"MY WORK IS DONE-WHY WAIT?"
George Eastman, the kodak king and one of the industrial and financial leaders of America if not the world, finished his career at 77. His closest friend, Lewis B. Jones, vice president of the Eastman Kodak company, furnished the epitaph for his chief after the end had come when he said "George Eastman played the game to the last. By his hand he lived his life and by his own hand he ended it." His life had been a romance and his career had been startling in its achievements. He found the camera a crude and raw thing. He made it one of the great industries of civilization. He achieved vast wealth. He was not money mad, he was not miserly. After success had come to him he gave more than $75,000,000 to the city where he had amassed his fortune, to schools and colleges, to dental dispensaries in foreign lands, to the cause of education where young men could be trained along practical lines, and in the dark hours of the World War his remaining millions were at the command of the government.

More than three years ago he was stricken. His physical power had broken. He was face to face with the messenger of death. His brain was as clear as ever. He put his household in order, he divested himself of his vast holdings, he had been the very soul of generosity with his dealings with his employes and business associates. He had been charitable to a fault. Men said of him that he had been just to all his fellows, rich or poor or high or low. There was no chance for recovery. He was on the brink. This was the note he pinned before he stepped out into the unknown: "To my friends-my work is done. Why wait?"

American financiers say that his business affairs were most satisfactory. He had no worries of a financial nature. There were no blowholes in the structure of the great Eastman Kodak corporation. He had wisely planned everything. Then he stepped aside and the men whom he had named to conduct his colossal business will carry on as George Eastman carried on ever since he began active life in his boyhood as a messenger boy at a salary of $3 per week. His biographer declared when all was over it was the ambition of the life of this masterful industrial leader and financier to die as poor in purse as he was when he started out a little wage earner more than 65 years ago. Did he make the grade?

THRILLING EVENTS THE WORLD OVER
Germany cast 38,000,000 votes in the most exciting election in its history and President Von Hindenburg lacked a majority of only 168,000 over all. This was an historical event. It let the world know that Germany is determined to walk in the path that is sane and safe. In the wake of the election came the suicide of Ivar Krueger, the Swedish match king. He was widely known in financial circles the world over. His financial concern had loaned $250,000,000 to 12 nations. He owed $80,000,000 in short time notes to Americans. American bankers refused to carry. French bankers offered to carry and make the necessary advances but the demands of the bankers the match king considered very exacting and he calmly snuffed out the candle of life. Then the third day after Von Hindenburg astounded the world by the largeness of his vote and his nearness to one of the greatest personal victories in modern times. George Eastman, a king of industry and a king of finance, feeling that his work has been done and that disease was wrecking his frame, ended it all, leaving this interrogatory behind him in a short note, "Why wait?" Ivar Krueger in his youth won his start in America—a construction hand in Chicago, a contractor for great buildings the republic over. Later the organization of independent match companies in Sweden, and then loans to the rest of the world secured from grants on monopolies on the match business. His interests reached from the workman's match pocket to the treasuries of the nations of the world, from pulp paper to light and power, from iron ore to railroads, and then back to the savings accounts of wage workers.

Kings and paupers come and go. A few daring souls accumulate great fortunes and the many struggle from the cradle to the grave. In the last analysis man is as impotent as the beggar at the gate. He comes and goes like a flea in the sand.

FIGHTING PAT HURLEY ON THE WARPATH.
"Fighting Pat" Hurley, the voice of President Hoover, is on the warpath. His latest is that democrats are responsible for prohibition, nationwide, and the income tax and that they violated the undying principle of states rights when they forced the so-called twin blessings on the American people. In a Chicago address he predicted that the republican platform would be more liberal than in the past in its dealings with the prohibition issue. Did "Fighting Pat" throw out a political feeler or was he "jes' sloshin' around?"

