

BONUSERS ORDERED FROM JOHNSTOWN

GRIPINGS

By GUS

This column is published as a daily feature and may not be construed as representing the editorial views of this paper. What follows is merely what one man thought at the time it was written, and the writer reserves the right to change his mind concerning any subject, without notice, explanation or apology.

JUDGE HICKMAN of Eastland is the only candidate from this part of the country who is making a state-wide campaign in the second primary. The average voter is hardly interested in who is elected to the place on the Supreme court, for the voter rarely contemplates having any dealings with that body.

The dignity of the office precludes the advisability of any mudslinging in the campaign. The candidates can promise the voter nothing whatever. They can hardly compare each other's qualities before the voters because few voters know much about the qualities necessary to fill the place. It is a difficult campaign.

Judge Hickman's opponent is a man who has sat on the bench there for 16 years, well versed in politics, usually has his name on top of the ballot, and reasonably well known because of his many campaigns. Where the voter has no special choice, he either votes by guess or votes for the man whose name is on top.

The above condition prevents a wonderful opportunity for Judge Hickman's friends to help him. It is a well established fact among his friends that, no matter who his opponent may be, no one could go wrong by voting for Judge Hickman.

His friends, or those who claim to be his friends should make a list of their acquaintances in the larger cities and write each one of them, telling them to use their influence for Hickman.

The citizens of the county should make it a county proposition to see that Judge Hickman gets consideration from every voter possible in Texas. I couldn't say positively what effect my feeble efforts had, but shortly before the first primary, I sent a card to each of 23 of my acquaintances in Angelina county. The returns showed that Judge Hickman carried the county. This is not said boastfully, but to illustrate how easy it is to rustle votes in this particular race if only a small amount of effort is used.

THIS morning I backed a car away from the curb in Ranger. The driver of a car behind me honked his horn furiously as if to say that I was trespassing in his street. He is likely a stranger. For his information I will say that it is a custom of yours standing in Ranger to back one's car away from the curb without looking back, and if you break someone's headlights, don't pay any attention to his ravings. He should have been looking. He car backing away from the curb has the right of way and the guy coming down the street takes the risk of collision. Or so it seems.

TOMMIE MALLE, song writer, died a pauper in New York this week. Six or seven years ago he was flying high and on a bed of roses. He wrote "Because They All Love You," "Jealous," "I Wonder Where My Sweeties' Hiding," and several more tunes that went big. Spent his money on liquor.

I can remember back when those tunes were popular. I can remember fellows who used to go to the dances and request those tunes and help sing the chorus. Some of those fellows are not so prosperous now either. Time is a great leveler. We're near the top of the time and near the bottom of the other. That's a despairing thought. For those who are riding on to those who are not doing so well. You may take that bit of philosophy and use it as you fit. And pay whatever you think it's worth.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., had a big flood in May, 1889. I have a friend who was one of the sufferers and he gave me a first hand story of it. Today the Bonus Army is trying to encamp there, but it is not so welcome. The whole country contributed to aid Johnstown in 1889. But most of those who were victims are either moved away or have forgotten the new generation feel indebted. Possibly such a thing as gratitude.

Geology Exhibit Gets Unusual Cores

By United Press.

PEIPING, China.—Manchuria, torn for months by political and military strife, now is experiencing an outburst of nature, according to reports received here. A group of volcanoes in the Hingan mountain range are active.

The volcanoes, described as conical Manchurian hills, are 12 in number. They are located 300 kilometers north of Harbin and just southwest of Mergen. They have erupted occasionally since 1720, when the first scientific data concerning them was gathered and recorded.

The Manchurian volcanoes surround Lake Tatu, a body of warm water feeding the Urdun river, which flows into the Nonni river. Little alarm is felt as a result of the renewed activity of the volcanoes in the Hingan mountains. The area is but sparsely settled and no towns or villages of any consequence are in danger.

SPEED RECORD FALLS IN RACE WITH DEATH

By United Press.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—A dramatic race with death was ended here today when Mrs. H. McClain of Shreveport, La., was lifted from an American Airways plane and rushed to a hospital for cancer treatment.

Near death, Mrs. McClain was placed aboard the plane at Dallas last night by doctors who hoped that treatment she could receive in Los Angeles might save her life.

Pilot Joe Glass was instructed that any slight jolt might prove fatal to his passenger, yet he broke flying records in bringing her here for treatment.

Mrs. McClain was accompanied by a nurse, Lenna Dickinson.

Ranger Rotary Club Hears Good Talk At Meeting

M. H. Hagaman of Ranger presented as the speaker of the day at the meeting of the Ranger Rotary club, delivered one of the best talks heard by the club members at a meeting in some time.

Mr. Hagaman chose as his topic his analysis of the depression and the remedies that would bring about prosperity once more.

He said that more equitable distribution and a remedy of the tax problems would be the only way to permanent and adequate relief from the economic ills that have befallen the country and the world.

With a more equitable distribution, he said, we must bear in mind that certain fixed charges must be attached to any commodity we buy or sell and this cannot vary greatly.

