CHINESE REPULSED IN LATEST FIGHT

GRIPINGS

By GUS
This column is published as a daily feature and may not be construed as representing the editorial views of this paper.

The sheriff and his deputies had a regular picnic and golf rolling with dinner on the grounds Monday.

They were rewarded to some extent, however. For when it came noon they were right in the middle of the moonshiner's camp.

The sheriff asked me to publish the fact that if the fellow they let get away happens to read this, he may get his coat and his poll tax receipt by asking for it at the city hall in Cisco.

Now, isn't that a break for a poor moonshiner? Go and pay poll tax so he can vote in the election and now he can't get his poll tax receipt without being arrested for running a still.

Late yesterday afternoon, Dick Phillips and I were drinking a coke at a certain soda fountain. (Name not mentioned because $3 not paid).

Then I related how I had just a few minutes before taken inventory of my quick assets and found that I had exactly 15 cents.

Then we got to talking about fortune tellers and sack-eye-artists. Pardon me, that word wasn't in the blue back speller, but the accent is on the eye.

A NEW TRAFFIC PROBLEM.

Among the many improvements that automobile manufacturers have built into cars in the last few years is higher speed capacity. Rapid acceleration is the rule now; so is the ability to cruise along an open road at a mile-a-minute clip without suffering from excessive noise and vibration. But all of this, evidently, has been a gift to motorists who aren't ready for it yet. Our automobiles do their job better than we do ours. We aren't, on the whole, quite fit to be trusted with fast cars.

This becomes evident from figures on auto accidents recently compiled by the Travelers Insurance company. In 1931 automobile registrations in the United States declined by about 2 per cent. The number of traffic accidents also fell off. Yet the number of traffic deaths increased by more than 3 per cent, and the number of severe but non-fatal injuries increased even more.

The insurance company's investigators conclude that increased speed was the factor chiefly responsible. It is hard to disagree with them.

The meaning of this new trend is clear. The odds of death in an auto accident have been shortened. In 1930 there was one death in every 26 accidents; last year there was one death in every 25.

Nor does the indictment against the motorist stop there. The pedestrian seems to be getting more cautious; accidents involving pedestrians fell off markedly last year. Deaths resulting from collisions between two automobiles, on the other hand, shot up 24 per cent, and deaths resulting from auto colliding with fixed objects—such, for instance, as lamp posts—also increased materially.

This makes extremely unpleasant reading. It indicates that the average motorist must realize more clearly than ever before the exact nature of the responsibility that rests on his shoulders when he starts out for a drive. It indicates that state and municipal supervision of driving is not nearly stringent enough. It indicates, in fact, that we still fail to appreciate the great seriousness of our automobile traffic death problem.

WHY ABANDON TEXAS FORTS?

Senator Tom Connally and Representative Robert Ewing Thomason are making it interesting for the administration relative to the proposed abandonment of the four Texas border military posts—Fort Brown, Brownsville; Fort D. A. Russell, Laredo; Fort McIntosh, Laredo; and Fort Clark, Brackettville. This is the Thomason viewpoint: "If we are able to keep any troops in permanent quarters certainly they should remain along the Mexican border. Not only is the war department planning to unguard this vast territory, but it is not acting in good faith with the people of this section to have the leading forts permanently located expended large sums of money taken away." In a very pointed speech the El Paso representative pointed out that virtually every Mexican revolution has been staged in the state bordering the United States and to leave 1,500 miles of boundary unprotected would mean tremendous danger to border residents from marauding bandits. Well, Fort Sam Houston will remain, Fort Bliss will remain; Randolph Field will remain, the Texas rangers will not be disbanded and Texas has a very well officered and drilled contingent of national guardsmen who never hesitate to obey orders and face danger. Regardless of all this, why should the four Texas forts be abandoned?

STARTING RIGHT.

State Auditor and Efficiency Expert Moore Lynn very firmly believes that the state is starting out right by getting a scientific survey made of its governmental set-up, with a view to short-cutting out the useless agencies and needless expense, as proposed by a joint legislative efficiency committee. That committee has set out to spend $25,000, in proposing to save in the future about $5,000 a day. Mr. Lynn pointed out that the New Jersey $16,000,000 economy program that recently elected a governor on a promise of eliminating more than 75 bureaus, commissions, boards and agencies of government was not merely a campaign platform; but that it was the technically perfected program of a state, built upon one of the efficiency expert's surveys.