Chairman Huggins and his state committee made business for the higher courts. It was ever thus in the political campaigns of Texas. Why worry? It makes excellent copy for the readers of newspapers.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK
By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT newspaper advertising arouses the interest of the public in the articles or service advertised. Merchandise or service, well advertised in the newspapers, is pretty well sold to prospective buyers. So well sold, in fact, that they will go straight to the advertiser when in need of articles or service advertised. It is a well known fact that newspapers use every precaution in their power to keep fraudulent advertising out of their papers. For that reason the public has more confidence in newspaper advertising than in any other form of advertising. Right now every merchant should pay particular attention to his advertising. Newspaper advertising catches the eye and brings customers to a store; it causes sales. Newspaper advertising is a simple means of getting the seller and buyer together.

Texas University To Open Oil Lands
AUSTIN, March 23.—Rising prices and stronger demand for oil leases soon will lead the University of Texas to open more of its West Texas oil lands to development, university officials said during the March meeting of the board of regents. Absence of Regent Edward Crane, Dallas, prevented a meeting of the board for leasing university lands at this time. Geologizing and survey of the university lands recently was transferred by the legislature back from the leasing board to the board of regents. Field representatives of the regents were here for the March session, and accompanied Regent Robert L. Holliday, member of the leasing board, in an extended survey of undeveloped oil lands of the university at the close of the board meeting.

School Children On Program of Ranger Rotary

The Ranger Rotary club was pleasantly entertained today by two youngsters from Hodges Oak Park, who had won in story telling contests. Dorothy Marie Henry, who won first place in the Eastland county meet, and F. N. Hassen Jr., who won second place in story telling, were presented by Mrs. John Thurman. The two, who are in the second grade, gave the stories they had told in the meet and the assembled Rotarians enjoyed the program very much.

A nominating committee, composed of three past presidents of the club, was named to make nominations for officers for the election to be held later in the year. The committee, which is composed of C. E. May, H. C. Anderson and John Thurman, is to nominate officers, but other nominations can be made from the floor on the day of the election. Harry Wheelton made an announcement concerning the plant operators' meeting to be held in Ranier on March 29 and invited any business men or citizens of the town who wished to do so to be present. Ty Grasianno made an announcement about the Easter egg matinee to be given at the Arcadia theatre on Saturday morning and the Easter egg hunt to be held at the Willows on Easter Sunday. F. D. Hicks was elected as a new member. P. Pettit of Cisco was the only visitor.

The dime dance girl
JOAN CAUTION
BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rossier, beautiful 20-year-old, loves Larry Harrowgate. When he becomes a dancer, she goes to another girl, Ellen. Her husband, Steven Barclay, is old and wealthy. Her indebted family is indebted to "CLOCKY."