The producer of raw materials, he said, is now suffering most because of low prices, but that the producer cannot be blamed for the price levels for his products, because it was impossible for him to look to the future and tell what his product would bring when made up into the finished materials.

No one man or group of men, he said, could be called responsible for the conditions, but we are now paying for the war and the high peak of economic and business world of several years.

He said we should stop looking for aid from the government and relief agencies and that relief must come from our own efforts and that the only way to do this was to start at the bottom again and work back up to the top.

Dr. P. M. Kuykendall, president of the club, announced that Dr. Hunt of Abilene would speak before the Lions club of Ranger tomorrow at their meeting and that the members of the Rotary club were invited to be present to hear the address.

Visitors at the meeting were J. T. Hughes, W. W. Wallace of Cisco, J. C. McFee of Cisco, F. D. Wright of Cisco and Sam Brimberry of Ranger.

The program next week will be under the direction of Walter Harwell.

By United Press.

AUSTIN, Aug. 3.—Roy I. Tennant, defeated candidate for Texas railroad commissioner, today announced he would vote for Commissioner C. V. Terrell, candidate for re-election in the second primary.

Tennant is opposed in the runoff campaign by Lee Satterwhite. Tennant, former member of the state board of control, denied, however, he would aid Terrell's campaign other than by personal vote.

Mayor Claims Epidemic Is Very Likely

By United Press.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 3.—Mayor Eddie McCloskey struck a devastating blow at the bonus expeditious force today by requesting its immediate evacuation of Johnstown. The army leaders undertook to comply with his request as quickly as possible.

"Women and children in Camp McCloskey are going to die," the mayor shouted at the army commanders. "They are in a hollow. It's raining. It's terrible."

McCloskey said he feared an epidemic. He was also disappointed because Commander Walter Waters had not consulted him after the failure to form a concentration camp in Maryland.

Donk Carter, camp commander, said the army would not disband but would move on to another camp site, possibly in Pennsylvania.

Alcohol Aided Wasp Investigator

By United Press.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The home life of the wasp—which most people might be willing to take for granted—can be explored with judicious use of a little alcohol.

Barbara Betz, of the school of hygiene of Johns Hopkins university, is author of the latest approved method. She announces that there are 105 big ones and 297 little ones in the average nest. This figure includes queens (several), workers (17), drones, larvae and pupae.

The method is simple. Miss Betz took a nest and quickly dropped it in a jar of alcohol. A year later she pulled it out. The immediate effect of the alcohol is unknown, but at the year's end the wasps were definitely dead.

The rest was an easy matter. Miss Betz dissected the nest and its 3,195 cells, and made her count.

SIX LEADING AMERICANS FOR ECONOMY

Six of the foremost men of America have accepted leadership of the National Economy league to war on waste in government which has been declared with the formal sanction of President Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt. This is the membership of the national advisory council: Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Elihu Root, Newton D. Baker, Gen. John J. Pershing and Admiral S. Sims. This league has been formed to drive the fight against alleged excessive payments to veterans and mounting government costs. It is to be a nation-wide and non-partisan organization. It is designed to give persistent attention to keeping down governmental expenditures. Well, a nation-wide league is needed, but all this is a reminder that the great burden of taxation is local and not federal.

County governments have run wild in expenditures and high costs; city governments played the same game and now the taxpayers are groaning beneath the burdens. Away down in Texas the county load and the city load together are responsible for the back-breaking conditions of the taxpayers. Really, the people are to blame. Whenever called upon, they voted county bond issues, city bond issues and independent district bond issues. There is ever a day-day. There is ever a day of reckoning. There is ever a day when the musicians who have furnished the marching and dancing tunes must be given their back salaries or they go on strike. These are facts. Ninety per cent of the state revenue in Texas goes for the support of highways and public education. 'Tis true that Texas has been lifted out of the mud. 'Tis true that the cattle trails have been brushed aside and modern hard highways have taken their place. It is likewise true that the gasoline buyers and the cigaret smokers of Texas have contributed most of the millions of the cost of highways and education in recent years.

There are eight teachers' colleges in Texas, and the over-production of teachers, or so-called teachers, is almost as great as the over-production of the fleecy staple in the cottonfields of the commonwealth. Hard facts may be ugly facts but hard facts should be told the electorate instead of the flimsy bunk and outright falsehoods which have been hurled in the teeth of voters from every stump under Texas skies.

UNCLE ANDY AS A STAND PATTER

Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon is not going to resign. He loves the atmospheric conditions largely social which surround the Court of St. James, or to be exact, minister plenipotentiary from this republic to Great Britain. He is enjoying his brief visit on this side of the Atlantic. He was given the once-over by press representatives. He refused to discuss debts or reparations or anything official. He declined to discuss the coming political campaign. He handed out this Mellonish statement: "I will do anything I can but I did not come home for that purpose." Uncle Andy is a many-sided man. He is an American billionaire. He is a topnotcher among the financiers of the world. He knows the political game to a fare-you-well. He has been able to pull the invisible wires which have ever held the proletarian Vares on the trunk of the elephant and the aristocrats of finance and commerce and politics on the upper deck of the elephant, regardless of political upheavals or wet or dry rows the nation over. He is one great personage who always knows when to talk and how to say it. He is not a personage who is afflicted with that great human handicap known as "the sloppy tongue and the drooping mouth." There are republicans who pose as leaders and likewise many democrats who pose as leaders who are given to the sloppy tongue habit as well as the drooping mouth habit. Nature made it so. Did Uncle Andy name Pomerene? A fine political play.