The state of Texas boasts when it is able to get a $10,000 man come and take one of its $5,000 jobs; or a $7,500 man take one of its chief clerkships, of many and important duties, at $2,750 a year.

One commendable feature about the efficiency proposals so far is that they have not undertaken to cut the meagre $4,000 salaries or the penurious $2,750 salaries—a state treasurer who collects $50,000,000 a year gets $2,500, and a secretary of state is paid $2,000 a year—and they have not undertaken to strike out or cut down necessary and useful agencies. The program is to take out waste, stop leaks of petty losses; eliminate such abuses as fat overcharges that actually drain the treasury—without a return of service.

Deaf And Dumb Girl Is Awarded a French Degree

PARIS—Overcoming the handicaps of being deaf and dumb since she was 12, Mlle. Suzanne Lavaud, 28, has just been awarded a Doctorate degree from the Sorbonne. This is the first time that such a thing has occurred in the 700 years' history of the institution. Mlle. Lavaud, the daughter of the director of the Lycee Victor-Duruy, was a great encouragement to her daughter in helping to prepare for the honor she has just received.

was better on his face and I could see what his lips said," she remarked.

Measles Caused Affliction
Mlle. Lavaud lost her sight and hearing after an attack of measles when she was 12. She began learning lip-reading and the more difficult practice of making intelligible sounds through special education along much the same lines as that used by Helen Keller. Her examination was oral and the voice through which she conveyed the life story of Marie Leneru, a born deaf mute, who succeeded in having her plays produced at the Odeon and the Theatre Francaise, was entirely unheard by her own ears. It was rather colorless and mechanical but distinctly audible.

She gave spirited answers to the questions put to her, and in her enthusiasm for her daughter's responses her mother, Mme. Lavaud applauded several times with the others who were seated at her left.

Like Helen Keller, she enjoys music and poetry from their sense and rhythm, although she is unable to distinguish actual sounds.

Staff Officer Moves Up to the Front!

Roosevelt Faces Turning Point In Political Career

By PAUL H. KING, United Press Staff Correspondent.
ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Again the hat of a Roosevelt reposes in the presidential arena.

Imbued with much of the vigor that whicked his illustrious cousin, "Teddy" to the white house—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York stands at a turning point of a long political career.

Another Step.
When the governor granted the democracy of North Dakota the privilege to place his name on the state's preferential presidential primary he took another step in a career which started 22 years ago when he was elected to the state senate.

Born the son of James Roosevelt on a Hyde Park, N. Y., farm 50 years ago, Roosevelt has proven himself a finished politician. He's a "man's man" to his friends who call him Frank.

The governor, who so far has not enlarged upon his presidential aspirations, spent his boyhood in the Hudson valley. At Harvard Roosevelt was popular. He graduated in 1904 after serving as editor of The Crimson, undergraduate daily newspaper. Later he graduate from Columbia Law school and was admitted to the state bar association.

Rapid Climb.
Roosevelt's climb to political fame has been rapid.

As assistant secretary of the navy during the World war he experienced many harrowing experiences—including a jaunt through "No Man's Land" while battle was being waged. He crossed the Atlantic on a destroyer when all United States vessels were fearing attacks from German submarines.

When the governor was appointed assistant secretary of the navy in 1913 by President Woodrow Wilson his immediate task was to reorganize the business of the service. He was praised by Wilson for his work.

In 1920 when he was a vice presidential candidate along with James M. Cox of Ohio, his addresses in that campaign were termed masterful by his friends. From then until now he has been a power in the Jeffersonian party.

From his vice presidential candidacy he stepped into the governor's chair in 1928. He was re-elected in 1930 by the greatest majority ever accorded a candidate in the state.

Like "T. R." Franklin D. Roosevelt is, in many ways, like Theodore Roosevelt. Like "T. R." Roosevelt has studied American history strenuously. Both were outdoor men. The governor's hobby is birds. The former president's was big game.

Of the farmer he once said: "People in the country have time to think and their fathers and mothers were thinkers. And no matter how many jokes may be made about the country men who surround the stores in the village postoffices and settle the affairs of the nation—these men themselves are not jokes. They think. They take time to think."

Governor Roosevelt laid down an active business and professional career to become a candidate for governor. He is vice president of the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland and the American Bonding company. For the past several years he has been president of the American Construction council.

He has headed the Boy Scout Foundation of Greater New York since 1922.