Scandal accompanied his divorce from Leda Gray. To avoid publicity Ellen and Barclay are secretly married. They drove to his Long Island estate except for Ferguson, who is 45 miles away. Barclay suffers a heart attack. Louis Symes, Barclay's lawyer, arrives with doctors. Barclay dies at dawn. Symes tells Ellen her marriage is legal because papers for Barclay's divorce have been filed. Ellen yields all claims on her fortune to avoid scandal. She then learns Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. She returns home. She tells Ellen her marriage is legal because papers for Barclay's divorce have been filed. Ellen yields all claims on her fortune to avoid scandal. She then learns Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. She returns home.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII
 "You mean I hadn't any right to say that?"
 "I guess that's what I mean," she said, a little uncertainly. "You see you didn't say a word."
 "It didn't occur to me," he said, faintly scowling. "It's damned hard for me to be honest now. It's hard for me to remember how smug and complacent I was during those days before I got that last note of yours. It's easy enough to remember how I've felt since—half crazy from thinking I'd lost you."
 "Do you know why I came here tonight?" he demanded.
 "No, I don't know."
 "It was because I thought it would help cure me—help me see this place was no fairyland. When I saw you again and thought you were lost to me, I almost turned and ran. Then I thought I'd have to show you that you couldn't hurt me, though really you'd hurt me worse than anyone ever will again. So I danced with Tony. She told me—and that's all there is!"
 "That day you wrote the note to me at the store—you didn't feel this way then?" Ellen questioned.
 "No, I didn't," Larry confessed, groping for the words. "I wanted mother to meet you because I liked you. I liked you a lot from the first, Ellen, but I didn't realize I loved you, that you were my whole life. And then mother—"
 "Didn't want to meet me," Ellen completed the sentence.
 He went on, neither denying or affirming her statement. "I was content that things should drift along with us until you showed me they just wouldn't drift."
 "But you were engaged," she pointed out, wondering that the fact that had once made all her days as watched seemed now of no importance.
 "True again. But that didn't seem important to me. I did think of telling you, thought of it several times, but I never seemed to find just the right occasion. You know how that is, don't you?"
 He stopped and then went on again. "You'd understand better if you knew Liz Bowes. She slips in and out of two or three engagements every season. There was a time when I thought I cared for her enough to be engaged, even to think of marrying her. Her family was delighted and mother was too. But then Liz came home from Europe. I had your last note and knew I'd lost everything, everything in the world, Ellen."
 "I went out to your house that night, Ellen. Did you know that? Your mother told me you never wanted to see me again."
 "Mother did what she thought was best," Ellen said slowly.
 "You hadn't any idea what I went through that night," Larry said passionately.
 She shook her head in correction. "I think I do know."
 "How do you know? Tell me how?" he demanded hungrily.
 "But she could only look at him, her lips unsteady, her eyes bright with tears and her hands pressed in his."
 "Can you understand, Ellen, how a man might subconsciously think a girl would wait when there wasn't any reason for her to wait except that she loved him? Can you imagine how a man might be so stupid and conceited and selfish? If you'll only forgive me you'll never be sorry."
 Her heart overflowed with love and forgiveness and warm pain. "Why, Larry, sweetheart, don't talk that way," she said gently. "I won't let you say such things about yourself. Of course I forgive you. I could forgive you anything."
 He seized her hand and pressed it to his lips. "Ah, you're sweet, sweet, sweet," he muttered. "Does this mean we're engaged?" she asked faintly.
 "You bet it does," he laughed. "It'll be no long engagement, either. We'll go tomorrow to get the rings."
 "Isn't this fun?" Ellen said on a long breath. "We're both of us crazy, just plain crazy! Your

 He went on, neither denying or affirming her statement. "I was content that things should drift along with us until you showed me they just wouldn't drift."
 "But you were engaged," she pointed out, wondering that the fact that had once made all her days as watched seemed now of no importance.
 "True again. But that didn't seem important to me. I did think of telling you, thought of it several times, but I never seemed to find just the right occasion. You know how that is, don't you?"
 He stopped and then went on again. "You'd understand better if you knew Liz Bowes. She slips in and out of two or three engagements every season. There was a time when I thought I cared for her enough to be engaged, even to think of marrying her. Her family was delighted and mother was too. But then Liz came home from Europe. I had your last note and knew I'd lost everything, everything in the world, Ellen."
 "I went out to your house that night, Ellen. Did you know that? Your mother told me you never wanted to see me again."
 "Mother did what she thought was best," Ellen said slowly.
 "You hadn't any idea what I went through that night," Larry said passionately.
 She shook her head in correction. "I think I do know."
 "How do you know? Tell me how?" he demanded hungrily.
 "But she could only look at him, her lips unsteady, her eyes bright with tears and her hands pressed in his."
 "Can you understand, Ellen, how a man might subconsciously think a girl would wait when there wasn't any reason for her to wait except that she loved him? Can you imagine how a man might be so stupid and conceited and selfish? If you'll only forgive me you'll never be sorry."
 Her heart overflowed with love and forgiveness and warm pain. "Why, Larry, sweetheart, don't talk that way," she said gently. "I won't let you say such things about yourself. Of course I forgive you. I could forgive you anything."
 He seized her hand and pressed it to his lips. "Ah, you're sweet, sweet, sweet," he muttered. "Does this mean we're engaged?" she asked faintly.
 "You bet it does," he laughed. "It'll be no long engagement, either. We'll go tomorrow to get the rings."
 "Isn't this fun?" Ellen said on a long breath. "We're both of us crazy, just plain crazy! Your mother will hate me. Don't tell me she won't because I know. The people you know will call me a taxi dancer. I heard Leona Clendenning that night, you remember that night at your studio. But all that just doesn't seem important! The important thing is that I love you, Larry!"