Calamity howlers in the average city are simply volutes who try to feast upon industry and civic progress, men who want to destroy—whose minds run to things destructive instead of things that are constructive.

Nothing worth while is ever done without a vision. A community must have a proper vision before it can progress.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

HORACE WRIGHT, Editor of the Anniston (Ala.) Star, says:

"A merchant may decline to advertise his business, maintaining that it would not pay, but let him be placed in charge of the arrangements for some function and he immediately goes to the newspaper for help in getting it before the public. He believes in advertising, but will not admit it. Therefore, we say that everybody believes in advertising, unconsciously, perhaps, in some cases, but firmly nevertheless.

"If a person tells you he does not believe in advertising, ask him to take stock of himself. Doubtless he does not know his own mind in this matter or is not honest enough to speak his convictions.

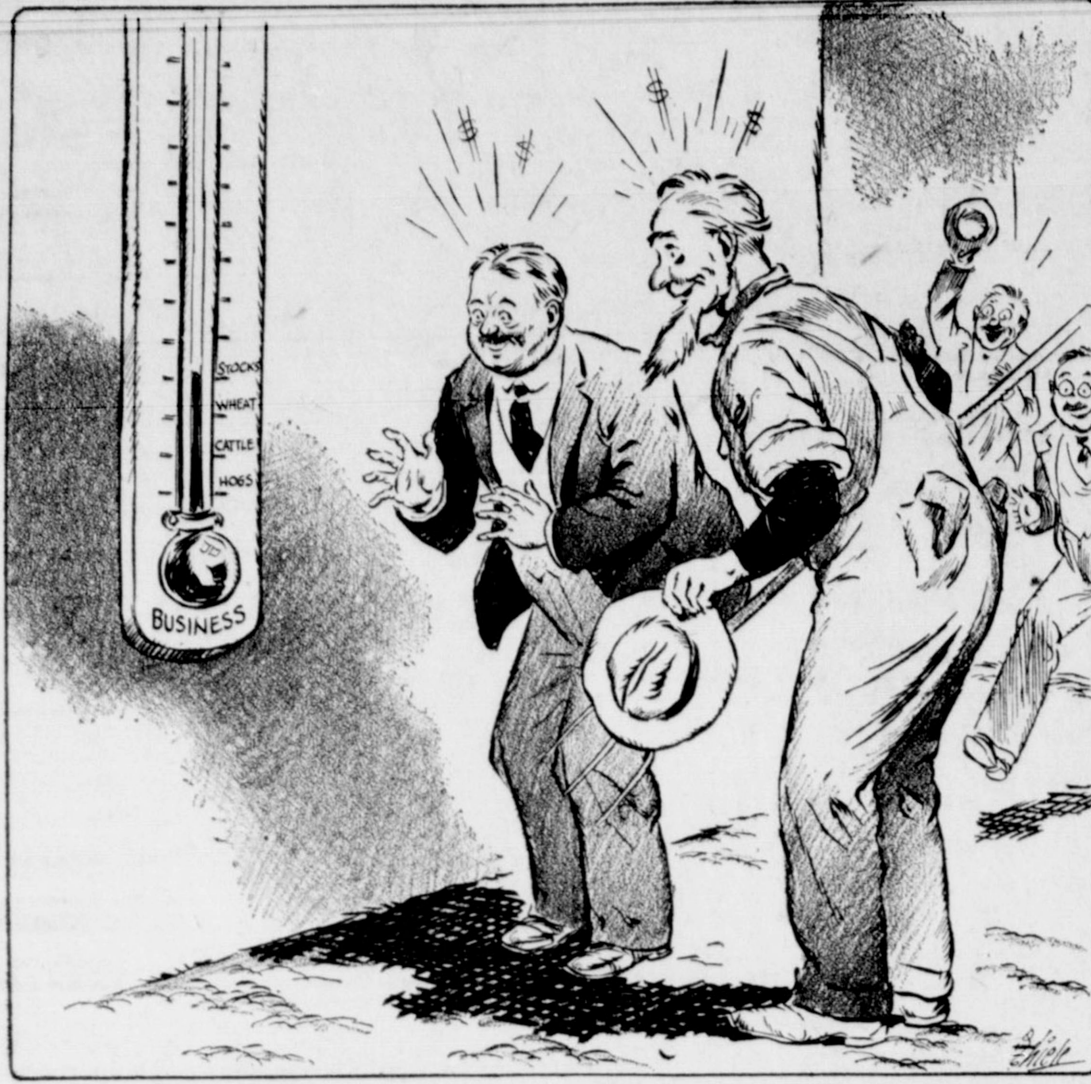

"Ask him why everybody, men and women, young and old, is smoking cigarets today, whereas a generation ago the person addicted to that habit was pointed out to the young boy as a horrible example of depraved tastes and degeneration. The answer is advertising.

