buechel, statistician of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas, pointed out in his monthly business summary. The bureau is engaged in making monthly surveys of some score or more industries, trades and utilities, and Dr. Buechel's observations are based on the results of these compilations, data for which are obtained directly from the basic source.

"For example, railway carloadings have shown more than seasonal gain for three successive weeks," Dr. Buechel said. "Electric power production is making an increasingly favorable showing compared with last year, and the textile industry has been showing marked improvement."

"In New York State, factories have run counter to the August seasonal down trend with a gain of 3.7 per cent in payroll and 2.9 per cent in employment. Further substantial decline has occurred in the seasonally adjusted daily average of money in circulation. The trend of bank failures continues downward, and the downward trend of total deposits of closed banks is even more pronounced.

"Under normal conditions," quoting from Standard Statistics corporation, "the improvement thus far witnessed could confidently be expected to broaden out and build up. This, however, is a presidential year when not only personalities but fundamental policies hang in balance. The tariff has been injected into the situation. A powerful bloc of ex-soldier citizens in demanding a bonus of $2,300,000,000 from the federal treasury which is already running at a deficit of more than $200,000,000 monthly."

"A number of other disquieting problems still await solution on a fundamental basis; among them are those relating to transportation, finance, labor and agriculture. So far only palliatives have been applied for tiding over immediate emergencies and providing breathing spells for inaugurating more permanent policies.

"A widening circle of public opinion in each of the industrial countries of the world is coming to realize that what appears at first sight to be local or at most national problems, are in reality international problems and must be attacked from that angle. The full significance of the disruption during the war of the delicate mechanism of international trade and finance which has gradually evolved during many decades, is just now becoming apparent. It is also becoming more clear that although international trade constitutes only 10 per cent of our total business, its significance to industry is far greater than this percentage would imply. If there are profits at all in industry it is the final sales that determine the amount of that profit. Moreover, staple commodity prices are determined on the world market.

Lawrence, who denies any knowledge of the crime, was arrested after Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh forwarded to Illinois authorities an anonymous letter that named Lawrence. The 30-year-old father of two children was working as a photographer in Passaic at the time of the kidnaping. He left New Jersey 29 days later.

Hoover's announcement of a one year moratorium on European political debts to this country, a committee of financiers and economists headed by Albert H. Wiggin made the following statement, "In recent years the world has been endeavoring to pursue two contradictory policies in permitting the development of an international financial system which involves the annual payment of large sums by debtor to creditor countries while at the same time putting obstacles in the way of free movement of goods. So long as these obstacles remain such movements of capital must necessarily throw the world's financial balance out of equilibrium. Financial remedies alone will be powerless to restore the world's economic prosperity until there is a radical change in this policy of obstruction and international commerce—on which depends the progress of civilization—is allowed to resume its natural development. We therefore conclude by urging most earnestly upon all governments concerned that they lose no time in taking the necessary measures.

"The diagnosis made by the Wiggins committee was confirmed by the special advisory committee convoked by the Bank of International Settlement December, 1931. A most emphatic warning of danger, unless immediate steps were taken, was also given in this report.

"Last June at Lausanne a great forward step was taken in that a new reparations settlement was arrived at, bringing in sight at last the end of that tragic problem which has worked untold miseries during the post-war years. In the final act of this conference it was decided unanimously that much more comprehensive action was imperatively needed.

Out of this decision has grown the forthcoming world economic financial and monetary conference in London. This conference will undertake to solve two sets of problems. First, monetary and credit policy, foreign exchange difficulties, the level of prices and movement of capital. Second, improved conditions of production

Sing Sing Grid Games Cut Down Rule Violations

By HENRY MATTEO,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
ALBANY, N. Y.—While Sing Sing prison's "steam-roller" football team toiled in preparation for its second season, Corrections Commissioner Walter N. Thayer explained today he approves the sport because it has created a higher morale among the inmates. Football was introduced provisionally in the prison in Ossining last year. The experiment, which aroused nation-wide interest, proved highly popular so Warden Lewis E. Lawes decided to extend it.

"As an example," Thayer cited, and interchange of commodities with particular attention to tariff policy, prohibitions and restrictions of imports and exports, quotas and other barriers to trade and producers' agreements. It is expected that out of this conference will also come a final solution of reparations and war debts.

"The degree of success of the conference will determine in large measure the speed and extent of world economic recovery."