 "The important thing is that we love each other and that we found it out in time," he amended.
 After that they talked and talked. Dancers, chattering and laughing, drifted past the little table but to Ellen the others were only dim shapes, vague as the music which seemed to come from so far away. Only Larry was real. Only the fact that he loved her and the swift plans they were making.

They arranged their own future and Molly's and Mike's. Ellen laughed at Larry's desire to adopt a ready-made family but she was touched by it, too. It would be the best thing in the world for him, he declared irresponsibly. Larry really meant it. They talked of his work and of how Ellen would help him. Mentally they hung his pictures on the walls of the Metropolitan and on the walls of the Louvre. They selected a place to live and furnished it completely. They talked of the years to come.

Afterward they stepped out on the balcony to watch the rosy, flaring lights of Broadway and Larry laughed excitedly because the glow turned Ellen's hair to a deep sullen red. As she leaned dreamily against him, Ellen thought that tomorrow she would tell him of the one thing which had not been mentioned. They met, as arranged, next morning on Fifth avenue. He was late and as Ellen sat waiting in the lobby of a smart hotel she grew absurdly nervous. What had delayed him? What could have delayed him? She tried to appear easy and as much at home as the others about her. She kept her small hands folded and her small feet quiet and averted her eyes from the clock.

All at once she saw Larry swing through the revolving doors. Again the day was glorious! He glanced hurriedly about and caught her eyes. Both smiled with infinite content and Larry moved swiftly across the room. "We're starting out with the biggest chrysanthemum you ever saw," he said, tucking her hand (Continued on page 4)

The Dime a Dance Girl

A moment later they were pointing out to an interested florist the bloom in question. The great, shaggy, russet flower was pinned firmly to Ellen's coat collar.

She was in ecstasy on the trip down the avenue. To have Larry here, to know that he was proud of her and that he loved her was incredible. The day itself was incredible. The air was cool and sweet, the sky a bright, electric blue and the sun so brilliant that all the bushes seemed freshly painted.

They reached Thirty-fourth street and a small, select jewelry shop, a shop so aristocratic that for decades it had carried no sign to guide the shopper.

As she walked down a long, silken rug into an atmosphere of almost cathedral-like austerity, Ellen tried to look casual and dignified but did not succeed.

She looked exactly what she was—a rapturous, half embarrassed young girl with flushed cheeks and brilliant eyes.

Larry was as absorbed in the purchase as she was. The two bent their heads over the shining counter and pondered over dozens of rings while the watching clerk suppressed amused smiles.

The engagement ring was an easy choice, a clear blue diamond guarded by emeralds. Both exclaimed, at once over it. Larry said they did not need a box. Ellen trembled, blushed, agreed. Glory flashed on her fingers and glory flashed in her heart.

Selecting the wedding ring was more difficult. The clerk brought out a second tray and then a third. All the rings were dignified and simple, so similar that to any except lovers there would seem to be no choice.

"Here it is!" Larry cried out suddenly. He held up a slim platinum circlet with a diamond. "It might have been a twin of the ring at home that was locked in Ellen's dressing table. Her face paled with the memory.

"Don't you like it?" Larry asked, surprised. "Try it on." Ellen's hands were clasped behind her back. "Why I—don't you think it would be better to have the wedding ring more simple?" she appealed, confused and horribly frightened.

"The young lady is right," broke in the clerk. Ellen sent him a misty, grateful smile. After a moment of disappointment Larry agreed that perhaps they should choose something plainer. The "something plainer" was not platinum at all but white gold carved with minute orange blossoms. They left the ring to be engraved.