"What is it that fills the motion picture theatre? It is the advertising given the picture in advance of the show. The people do not seek the show today, with radios, automobiles and other diversions for competition. The show must seek the people.

"Why do nine out of ten men who shave themselves today use a safety razor while our fathers and grandfathers stuck to the trusty straight-edge for the weekly grooming process and would have scoffed at the suggestion that they use one of those 'new-fangled do-jiggers'?"

"One may say that one does not believe in advertising, but the facts are there, indisputably plain. And the actions of the would-be doubter always believe his words."

One Rising Thermometer That's Popular!

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

Saturday we were informed that the Ranger All-Stars would play the Breckenridge Dynamos, so we wrote up a little story about the ball game, but on Monday we couldn't find any of the players to find out some of the details about the game. Previous engagements and all that sort of thing prevented us from seeing the game but we are sorry we missed it.

Anyway, we later learned that the Dynamos won the game by the score of 22 to 9. The All-Stars were trailing by a score of 22 to 2 when they went into the ninth inning, but apparently the Dynamos were about run down because the All-Stars ran seven runs.

Hits and errors were more or less plentiful, Breckenridge making 29 hits and four errors to 12 hits and 3 errors for Ranger.

We saw a baseball game at the Polo Grounds in New York once when nine runs were made in one inning. This was several years ago and we have forgotten who was playing the Giants at the time. Anyway, when they hung up the figure "9", on the scoreboard it was so dusty one couldn't read it from the grandstand and no one in the stands had an adding machine or a counter to keep track of the runs and most of the fans had to go home and buy a sporting edition of the papers to find out what the final score really was.

Which reminds us that we always wanted to see a game of cricket to see what it was all about, but just recently we read an account of a game that was played between an Australian team and a team from New York. The game started at 11:30 in the morning and ended that night at 7:30, with time out for lunch and tea.

According to the account of the game it was a short affair at that. It seems that the bowler, who does the pitching, takes as long a run as he wishes before throwing the ball and the batter can either hit it or let it pass as he chooses, without penalty to the bowler or the batter, and when the batter hits one he can run or wait until he gets a longer hit. He uses his own judgment as to when he is to run and waits for what looks like a sure thing before running.

It is the only game of which we have heard where a good, long foul counts for as much as good, long drive within the grounds. If it goes far enough it counts for four runs without the batter leaving his box. A hit to the fence also counts for four runs without the batter leaving his box.

A real close game is reported to last five or six days. Maybe it does, and maybe it doesn't. As we said we never saw a game.

And while speaking of sports, we might add, for no reason at all, that to our way of thinking six-day bicycle racing is the absolute zero as far as we are concerned.

We attended one once. We got there about 6:30 in the evening and remained with a frenzied six-day bike fan, until 4 o'clock in the morning. And all that time about 10 or 12 men were riding bicycles around and around a circular track in single file. Ever so often a bell would ring and they would ride a little faster for a couple or more laps and would then slow down again. These, according to our friend who was a six-day race fan, were sprints. At the end of one of the alleged sprints an announcer would tell who won, but not why. Then scores would be marked up on a board to tell who was winning.

read a newspaper. Then his partner would come out and take his place while he went in a little tent for a nap. Occasionally, so we were told, a lap would be stolen but that looked easy to us, as most of the riders seemed to be half asleep and didn't pay much attention to what the others were doing.

And out at Los Angeles some men have walked, or are going to walk, 50,000 meters in one of the Olympic races. We imagine that would be about as exciting as watching men ride bicycles around a track.

African Dodger Didn't Dodge Bullet

REVERE, Mass.—John Bell is an African Dodger by profession but he draws the line at dodging bullets.

Taking a nap in back of his concession at an amusement resort here, Bell was awakened by a stinging sensation in the calf of his left leg. A stray bullet fired by an inaccurate marksman at an adjacent shooting gallery had struck him.

OLDEST TREE CELEBRATES

By United Press.
ALLOUVILLE-BELLEPOSE, Seine Inferieure, France — The oldest tree in France has just celebrated its 1,300th birthday anniversary here before a gathering of natives and tourists. King Charles II of England visited the venerable tree in the 17th Century and King Louis XV of France came in 1760. It is said that ten men, with arms extended, can scarcely grip the green giant, and that 40 children can fit in the hollow of the trunk.

noise that frightened all the little boys. A large balloon that Windy had was blown up far too high. "My goodness," he exclaimed, "it's flat. I'm sorry that I busted that. I'll be a bit more careful when some other ones I try."

"Just look! I've blown it way up high. It's fat enough to make it sigh. In fact, it is so plump I do not think that it could run."

"BRING on more animals for me!" cried Duncy. "I just love to see the way they look when they're blown up. Say how about a cow?"

"You've been a big help, bless your souls, in finding balloons with little holes. I'm sure none of you Tinymites, at this time, want to shirk."

"I'll bet the horns would be a sight, if I should fill them out just right. I have enough wind left, I'm sure, so bring it on right now!"

"Of course we don't," kind Scouty said. "We're very glad to go ahead until the job is finished. Then, perhaps, we'll have some fun."