NEW EARRINGS of marcasite and a large pearl take to wings.

"infractions of rules at the prison were the fewest in the institution's history, for weeks prior to the games last fall. They knew that even a minor infraction would bar them from witnessing the games."

Thayer admitted that when the game was first tried out he questioned the feasibility of such a privilege. Now, however, he has no misgivings. Warden Lawes has proven its practicability, he said.

Diversion, Thayer declared, is essential to correct supervision of a prison. The inmate, however, must earn it.

Prison life should be as normal to regular existence as possible, he said, pointing out that to deprive prisoners of this would result in them returning to society with the same attitude which characterized their prison entry.

"This is why group activities in the prison recreational program are helpful in preparing the prisoners for their return to life outside. The attitude of the criminal toward society is essentially the attitude of a poor sport. He hasn't played the rules of the game."

People who have become tired of cutting grass all summer can enjoy a little variation now by raking leaves.

Bachelor Owns Big Game Reserve At the Arcadia

By United Press. MT. PLEASANT, Mich.—A 64-year-old bachelor, who loves nature and wild animals, has lowly but surely building up Michigan's first one-man private game reserve.

Jack "Spike Horn" Myers already has two elk, two bears, a buffalo and a fish hatchery on his 1,000-acre tract. And, he says, there is room for a good many more animals.

The log cabin on his property, the enclosures for the animals and the hatchery Myers built himself. He built a stockade of heavy timbers for the bison pen after Grand Rapids had presented him with the animal. The bison has escaped twice. The elk roamed about a fenced wooded lot several acres in size.

Myers, who wears a heavy beard, and tramps the woods in a leather costume most of the time, was not always a woods dweller. He once invented a threshing machine, and later manufactured a tractor adapted to logging purposes. A suga reeet lifier developed by him is still used on many Michigan farms.

United States amateur golf championship generally has been hailed as a good thing for golf in America.

Even before the final match had started many golf writers expressed the opinion that interest in the game generally would be enhanced by a break in the monopoly held by U. S. players on their own national championship.

And this was not because any of them liked Johnny Goodman less but the game more.

Actually Somerville's ultimate victory was that of a dark horse. Before the tournament started (as is the case, of course, before all tournaments) the writers made their own lists of possible winners. A chosen few were named first. Then, as a means of protection against a possible oversight, a list of "others who might come through" was made. Somerville's name was generally found fairly well near the bottom of such lists.

Bobby Jones was one of those who early predicted that Somerville would reach the finals, and named Sandy as a likely winner.

Now that the long line of U. S. triumphs in the American amateur has been broken, it will be reasonable to expect heavier entry lists of dominion players.

Somerville, who may not have spoken more than 200 words during his stay at Baltimore while the amateur was being played marked to this writer as a graciousness of the gallery watched his final match Goodman.

"It was the most sportsman crowd I ever played before said.

This was easy to believe, for crowd applauded his good as enthusiastically as it did of the U. S. contestants. And crowd contained plenty of sportsmen who were all for Johnny Goodman come through.

It seemed almost a pity that Somerville is such a sportsman. The writer saw him several times during his week at Baltimore and smiled just once out of all occasions. His friends here say he is affable enough from the milling crowds.

Although Goodman didn't make the championship he than vindicated the regard friends hold for him as was Johnny's own belief in him.

As Usual . . . Miss Allen Will COOK with GAS at the Times'-Cooking School

She chose a MODERN GAS RANGE for her demonstrations at the RANGER TIMES Cooking School because experience has proven to her that:

GAS Is Faster Gas is the only fuel that gives its maximum heat instantly. Every other fuel necessitates waiting.

GAS Is Cheaper It costs less than one-third of a cent per person per meal to cook with gas in Ranger. No other modern fuel is so economical.

GAS Is Better Gas is more flexible and more positively controlled than any other fuel. It assures perfect results with a minimum of time and effort. That is why over 20,000,000 housewives prefer it.

Ranger gas has a B. T. U. (British Thermal Unit) content nearly twice that of artificial gas, such as is used in many parts of the country. It is the concentrated essence of pure heat. Use it freely for all cooking and heating purposes.

HERE-- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

Has it come to the pass that people want to be publicized so badly that they are willing to speak over the radio, to an invisible audience whenever they have anything they think their valued words of wisdom will be heard by countless thousands?