In 1925 he acted as chairman of the New York drive for the American Legion.

Jovial and good natured, he numbers among his many friends senators and representatives in the New York state legislature who are of a different political complexion.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The first battalion of Royal Ulster Rifles was ordered today to Shanghai.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

This morning we quote Prexy Anderson of the Abilene News and the resolutions committee of the taxpayers' association. Prexy says:

"Ranger will appear in an all-maroon football array next fall. Bill Mayes says that Eck Curtis took up about an hour of Mayes' time the other day telling him over and over how maroon the maroon suits are going to be. We suppose the waste was negligible, but even if Mayes' time is valuable, the description must have been worth it—maroon pants, maroon jerseys, maroon headgears, and probably maroon shoe laces and nose guards."

The resolutions committee of the tax association is somewhat more verbose, probably because they have more to be verbose about, in the statement, which has been written by the resolutions committee composed of Judge Langford of Cisco, M. C. Franklin of Eastland, R. F. Holloway of Ranger, W. A. Tate of Carbon, and W. C. Couch of Bear Springs. It gives the aims of the association, and reads as follows:

"Inasmuch as there seems to be a question in the minds of some as to what the Taxpayers association is trying to accomplish by organizing and having periodic meetings, it seems good to us to set forth in orderly fashion definite goals toward the accomplishment of which we shall direct our united efforts.

"We demand that any man who seeks our support in his candidacy for either house of the state legislature shall publicly agree to introduce and support:

"1. A bill to abolish the fee system for all public offices in the state of Texas, and substitute therefor the paying of a reasonable salary to all servants of the public;

"(a) In case a bill to that effect shall have been introduced by another legislator, he shall agree to support it;

"(b) In case the fee system is held by the supreme court inherent in the constitution, he shall agree to introduce and support and sponsor a resolution to submit an amendment to the constitution to a referendum of the people that shall provide for the change desired.

"2. A bill to abolish one of the district courts in Eastland county.

"3. Whatever procedure may be necessary to consolidate:

"(a) The offices of county treasurer and county auditor;

"(b) The offices of tax collector and assessor.

"4. A bill for the transfer of a sufficient amount of gasoline tax to the remote counties of the state to be used in liquidating the

Here's the Way to Control Those Miserable Colds So Prevalent Here Now

WITH scattered cases of flu breaking out in this locality, don't take chances with colds NOW—it's too dangerous! Unless checked quickly, colds end to pull down the body resistance and may pave the way for an attack of flu with all its serious complications. Your safest protection is in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds."

This Plan has been developed by the makers of Vicks VapoRub, the modern way of "treating" colds. It is made possible with Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, based on a new idea for "preventing" colds. These two aid and supplement each other in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds," which follows:

- BEFORE A COLD STARTS—Watch yourself whenever you have been exposed to anything that your own experience tells you is apt to give you a cold, such as—contact with others having fresh colds—stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, crowded public places—sudden changes in temperature, wet or cold.
- Then—if you feel that stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages, Nature's usual signal that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose Drops at once. Just a few drops up each nostril. Repeat every hour or so if needed.
- These simple precautions will prevent many colds by checking them before they get beyond the nose and throat—where most colds start.
- AFTER A COLD STARTS—If a cold slips by these precautions, do not neglect it. Rest as much as possible, preferably in bed. Take a mild laxative. Eat lightly. Drink lots of water.
- At night, massage the throat and chest well with Vicks VapoRub. (If there is much congestion, first redden the skin with hot, wet towels.) Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. Leave bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising may be inhaled freely all night long.
- If the air-passages are clogged with mucus or there is much coughing, melt a teaspoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for several minutes. (If the throat is dry and "tickling," or irritated from coughing, use Vicks Cough Drops—medicated with Vicks VapoRub).
- During the day—any time, any place—use the convenient Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. This gives you full 24-hour treatment to reduce the severity and duration of the cold.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES WITH COLDS NOW!

Indemnity + Prevention = Insurance

When "insurance" means INSURANCE

INSURANCE—as written by stock companies—brings to you not only dependable indemnity but the pledge of many services which prevent those losses for which money cannot pay.

Leadership in fire prevention—better building standards—the testing of materials and devices—the improvement of waterworks systems and fire departments—the prevention and punishment of arson; all these mean insurance to the last degree.

LOVED TO EAT, AND NOW SHE CAN!