He blew the cow up nice and big and then exclaimed, "Have you a pig? If so, let someone ride on that. 'Twill be a sight to see."

"My motto is, don't start a task that you can't finish. All I ask is that you let us play a while as soon as we are done."

The man replied, "Why sure, my son. You'll see a lot before we're done. In fact, I've animals enough for a menagerie." (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service Inc.)

'As advertised...'

Here is a phrase with which shoppers are becoming more and more familiar. "As advertised"—these words are full of meaning. Placed with stacks or heaps of merchandise, they announce plainly for all to see—"Here are the goods we promised you, exactly as they were described in our advertisement." Such merchandise is dependable. Its quality is fully vouched for by the manufacturer who made it and by the store or dealer who is now offering it to you.

As it is advertised—so it is. Experience proves this to be true. The advertisements in this newspaper are sincere messages to you from the most progressive merchants who affix their signatures to attest to the correctness of every statement made. In his advertisements, the advertiser expresses the soundness of his entire business policy.

Read the advertisements every day. They are interesting. They will keep you informed of all the newest and best offerings to be found in the shops and stores. The advertisements are a daily record of business progress. They will save you time and money and assure fullest value for every purchase you make.

IMPORTANT
When you ask for a product by name, as a result of advertising, accept a substitute—substitutes are offered not as a service to you, but for other reasons.

HERE--- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

You don't have to go to the South Sea Islands, or the jungles of Africa, in order to discover weird and unusual growths in grass, weeds, and unholy vegetation.

Just save your money these hard times, and take a stroll around the town of Eastland, just anywhere, just any place, in business district or residence section, or wherever you may be able to walk or motor, and you will see weeds, weeds, weeds—some as tall as your head, other bunches shorter, all dry, all dusty, all full of insects and mosquitoes, and all a fine fire trap.

Why is it that residence or property owners, who have vacant houses, waiting for a prospective tenant, have allowed the weeds to grow up to the windows, choking the grounds, crowding the grounds, crowding the parking, even hanging over the street curbs. Such adornments are not an attraction to the property, and most assuredly not any help in renting the same.

Is this condition the fault of the many in charge of rental, or the property owner? There is a weed cutting ordinance in Eastland, a city ordinance, that is on the books today. Why not enforce this ordinance?

It should never be necessary to appeal to the pride of the people to keep their city as clean as their individual responsibility should help to make it.

There are many men out of work in Eastland today, and they would be glad to take this job of weed-cutting at a ridiculously low price.

It is not a pleasant thing to have visitors, to Eastland, exclaim over

BEHOLD HERE TODAY
MONA MORAN, receptionist in a Wall Street law office, goes with her childhood sweetheart, STEVE SACCARELLI, to a popular supper resort, the Halcyon Club. Mona supports her invalid father, mother, little sister, KITTY, and never-do-well brother, BUD. Steve has been mysteriously absent for three years. He has returned, well dressed and prosperous. With no thought of impropriety, he has ordered a gown and wrap sent to Mona which, after much indecision, she wears.

At the office that day Mona has met BARRY TOMKENSEN, rich and socially prominent, but refused his invitation to dine with him.

Bud Moran comes to the Halcyon Club to see BUD HARKINS, the proprietor, who has underworld connections. Mona sees her brother and fears he is associating with gangsters. Steve quits her fears.

LOTIE CARL, fashion model, dismisses her escort and joins Mona and Steve. Steve's business partner arrives. He proves to be Barry Townsend. Barry tells Mona how Steve years before had befriended him, how together they sailed for South America and he been operating a diamond mine that Townsend inherited.

After Mona and her friends leave the supper club Harkins tells his lieutenant that Steve has a huge diamond, known as "The Empress of Peru," which the gangsters plan to steal.

Mona, Lotie, Steve and Barry go about together frequently. One evening when they are all at Steve's apartment Harkins tells them to go there and say Mona's mother is ill. Harkins plans to get the diamond that night.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIII

It was, as Steve put it, "a man's sized supper." Steve had completed "a deal," he explained rather vaguely, and was in the height of good spirits.

The apartment, charming and attractive, met with even Lotie's rather tart approval. "Motion picture stuff!" was Steve's dismissal of the surroundings. The living room might almost have been planned for a skating rink. There was a fireplace, huge comfortable chairs, low tables, ash trays.

Presently the table was whisked away and coffee served in front of the dancing flames. Barry and Steve lit Turkish cigarettes brought from the American Virgin Islands. They spoke again of the Empress of Peru—that mammoth diamond found by Steve in the mine.

"It's one of the largest ever found in South America," Barry explained. "It's Steve's, of course, though he always speaks of it as 'ours.' He picked it up just as you might pick up a golf ball. It's worth a fortune. I'm still only a working man but your friend here has made his pile."

"Our pile," Steve said shortly. It was plain to be seen he was not enjoying this turn of the conversation.

"Yours," returned Barry evenly. It developed that the stone had been picked up on land deemed to be owned by Barry during their first year at the mine in lieu of cash payment of salary. That made the Empress Steve's.

"It must be wonderful to dig diamonds right out of the ground," Lotie said dreamily.