In using this method of publicity, has it come to the pass, that these kinds of people no longer care particularly for the success of standing institutions in their home town, such as the newspaper, either daily or weekly, or for their local town or city's means of advertising?

Every man or woman who is public spirited is supposed to try to build up the interests of their own community; it is granted that nothing protects a community so well as its daily or semi-daily press.

Crime is controlled largely thru publicity, and towns without a newspaper are usually a sorry place in which to live.

And who is it gets the money from these advertisers over the radios. We can't see that it puts any money in the pockets of the local business men or firms. For there are few small towns able to maintain a radio station and it certainly costs money to broadcast over a radio, and this money has to be paid to somebody somewhere.

The empire of the air is all right enough in its way, but this thing of people giving their local institutions the air, in order to get their own lungs filled with outside air, doesn't speak largely for a pride in the citizenship of the outside air lunger exploiter.

Then there is the question of just how long will the tax levying bodies permit the commercial broadcasting station to put on an unlimited amount of paid advertising free, and continue to raise postage to meet a growing deficit, for of course we know that every bit of radio publicity makes that much less publicity going through the mails. Money spent on radio advertising pays no postage on newspapers. Radio advertising should pay its proper tax.

STAN BALL accuses ASPER DELO, timber king, of crooked practices and of having men shoot a check for a big interest. Their check will prevent it in person. Upon leaving Delo's office Ball meets DONA, Asper's daughter, from kidnapers. Learning her name, he tells her he is STANLEY BLACK and slips away.

DUDLEY WINTERS loves DONA. He agrees to make Asper give up the wild idea of going to Three Rivers and running Ball off the company property. DONA goes with him. They find a man-hunt in progress with Ball as the objective. Asper is badly wounded from ambush but cannot be kept in bed. Dudley produces a marriage certificate that they had been prevented from using by DONA's being unsure of herself. They tell Asper they are married. Ball overhears this announcement, while in for food. He is caught by SWERGIN, Asper's timber boss, who has been a leading figure in the hunt.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVII

STANLEY BALL laughed shortly. Here was a fitting finish indeed for the whole mad undertaking. Ball was determined that the big timber boss would have to shoot him down to hold him. There was to be no capture and no show to be staged after the moon came up.

Swergin leaned forward and jerked Stan's gun from its holster. He went over the lithe form of the cowboy with a heavy hand, satisfying himself that there was no other weapon concealed on him, then he snarled, "Walk straight ahead and keep out of the light from the buildings!"

Stan realized that he was going to be made a prisoner and left to sweat while Swergin got his mob together. He decided to test the big fellow behind him.

"You are an officer of the law, Swergin. I demand a safe place and a guarantee that there will be no mob action." Stan bit off the words shortly.

They had the effect he had expected. "There ain't no law agin reportin' this catch," Swergin growled.

Stan understood what that meant. Swergin would be in the background and his men would do the actual lynching. It would save a lot of trouble and expense.

They crossed to a dark cabin without windows and Swergin relaxed his vigilance enough to kick open the door. "Get in there!" he snapped.

Stan stepped into theinky blackness and as he entered he slid to one side. Swergin, with typical thickheadedness, pushed in after him. Like a flash Stan struck out and, as he did so, raised one booted foot in a desperate kick. His aim was as true as it could have been in daylight. Swergin's gun went clattering to the floor. Stan leaped across the doorway and flattened himself. He heard a muttered curse as the big boss tried to get his other gun clear.

With eager fingers Stan sought on the floor for Swergin's gun. He found it and leaped up to shove the heavy revolver into his captor's face. So rapidly did it all happen that Swergin was covered before he could get Stan's gun from the blazer pocket where he had shoved it. As he felt the cold steel of his own weapon shoved into his throat he cursed loudly.

"Shut up or I'll drill you!" Stan snapped.

Swergin was instantly silent.

"I'd kill you, Swergin, but the report of my gun would wake the camp." Stan had recovered his own gun by this time. As he felt for it his fingers closed upon a square of cardboard in the boss's pocket. He took this, too, and backed out through the door. "Stay in there!" he hissed.

Swergin stayed while Stan barred the door with a heavy plank. Hastily then he cut across the clearing to where he had cached the supplies. He must have food to live upon and now he was sure Swergin would tighten the pack around his little area of safety.