Much of the suffering from so-called "indigestion" or acid-dyspepsia could be avoided if anyone could know like thousands of people who have learned this New York City business woman, who lives at 1160 Park Avenue, says:

"I suffered from headaches and heartburn after meals; couldn't sleep like I should; never felt right. For five years I experimented with medicines and treatments, until I learned about Pape's Diapepsin. I have used three packages now; have gained five pounds, and feel fine. If you, too, suffer from sourness, gas, belching, nausea, headaches, dizziness, or pain after eating—either regularly or just at times—get a box of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist. Then you need never worry again about what you eat."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

By Blossie

the hostesses, befriends and advises Ellen. Ellen hates the cheapness of the dance hall, hates taking a 10-cent ticket to dance with all comers. She slaps a man who kisses her. Jacob Salomon, the manager, is about to discharge her when a handsome young man asks to be introduced to her. He says his name is Larry Smith. He goes to buy tickets and while she waits for him, Ellen forgets that she hated Dreamland, forgets Barclay's kindness, forgets everything except Larry Smith.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI
Larry had bought a string of tickets, each marked "good for one dance." There were dozens. He dropped the ribbon of bright green over Ellen's bare arm so that it curled almost to the floor. "That's for all evening," he told her. "No one else is to dance with you."
"I believe you've made a mistake," Ellen said, trying to temper the bubbling joyousness in her voice. "I think they sold you a railroad ticket to California."
"It does look like that."
Tony, gliding past, summed up the incident with approving, interested eyes. The 17-year-old plainly considered the older girl to be her protegee.

"I knew you'd be lucky, Ellen," she called over her shoulder and was gone.
"Now what did she mean?" Larry demanded.
"She meant I was lucky to find such a good—customer," Ellen advised him demurely.
"No. It's the customer who's lucky."
Their laughter rang out. Larry swept Ellen into his arms and they were caught in the emotion-laden atmosphere of the room. Boys and girls were dancing closely in the semi-darkness, cheek to cheek, heart to heart. Light frocks blurred against the darker clothes of the men; white, bare arms clutched the broad shoulders. There was no sound except the muted whine of the orchestra and the swish of dancing feet, and, from outside, through the open windows, the subdued uproar of a never-resting Broadway.
Boys and girls, in the artificial darkness, were snatching feverishly at a little moment of tawdry romance, lest it pass them by; snatching at a moment of forgetfulness of daily tasks while the saxophones moaned.