STEVE rose, carelessly thrust aside a tapestry, twirled the knob of a safe and drew out a thin string of glittering stones which he held for a moment against his palm.

It was a chain of diamonds. The girls gasped in delight. Steve fitted the chain about Mona's neck and she rose too, cupping her hands in front of her as though she expected the precious string to break.

Before the mirror she twisted and turned, murmuring excitedly, "This is the nearest I've ever been to a diamond necklace!"

"Old Steve collected those for you, Mona," Barry told her. "Every week or so he'd add another. Used to carry them around in a little chamois bag and every so often he'd count them."

Mona looked at Steve who stood near her, silent. The necklace, catching the lights, shone no more brightly than Mona's eyes.

Steve nodded. "Yes, they're yours, Mona."

She flushed, started to speak and her eyes met Lotie's. Then Mona laughed suddenly. "Why, how silly for me to think—even for a moment—that I could take them!" She unfastened the catch and let the necklace dribble into her hand, holding it out to Steve.

Barry found himself wishing Mona could have accepted the jewels while at the same time he understood it was impossible.

"Show us The Empress, Steve," Mona said to hide her confusion. Steve's face lighted. He raised his eyes and for a moment looked thoughtful.

"I'd love to see a fortune rolled up in one stone the size of a peanut," Lotie sighed.

STEVE said nothing and Barry took it in briskly. "There aren't many like this one! Steve keeps it right here in this apartment."

"Risky, isn't it?" Mona asked quietly.

"Risky? Sure. What isn't risky nowadays? It seems," Steve's voice became suddenly bitter, "that it's even risky to offer a gift to an old friend. If it hadn't been for you, Mona, those diamonds would never have been mined. I wouldn't have finished the job without you to think about."

"Save the necklace for a wedding present!" Barry suggested hastily. "Maybe she'll wear it then."

"Will you, Mona?"

Something in Steve's voice frightened the girl. "Yes," she answered. "I will. If only you don't stipulate whom I shall marry when the time comes."

"I'll leave that to you," Steve said gravely.

"But about the Empress," Barry reminded. "Even I don't know where he keeps that."

"The Empress? Oh, yes," Steve straightened. "Tell you what I did with it. Remember, I know a thing or two about crooks. There was a man in the old gang named Bridgie Hayden. He was a 'dip'—used to steal jewels right from the necks of women who came into the supper club. Time after time police would be called in but no one could ever find the diamonds on Bridgie. He'd sit there drinking ginger ale and maybe eating a sandwich before a bowl of cracked ice. The table would be cleared right under the eyes of the police and there were the jewels, hidden in the bowl of ice!"

"Is the Empress to be found among the sardines and marshmallows?" Lotie asked.

Steve smiled and shook his head. "Not exactly. I put it in the top tray of the refrigerator."

"The refrigerator!" Even Barry gasped in amazement. Barry had not guessed Steve's hiding place.

"Yes, I bent the tray so Morgan couldn't take it out very easily and would be sure to use the lower one when he needed ice cubes. The Empress is as secure there as it would be locked in a safe!"

"Oh, Steve—you didn't! Worth a fortune and you left it waiting to slide into somebody's ginger ale!"

"Let's see it, Steve!"

"Wait," Steve said mysteriously. He rose, twirled the dial of the radio and strains of dance music floated into the softly lighted room.

HE and Lotie whirled into a dance while Mona and Barry sat watching. The dance ended and the four had a few hands of bridge. The game was going merrily when the telephone rang. Steve answered to return with a serious face.

He looked at Mona sympathetically. "It's for you," he said seriously. "Bud's downstairs and wants you to come home. He has a cab waiting. Said he'd rather Barry and I didn't come along."

Mona's face had drained of color as she arose.

"I'll go with you," Lotie said, disappearing into the region where they had left their coats. She was back with Mona's wraps before the other girl had gathered herself together sufficiently to speak.

"Don't worry," Barry begged as he helped Mona into her coat.

Bud appeared then at the door of the apartment. "It's nothing really," he said. "Ma just felt bad and wanted you home. I'll get a doctor if you say so. I don't think it's anything serious, though."

The three stood waiting for the elevator.

"Mona," Steve said, "I'm sorry Bud thinks we shouldn't go with you. Telephone us, will you, when you get home? We'll be here." He paused uncertainly and then added, "Or wait—we're due at the club. Telephone us there if you don't hear from us."

Mona agreed. The elevator arrived and the anxious little group dispersed.

"The club?" Barry asked in a puzzled tone. "Are we going there?"

For answer Steve shook his head mysteriously and shoved Barry into the apartment. "Do you think I'd have let that girl go home alone if I thought her mother was really ill?"

Rapidly he examined the outer door of the apartment.

"Then you said that?" Barry began.