THE moon was just shoving over the shoulder of Folly Mountain. The buildings of the timber camp were still in darkness but the clearing was crossed by a band of silver light. Stan hurried because he knew that in half an hour riding would be almost as dangerous as in daylight.

He caught up the burlap sack of supplies and headed toward the black mare. The night was still, with a chill silence that comes to the high country from its crowns of snow above the valleys.

The black mare nickered softly as Stan approached. He slid through the thick brush and patted her sleek neck. Not 10 feet down the slope a white patch of moonlight was creeping upward. Fastening the sack securely behind the saddle, Stan prepared to mount. It was not thinking about the dang ahead of him in the dark that he had taken from Swergin. Pulling it out he stepped into the moonlight and looked at it curiously.

A beautiful face smiled up at him, the face of DONA ASPER. Her hair framed her face softly and she wore a filmy evening gown that clung against the soft whiteness of her throat. Stan stared at the picture for a full minute, then his eyes hardened. Swergin must have been in DONA's room. That was how he had come to catch Stan.

Sinking down on one knee, the man stared at the picture he held. From white bands of moonlight had moved up the mountainside. It covered Stan's head and shoulders with a silver radiance. Stan was so wrapped in his thoughts that he failed to see a light flare down in the cabin in which he had locked Swergin. The big timber boss had been able to open the door and was outside now with a grass torch looking for his gun.

THE main building was a short 50 feet from where Stan was sitting. All at once he roused himself. Distinctly through the night he heard a sob. Stan looked about but could not pierce the blue of the shadows. Then he saw Swergin's torch and realized his own danger. Stan backed into the deeper shade and listened. The sobs were plainly those of a woman. Low, choking sobs, as though the person weeping was trying to keep them back but could not.

Stan edged along under cover until he was nearer the sounds. He heard Swergin shouting down at the corrals and a minute later several voices answered. There was an interval of silence in which Stan strained his ears but failed to hear the sobs that had drawn him away from his horse. He was about to turn and run to his mount when he saw a slender figure pass Asper Delo's lighted window. The girl vanished instantly in the direction of the front porch but in the fleeting glance Stan was sure it was DONA who was returning from the little group of spruce trees shading the north wall.

Down at the corrals there was commotion. Sleepy voices shouted and saddles scraped along the ground. One rider dashed into the moonlight not 100 feet above Stan. With an easy swing the tall cowboy was in the saddle and heading toward the black mare back into the timber. He was not thinking about the dang ahead of him in the dark that he had taken from Swergin. Pulling it out he stepped into the moonlight and looked at it curiously.

Nevertheless he put the black mare to a gallop and headed up the mountain. He had to drop a bit down on the Pass Creek side in order to cross a rocky formation that would hide his tracks. Then there was a stream to follow as a further blind. To be caught at any one of these open places would mean instant death from a rifle. Already Stan could hear the pounding of hoofs below and above him. Swergin had sent his fastest riders deep into the hills to head off the cowboy. A swarm of lesser hunters would bring up the rear. Touching the mare's flank with a spur, Stan gave her her head. There was little at stake, yet he had sudden; taken new interest in living.

THE scene at the corrals was feverish. DONA ran up the steps to take her place beside Dudley who had not joined the hunt. She had removed all traces of her tears of a few minutes before and was now eagerly watching the scene below.

"I'd like to go with them but I'm not going to," Dudley whispered as she slipped an arm around her.

DONA did not reply but she moved closer to him as though to shield herself from something that might come from the night.

The last horseman galloped out of camp with thundering hoofs and sounds of shouting came from up the mountain. Shots rang out from the direction of Pass Creek. A fusillade followed from far above. Then all was still. The moon had cleared the highest crag on Folly Mountain and the entire slope lay in shimmering, silver beauty. DONA sank to the porch and propped her chin in her hands. So much of beauty yet such terrible things taking place. She strove to understand it all, but more to understand herself.

"Let's stay here. It's so beautiful," she murmured.

"Not for long, dear," Dudley pulled his coat over her shoulders.

DONA did not answer. She was deep in wonder at the queer tightness in her heart. She was in a panic now that she was committed to marry Dudley and she could not find a single valid reason why she should feel this way.

"Better be going to see DONA's dad and get to be his son."

Still DONA hesitated. She wanted to bring the mule. Just a minute ago she had been told that she must have the mule. She had not had time to think of it under Folly Peak."