(To Be Continued) PONY MAKES WAY HOME. WATONGA, Okla.—A five-year-old pony showed it had "horse sense" here. The animal was purchased from John Michon, Watonga, and taken to a farm about 20 miles from the city. After being at its new home several months the pony found the gate to the pasture open and walked 20 miles to Michon's home in 20 days.

Rotarians With World Wide Fame Will Be Speakers

By United Press. MINERAL WELLS.—Three internationally known Rotarians, including an English baronet, will address the All-Texas conference of Rotary International to be held here May 2 and 3.

The speakers are: Sir Charles Mander, of Wolverhampton, England, past president of Rotary International of Great Britain; Robert E. L. Hill, University of Missouri alumni director, Columbia, Mo., chairman of the convention committee for the 1932 international convention at Seattle, Wash., and Clinton Anderson, Albuquerque, N. M., Rotary leader of his state.

The conference is the first of its kind since Texas was divided into three districts seven years ago.

MANAGER OF LYRIC WARNS HIS PATRONS "It isn't that I want to keep people out of the Lyric Theatre," Manager Burke said today, in explanation of the sign prominently displayed in the lobby of the Lyric Theatre: "No children admitted to see 'Freaks.' Adults not in normal health are advised against attending this picture."

"Nor is this a publicity stunt—when we say no children admitted, we mean it. And I wish I knew some way to classify the grown people so as to keep out those extra imaginative or sensitive people who really shouldn't see this picture."

"But I feel an obligation to patrons of the Lyric Theatre to tell the truth about pictures and I don't want anybody to blame me for a nervous shock. The fact is you'll forget the sights you'll see if you see 'Freaks.' People who are sensitive to the sort of physical accident shown in circus side-shows should stay away from this picture."

FIRST BATH IN TWO YEARS By United Press. MEMPHIS, Tenn.—An 87-year-old itinerant knife sharpener confessed to police, after he had been bathed by jail trustees, it was his first bath in two years.

Ben J. Jones, who was arrested by police pritty squad members, told officers he washed his hands, face and neck every morning, but a bath more than once a year was sheer waste of time and dangerous to the health.

State Railroad Commission Again Storm Center

By VERNON A. McGEE, United Press Staff Correspondent. AUSTIN.—The state railroad commission, one of the stormiest sectors on Texas' political front, assumed new importance when black-shouted Pat M. Neff accepted the presidency of Baylor university.

His farewell to Texas politics will leave a vacancy on the commission which may be temporarily filled at Governor Ross S. Sterling's appointment. Ernest O. Thompson, colorful mayor of Amarillo, or W. R. Ely of Abilene, chairman of the Texas highway commission, probably will receive the appointment in this event.

Neff's permanent successor will be chosen in the general election next November and takes office the following January with four years to serve.

Whether the new member will restore unanimity to the commission is a matter of conjecture. The November election may change the entire complexion of the commission, since Chairman C. V. Terrell's term expires in January. He announced for re-election. Opposition candidates sprang up in Texas political nurseries like mushrooms.

Malcontents in the East Texas oil field, where production orders of the commission have run a hectic course, and embittered truck operators entangled in a mesh of regulatory laws may strike a militant note at the polls.

Malcontent A. Smith, third member of the commission and a party to the coalition which drowned out the voice of Commissioner Neff, will retain his position, having not yet served his term.

If Neff delays handing his resignation to Governor Sterling after June 6, he will prevent candidates filing on the primary ballot for the four-year portion of his term.

In such an event, the democratic state executive committee must name the candidate for Neff's position on the commission. The man Governor Sterling names to fill the vacancy pending the election probably will be a candidate for the four-year term.

But should that man be Mayor Thompson, it is uncertain whether he would prefer being on the commission in preference to a fair possibility of winning as a congressman-at-large.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service WARY NOT so many years ago vitamins were divided into three groups, but scientists have gradually discovered more about these food constituents until today there are six known and tested vitamins—A, B, C, D, E and G.