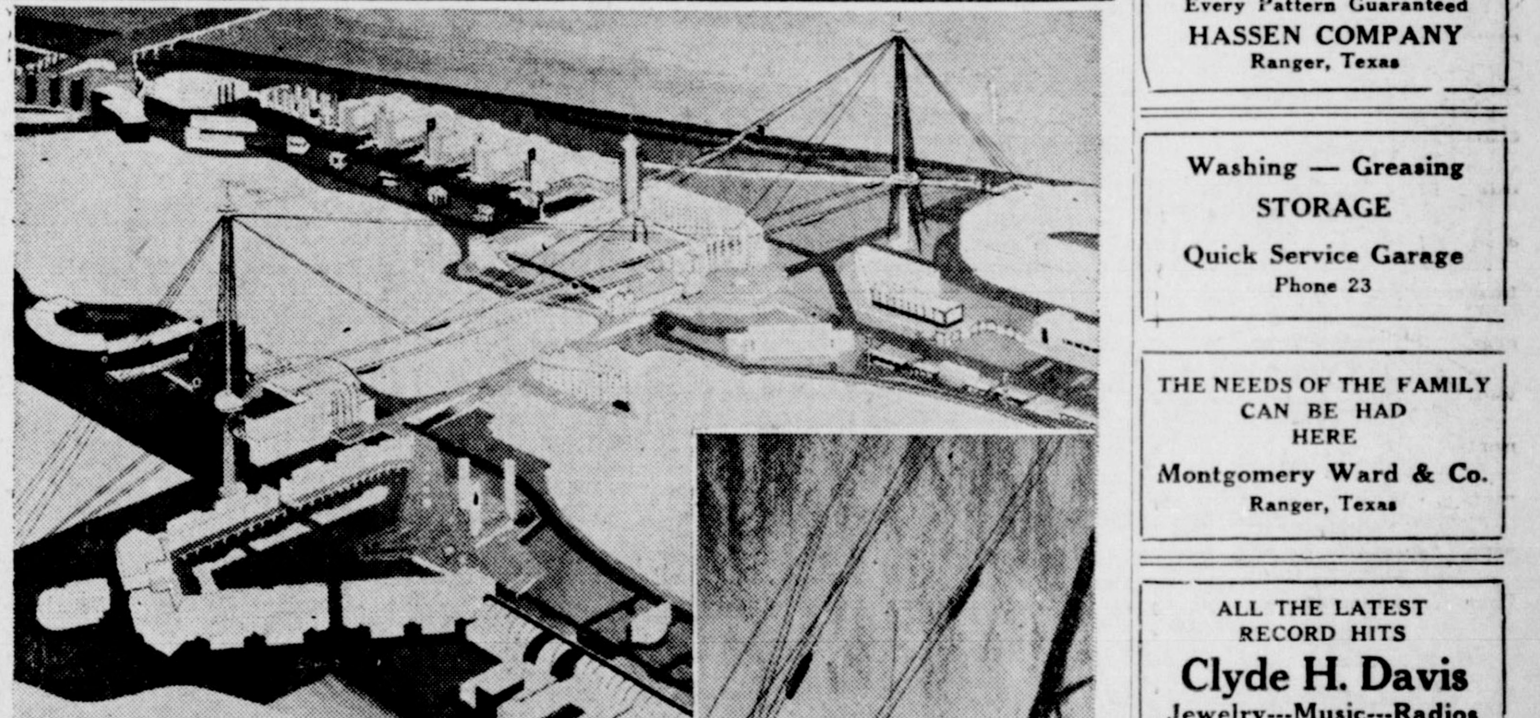

Steve nodded. "Exactly!" He pointed to the door. "Moran took an impression of the lock while he was waiting. He'll be back because he thinks we're going out. Are you game for a little reception party?"

"They're coming for the Empress, Steve?"

Steve nodded. "They are! But don't worry about that. Looking around Steve rubbed his hands together. "Now," he chuckled, "we'll show Mr. Buck Harkins we're ready for him!"

Visitors to 'Sky Ride' Over Chicago World's Fair

How Sky Ride Will Look at Chicago in 1933.

The Ferris Wheel of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893 and the Eiffel Tower of the Paris Exposition of 1900 will have their counterpart in the "Sky Ride" of Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition in 1933.

Contracts have just been signed for construction of two steel towers, 600 feet high, 2,000 feet apart and connected by cables on which rocket-shaped glass-and-aluminum cars will shoot over the exposition grounds 200 feet in air.

High speed elevators will carry passengers to observation platforms on top of the towers, which will be the highest structures east of New York. From this eminence, visitors will be able to see three states—Indiana, Michigan and Illinois. Spread beneath them like an animated map will be the city of Chicago and the exposition.

The towers will be triangular in section, easily painted and ornamented. At night they will be brilliantly illuminated. Flood lights attached to the bottom of the elevators will transform the glass shafts into fluctuating pillars of colored light.

Eight rocket cars will circle the towers at the 200 foot level on an aerial track of four cables. Seats will be arranged lengthwise and double-decked so that passengers face outward.

Artist's View of Rocket Cars Speeding Between 600-Foot Towers at Elevation of 200 Feet at Chicago Fair.

The estimated cost of the Sky Ride is $1,000,000. Two thousand tons of steel will be required for the towers and another thousand tons of steel for the sixteen cables—eight for the two aerial tracks and eight for the supporting cables, including the 600-foot backstays.

J. O. Y. Class Plans Activities.
Several members of the J. O. Y. class were present for their regular meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Baptist church, with Mrs. L. J. Lambert, counsellor for class in attendance.