Ellen and Larry bumped into a couple who had stopped for a passionate embrace. Ellen felt again that she would weep. She did not know quite why. But she knew that if Larry Smith attempted to embrace her in that furtive darkness something shining and young and beautiful would be gone forever. At the same time she knew that if he drew her close, close to him she could not resist.
"I don't seem to care much for this," she ventured at length, uncomfortably. And then abruptly, with no preliminaries, he asked, "What are you doing here?"
Ellen experienced a lightness and buoyancy of spirit as though something she feared had been passed. All at once she was able to laugh at herself. What a mad fool she had become. All of her values seemed changed. So much depended tonight upon so little. She saw that Larry was watching her face as he waited for her to answer. She gestured toward a sign on the wall.
"They had to dance through the crowd and to the outskirts so that he could read. His own gray eyes lighted when he read that hostesses when dancing were limited in conversation to 'yes' and 'no.'"
"Do you like me a lot?" he inquired promptly.
Ellen feared that he would discern the swift hammering of her heart. She felt the color creeping into her face.
"Go on, tell me," he urged. "Yes or no?"
So he thought he would tease her!
He looked disconcerted and then he added sheepishly, "Well that one seems to have been on me. So you think I'm taking an unfair advantage?"
"Yes!"
The second "yes" was emphatic and pointed. Their laughter rang out again.
"Well, what do you say," he suggested, "if we leave the music dancing to those as likes it more? I want to talk."
"Do you really mean that?"
They were at a table and barely seated before he asked the second time, "What are you doing here?"
"Earning my living."
"Do you really mean that?"
He was plainly startled. She had on the tip of her tongue a tart retort and she observed that he was studying her dress. She had forgotten Steven Barclay until then—forgotten why she was at Dreamland, forgotten everything except that she was 20 years old and that life had become for her a thrilling and rose-hued miracle.
"Certainly I mean it," she replied.
There was no reason why she should explain to this young stranger how it happened that she was able to wear a Paris gown. It was impossible for her to do so. She had a passionate desire that he should know nothing of her responsibilities, of the care and fretting trouble which had shadowed her youth. She wanted only to laugh and to forget everything else. To him she must stand for gaiety, for carelessness and irresponsible fun.
He was not Steven Barclay. How did she know how quickly she might, by any hasty or misjudged attempt to precipitate him into her life, turn that eager look into the expression of boredom that she had seen before.
She did not amplify her bare statement.
He was checked.
"Did you believe me," he asked after a pause, "when I told the manager my name was Smith?"
"If you say it's Smith," Ellen observed irrelevantly, "then it must be Smith."
"Yes!"
Her tone was clear, her eyes lucid and innocent. It was the young man's turn to flush.
"I'm afraid you won't understand," he began uncomfortably before that lucid gaze, "but anyhow I must explain. My name isn't Smith. When I said it was I hadn't decided—"
"Whether or not you'd trust me with the secret," Ellen supplied smoothly.
She was not offended. Larry drew a breath of relief.
"You're being darn nice about it," he said. "Well, anyhow my name is Larry. Larry Harrowgate, age 27, occupation artist or sorts, prospects nothing!"
"I'm to take that as a warning?"
"If you want to take it that way."
They both laughed ecstatically.
"No, but seriously," he presently resumed in a voice which he tried hard to make brisk and sensible, "did you mean what you said—out on the floor? Do you really like me?"
"Seriously," she answered dutifully, although she still bubbled with excitement and laughter, "I do."
"Then that's that," he observed in satisfaction. "We're through with all the preliminaries. Now we can settle down and really get to know each other."
They were interrupted by a waiter, demanding their order. Larry confessed to a ravenous appetite and not even Ellen's warning that the food might be had prevented him from selecting almost everything on the bill of fare. When the waiter withdrew he began to rally her.
"What's wrong with you?" he inquired solicitously. "Are you a canary bird? I never saw a girl before who wouldn't eat on the slightest provocation."
"I didn't want to order anything," Ellen confessed in growing embarrassment, "because I get a percentage on what you pay."

"You foolish youngster! I wouldn't think you were a profiteer even if you ordered a diamond necklace. I couldn't have paid for it but then—you'll have to eat half of mine."
But when the food arrived, sandwiches and cakes and a bowl of steaming chow mein, decorated with slivers of chicken, neither wanted to eat. They wanted to dance again and again, to dance forever or until they dropped from exhaustion. Like children on a holiday they skylarked about the floor. Again and again they discovered with pleased and excited exclamations how well their steps fitted. Amazing, thrilling to change quickly from the languorous grace of the tango to the rowdy breathless complications of the outmoded Charleston—amazing to dance with someone who moved almost as you moved.
The whole day had been the most exciting of Ellen's life. She almost hoped it would never end. But the ending, when it came, was sweetest of all.
"You make a big difference to me," Larry summarized it with simple fervor. "Just finding you, Ellen, has made my summer for me."
"I'm—I'm glad you found me." "We'll go places and see things, won't we—you and I? We'll have fun, won't we? What do you say, Ellen?"

WASHINGTON—HIS LIFE STORY IN PICTURES, COMMEMORATING THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH!—No. 2—Early Life

Indians fired on Washington at 15 places when he was on a surveying trip into the wilderness. Smallpox contracted on a trip to the Island of Barbados left his face pitted. He was elected to the House of Burgesses, Virginia legislative body, in 1758. He excelled in outdoor pursuits, from wrestling to horse-breaking.

After the death of his father when George was 11, he went to live with his half-brother, Lawrence, at Hunting Creek, now called Mt. Vernon, on the Potomac. Lawrence was a gentleman of fashion, married to the daughter of the wealthy and socially prominent William Fairfax.

Turning to surveying as a profession, George made many trips into the western wilderness which taught him resourcefulness and endurance and toughened his character. He shared log cabins with pioneers, ate bear meat and corn mush, swam rivers, followed deer trails and encountered Indians who fired upon him at 15 places, but missed.

He contracted smallpox while on a trip to the Island of Barbados with Lawrence, and this left his face permanently pitted. When Lawrence died in 1852, George became heir to and manager of Mt. Vernon. Life there formed the background of his existence for the next two decades.

His routine was interrupted for several weeks every year by attendance to the Virginia House of Burgesses, a legislative body to which he was elected in 1758.

TOMORROW: Washington, the man.