Quite recently definite evidence regarding vitamin B demonstrated that this vitamin was a mixture of several vitamin factors rather than a single substance and vitamin G has been added to the vitamin alphabet.

The ideal balanced diet supplies all these food elements and every home-maker is vitally interested in the means of furnishing them. A chart showing the relative distribution of vitamins reveals that fruit and vegetables are excellent sources of the first three vitamins—A, B and C.

Under the general classification of fruits, which includes citrus as well as other varieties, this chart gives the amount of vitamin A as "variable," B "good" and C "rich." Green vegetables are designated as "good" in vitamins A and B and "rich" in vitamin C.

Yellow root vegetables are "good" in all three vitamins and "rich" in vitamin A. For some unexplained reason yellow color in foods is often an indication of their high vitamin A content. Consequently yellow sweet corn contains more vitamin A than white, carrots more than parsnips, and sweet potatoes more than white.

Where Vitamin B Lies White root vegetables are good sources of vitamin B but the whole cereals and legumes are the cheapest and richest sources of this vitamin. Of course the most potent source of the B vitamin is found in yeast. Egg yolk is recognized as an excellent source of vitamin B, too.

Fresh fruits and green vegetables must be relied on for vitamin C. Although canning and cooking reduces the potency somewhat, such foods are still excellent sources of the vitamin.

Plant sources as a class are practically devoid of vitamin D. Cod liver oil is the richest animal source and of course the direct rays of sunlight are interchangeable with vitamin D as anti-rachitic agents. Salmon and egg yolk are excellent sources. Clams and oysters have been classed as good along with butter and milk.

Vitamin E is found in good amounts in lettuce, watercress and wheat germ. The vegetable oils, whole cereals, meat and molasses are all good sources of vitamin E. Yeast, liver, kidney and lean meat are the most potent sources of vitamin G. Milk and eggs, salmon and haddock, greens and salad plants, potatoes, tomatoes, bananas and whole wheat contribute vitamin G in varying amounts.

To go further into the study and learn the vitamin content of all foods makes it possible for the homemaker to plan and buy with the utmost intelligence and economy. Fruits and vegetables are practically the only sources of vitamin C and must be used daily if health is maintained. These foods also reinforce the supply of vitamins A and B and hold an important place in the diet.

AT RANGER HOSPITALS

City-County Hospital Howard Hinton is convalescing following an operation. Mrs. Edna Carmen is doing nicely.

J. P. Sexton of Grapevine is a patient. Mrs. S. W. Boles and young daughter are resting well. Mrs. Bohning is a patient and reported doing quite nicely. Grandmother Hart, who has been a patient, is improving. Judge Marks continues to improve. Jimmie Whalen is still a patient.

West Texas Clinic Edgar Huffman, who sustained serious injuries at the Desdemona Lone Star plant yesterday morning, is resting as nicely as could be expected. Miss Josephine Thurber, who underwent an operation this week, is doing very nicely. Mrs. Hennon was able to be removed to her home yesterday.

RANGER PERSONALS

Mrs. E. C. Hatley remembered by her host of Ranger friends as the former Miss Edith England, left yesterday for her home in Williams, Ariz., after a weeks visit with Ranger and Breckenridge relatives. En route home, Mrs. Hatley will be joined by her husband for a visit in El Paso and Albuquerque. Most of the return trip will be made by plane service.

W. L. (Sunshine) Smith, formerly of Ranger and Eastland, and who has been residing in Texas for the past few months, is visiting here. Denn Matison of Abilene is a business visitor today.

Herbert J. Stafford was a Dallas business visitor Tuesday. L. R. Pearson left today for a business visit to Corsicana.

RIVER JETTY REPAIRED By United Press. ASTORIA, Ore.—Sixty carloads of rock daily will be passing thru Astoria for the next few months. Some 700,000 tons of huge basalt boulders, blasted out of a mountain on the Columbia River, will be used to repair the south jetty at the river mouth. Ultimately this will be increased to 2,000,000 tons, according to federal engineers' plans.