Chanayata Group Entertained.
The Chanayata group of Camp Fire Girls was charmingly entertained by Miss Verna Johnson, their assistant guardian, on Saturday afternoon, when the group met at the Dr. J. L. Johnson residence at 5 p. m., for their trip to the spillway, where a picnic supper was enjoyed with the skill of their guests, the Boy Scouts, evidenced in the delicious cookery over an open camp fire when the young chefs fried potatoes, bacon and onions, and boiled eggs. The little crowd enjoyed these delicious foods with baked beans, carried from the hostess' home; apples and cinnamon buns; and the feast topped off with marshmallows roasted over the fire.
Games were enjoyed and a big song-fest held around the leaping flames. Upon their return to town, the evening was spent at the Johnson home in games and dancing.

Those present, Carolyn Cox, Eleanor Ruth Ferguson, Carolyn Doss, Clara June Kimble, Elva Lee Jones, Joan Johnson, and Florence Perkins, a guest; Clyde Chaney, Parker Brown, Ralph Mahon, Raymond Lovett, Horace Horton, R. L. Perkins Jr., and Hiram Childress.

The group of songs used included "Tell Me the Old, Old Story," "Smiles," "Fishers of Men," and to bolster up their courage, "Are We down-Hearted? No! No! No!" Mrs. S. C. Walker, a visitor to the assembly, led in prayer.
The intermediate department was presided over by Mrs. Irene Williams, who conducted the usual routine procedure.

Famous Belled Buzzard Leads A Charmed Life

By United Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Indiana's famed belled buzzard, that makes its phantom-like appearance regularly during summer months, apparently is destined to become a legend.

As unvarying as the first robin, the gaunt, mysterious bird makes its appearance each spring. Usually it is first reported from the southern part of the state.
From then until the first cold months arrive, the belled buzzard is seen for brief intervals as it wings its high, solitary flight, sometimes over the Kankakee marshes of northern Indiana, sometimes over the thickly-wooded, desolate hills of the south.

The history of the belled buzzard dates back at least a decade. It is related that a Brown county farmer first attached the bell to the bird after he found it in a nest in a hollow log. Whether others since then have had tiny bells fastened to their necks is a frequent conjecture. If not, then the mysterious bird stays constantly on the wing, never resting in one place. He has been reported from widely separated parts of the state on successive days.

There is apparently no doubt in the minds of persons who report seeing it. Usually they are farmers. Their stories are much alike. "I suddenly heard a soft, tinkling bell, seemingly coming from the air," most of the stories go. "I looked up and there was the buzzard. I could see and hear the bell plainly."

Farmers say the bird leads a charmed life. They tell of firing at it repeatedly, sometimes from close range, but apparently with no effect. Some have gone out with the announced intention of killing the bird and ending once and for all the strange stories about it. But still the bird flies on.

Small boys, seeing the bird resting a moment in woods, tell of having pelted at it with stones.

They have been as ineffective as their elders with guns.
The famed bird has been the subject of scores of written oddities and even radio comments. Newspapers seldom pass by an opportunity to note its arrival.
Doubtless the original belled buzzard long since has died. His fame, however, hardly will be permitted to diminish with Hoosiers. From year to year, beginning each spring and ending each fall, he probably will be reported as seen in some outlying community.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS.—Coats, in general this winter, will give a more slender and a straighter silhouette than they have previously done. They are broad in the shoulders or turtleneck, with practically no fur around the throat, and with scarves, high close collars, or with modified Directorate capes, which give them a neat and formal look about the neck.

The natural waistline usually is emphasized, more than in past seasons, with a tendency to dip in the back. Sometimes it is marked by a separate leather belt, and again by the "pinched-in" effect. Sleeves are varied, especially in the Worth collection, and the newest note in these coat sleeves is the insertion of different colored materials, set either in the part just below the shoulder, just above the elbow, or just below. Sometimes, it is white-velvet matching the gown worn with the coat, in a heavy, black woolen coat; sometimes a bit of red velvet placed high on the sleeve of a black velvet coat; again, it is green, matching the frock underneath, edged with a tiny border of brown fur to match the brown coat; or the cerise velvet puffs on the sleeve of the frock showing below the short sleeve of the jacket.

DUMAS.—Construction work under way on grade and drainage structures on highway No. 9, north of here to Sherman county line.