THE RIDIN' KIDDER

The Dime a Dance Girl

Even in the midst of her pleasure she wondered why he did not say anything more definite. She felt a little twinge of dismay at the thought he knew where to find her, if he never returned she must remain silent. How did she know how many girls he had laughed with just as he had laughed with her?

"What about tomorrow at tea?" he was asking eagerly. "You don't work Saturday afternoons, do you?"

"I'd love it," she was gone. (To Be Continued)

EL PASO HAS A LOST RIVER

By United Press. EL PASO.—Somewhere in El Paso between Sixth street and the Rio Grande is a lost river. It is the old bed of the Rio Grande, suddenly abandoned in 1864. Its location has been an international mystery for more than 60 years.

If the old river bed could be found, the famous Chamizal zone could be speedily settled. And if a settlement were reached in the Chamizal case, which is a dispute between the United States and Mexico over a slice of South El Paso, the city's geography would be revised.

The zone covers 600 acres. Property therein is assessed at about $3,000,000. The northern boundary of the zone is the Rio Grande's 1852 channel.

After 1852 the Rio Grande began moving southward—slowly. But in 1864 the river moved south quickly and violently, due to a flood.

If the Rio Grande had moved slowly all the time, changing its course gradually, there would have been no dispute. But treaties provide that the old river bed shall be the boundary, when the river jumps out of it suddenly.

Cold Insurance

He carries it with him, ready for just such times. That little box of Bayer Aspirin. If he catches cold, what of it? Bayer Aspirin will stop it. If his throat feels sore, he will end the soreness with one good gargle made from these tablets.

Dangerous complications can result from the neglect of "a common cold." Every case of tonsillitis began with "just a sore throat." It's a wise plan to take aspirin after any undue exposure to bad weather, or whenever there is any chance that you've caught cold. If it's genuine aspirin it can't possibly hurt you; and how it does banish the aches and pains caused by colds, neuralgia, neuritis, lumbago, and even rheumatism.

Bayer Aspirin will insure your comfort through the worst cold season. The more susceptible you are to colds, the more you need it. Does not depress the heart.

Mrs. E. A. Wheeler is very ill with the flu at her home on Mesquite street.

REPORT SHOWS NEVADA KEPT DRY IN 1931

By United Press. RENO, Nev.—Nevada, where a man is supposed to be able to raise a thirst and quench it with anything from beer to imported liquors, is one of the driest states in the nation, according to figures recently released by the department of justice as any criterion.

If the rest of the nation had done as well in enforcing prohibition during the fiscal year for 1931, Uncle Sam would have collected $20,000,000 in fines, or four times as much as was taken in; there would have been an 800 per cent increase in the number of abortions issued, and four times as many persons would have been arrested and convicted of violation of the federal dry laws. The report showed an average of 14 per cent for dismissals and acquittals of all cases in the nation, while Nevada disposed of only 4 per cent of its cases in this manner.

The average jail sentence imposed in Nevada was 92.2 days in length, as compared with 28 days in Rhode Island, ranked last among the states in this respect.

Furthermore, there would have been four times the number of seizures of illicit beverages and equipment for the manufacture of such forbidden liquors. This last point stretches the imagination a bit, according to local bartenders. For the nation, 7,000,000 gallons of contraband intoxicants were seized, equal to one-half pint for each inhabitant. The bartenders doubt whether 28,000,000 gallons or two pints for each inhabitant could have been found in the country.

All these figures are based on the comparative showing made by the enforcement agents in ratio to Nevada's population, which is less than 100,000 persons.

Another such stampede is in prospect this spring, but the aim of those who wash and mine gold in the rush of '32 simply will be to make a living. Hardly anyone will expect the "big strike" that used to draw men into the hills with picks and pans.

Relief agencies and the county court of Jackson county plan to sponsor this new stampede. Those who know mining conditions say that they can wipe out involuntary unemployment in the Rogue river valley.

Dr. J. F. Reddy and A. B. Maxwell, practical mining men of years' experience, suggested that the county turn over several extensive tracts of county land in the close vicinity of Jacksonville for the use of those who wish to make a fair wage by taking gold from the ground.

The gold is there. For years patient workmen have been taking out gold and making good wages doing it. Hardly a property owner in Jacksonville but has a mine in his back yard. In almost every instance he has panned from $3 to $12 or more a day when he wanted to work at it.

HASLAM—Hardwood mill will resume operations soon.