As the meeting was small an informal discussion as to plans of the work for the future, was led by the president of the class, Miss Alline Williams, and the second vice president, Miss Mamie Armstrong.

Miss Jo Wood was elected to fill the vacancy of the first vice presidency.

A beautiful meeting was enjoyed, one with spiritual values.

The group made a social plan for a hayride and watermelon feast. The counsellor stated these plans will be settled at the meeting of the Sunday school class, next Sunday morning and urged that all members attend same.

Eastern Star Plans Anniversary.
The chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, held their regular meeting Tuesday night in the Masonic temple, with a more than good attendance, considering this hot weather.

The worthy matron, Mrs. W. J. Thomas, presided. Plans were made for a picnic, Aug. 31, to be held for members and their families, at 6 p. m., in city park.

A brief program will be presented on that occasion, in memory of the founder of the order, Robert Morris.

Home Makers Class.
Several members of the Home Makers class assembled at the Baptist church Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock for their regular meeting of the board of officers, but no business was transacted, as the president, Mrs. William Sheriffs, is out of the city, and there was not sufficient in attendance to form the necessary quorum.

However, many plans were informally discussed, and the meeting was not considered a wasted one.

Basket Weaving New Occupation.
The Talahi group of Camp Fire Girls are to be taught basket weaving by Mrs. Tom Harrell, co-guardian of this group, several members of whom met with Mrs. Harrell on the top floor of the Harrell garage, which has been cleverly converted into a teepee for the Talahi group.

The basket weaving was taught by Mrs. Harrell, and a delightful morning was spent.

The art of basket weaving among the Indian women is well known, is a beautiful one.

Mrs. Harrell stated these classes will be held each Tuesday morning for the Talahi group.

The teepee is a quaint and charming place, and will be quite a picturesque headquarters for those engaged in the handicrafts arts.

Delightful Sunday House Party.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Maxey had a number of guests for an all-day Sunday visit, those from out of town, including Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jones; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jarrett, and Mr. W. W. Phillips, here to spend week-end with his wife.

At 1 o'clock a delicious picnic luncheon was served of fried chicken, sandwiches, many other delectable edibles, hot buttered rolls, iced tea, and with last course of ice cream.

At the end of seven guests were former Eastland people, and are always welcome and popular visitors.

It was a most enjoyable and delightful day, and always to be remembered by those present.

HOW TO FEED FIFTY—ALL AT ONCE!

Family reunions, unlike what you thought, are on the increase! The great annual trek back to the old home town, far from being discarded, continues with renewed vigor this year and we find the "city sophisticates" and the "country cousins" and the aunts and uncles once-removed all returning to the scenes of their childhood so dear to their hearts.

If you are the one that's going maybe you won't need these words (maybe!) But if it's the other way 'round and you have to receive all the relatives—and, what's worse, feed 'em—it's a dish of another flavor! Then you will wish you'd clipped these quantity recipes when you had the chance.

Now don't be too sure you won't have to know anything about feeding vast numbers, even though your nearest relative lives in Port Said. You may be called on to supervise the annual outing of the Busy Bees or the annual picnic of the Something-or-Others, or at the very least, have to serve on the supper or picnic committee of your club. When that fateful day comes, these few rules will help keep your composure safe for visiting rich uncles:

Use ingredients which are easy to handle, which need little previous preparation; remember that good things come in cans and packages. Serve foods that are universally liked, so that you will satisfy the largest number. Choose a few good dishes and make quantities of them, instead of trying to have great variety. Make things which pack well and carry well, and that are not too fancy.

Since serving healthful ingredients will spare you the walls of the finicky, and serving food which is equally suitable for youngsters and oldsters saves you from having two sets of dishes, you will find that the use of pasteurized dates in your dishes will help solve your problem. They are both healthful and popular, and need no pitting or washing to use.

Several of the cafeteria and home economics departments of our colleges have developed recipes for quantity servings. They are given here:

Fifty Thrifty Sandwiches
5 pkgs. pasteurized dates
2 cups (7 oz.) walnut meats
1 1/2 cups fruit juice or cream
2 tsp. grated orange rind

SPADES GARDEN AT 87

IONIA, Mich.—At 87 years of age, Mrs. Jennie DeYoung House, mother of 11 children, still helps earn her living by spading in her garden. "Grandma," as she is known here, is convinced girls of today could live to be her age if they followed her example of hard work.

PARIS STYLES
By MARY KNIGHT,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS.—A plain dark blue bathing suit with a sun-tan back and large dark brick-red scarf and coat-frock in heavy shantung to wear over it is just one of the excellent combinations being shown by Worth to Riviera bound clients. Red sandals of the same shade and a large sun hat, if desired, make an interesting new color note on the neutral beach.

Striped materials for sports wear are frequently seen on the Mediterranean coast, but plain white, worn with dark blue or brilliant colored accessories is smarter than anything else and is chosen by those who know the real value of simplicity in achieving chic.

Another beach costume that has caused rather a sensation lately consists of a white bathing suit covered with red dots the size of poker chips. It is cut away here and there so daringly one gasps at first sight wondering what manner of magic holds the pieces together. The material is jersey.
