AMERICAN COTTON IN THE ORIENT.

Japan is one of the largest buyers of American cotton. There is a Chinese boycott on Japanese textile goods which is offset by the Gandhi boycott on British textile goods. Japanese traders are doing a big business in India, while the mills of Manchester and Birmingham are doing a brisk business in China.

According to a Wall Street Exchange the far east hasregistered the greatest increase in the taking of American cotton over last season, using approximately 191,000 bales in November, compared with 109,000 in the same month in 1930. Great Britain shows the next largest relative increase with a consumption of 107,000 bales against 94,000 in 1930. As for the United States it used somewhat more than in 1930, spinning 408,000 bales against 200,000. Europe is lagging behind last season, consuming 264,000 last year. According to the latest census, the five great industrial nations of Europe and counting the smaller nations more or less industrial there are 10,000,000 unemployed workers without counting Russia. This is also a reminder that the cost of armament for these European countries is $1,500,000,000 greater annually than before the coming of the World War. And yet * their leading statesmen are calling for the cancellation of war debts with the exception of France. This country not only calls for the payment of all reparations and real war debts, but a world pledge of security before the French government shall agree to disarmament.

BACK-HAND SUPPORT.

If Speaker Garner's fancy is still tickled at the mention of his name in a speech, or the appearance of his name in type, then William Randolph Hearst may be pleasing the sturdy warrior of the Rio Grande.

Otherwise the Hearst "Garner for president" crusade doesn't mean much.

Mr. Hearst has led too many crusades, has championed too many causes, has discovered too many candidates and met too many defeats, to contribute to what seems to be nite a substantial democratic movement for Garner's nomi-

Just now, Hearst, as the personal exponent of a wine and beer program to lift the nation out of economic distress, is in the odd position of championing for president a man from one of the dryest of the dry states, a leader from a state that would remain bone-dry in constitution and law if the 18th amondment were repealed.

Mr. Hearst's speeches and arguments for Speaker Garner smack of spite attacks upon President Hoover, his choice

MONEY APPEARS TO BE A MERCILESS DRIVER.

This is an age of the machine and science. This is the age known as the industrial, and the scientist and the chemists and their labortories have transformed the agricultural age to a great extent into an industrial age. This has revolutionized conditions the civilzed world over.

Now the stage has been set for the trial of the ouster suits against the major oil companies. Now the owners of natural gas properties, speaking of the independents, claim that they are unable to provide a market for this natural resource and are threatened with financial loss and almost complete disaster by the powerful companies with their half billing the powerful companies with their half billing to the stage has been set for the trial of the ouster administration to join the Cox adminis Just the other day came the story from Hollywood that drastic slashing of overhead expenses and sweeping reductions in salaries for all concerned was the order of the day. The bankers of the east who furnished the money for the moving picture industry had bluntly told the cinema kings that business is business and that loaned capital must earn interest. Incidentally, it may be the same in the petroleum industry. Great capitalists or financial corporations make huge loans to the major companies and their ever pressing demand is large returns on their loans. Yes, money; money invested in mighty industries, is loaned to earn interest regardless of who is pinched or who is thrown out. This is the cry in the moving picture world. It is the cry in the petroleum production and refining and selling camps. It is the cry of the little fellows the nation over. They fear actual elimination and the loss of all they hold in these mighty contests for control of the industrial forces of American life. Really it is the battle of all the ages and it appears to be the battle this time of the unorganized many against the organized this time of the unorganized many against the organized few. Now the oil ouster suits will be thrashed out in the courts. Now the oil ouster suits will be thrashed out in the courts. Now the complaints of owners of natural gas producing lands held by so-called independents will be thrashed out before the railroad commission and perhaps the courts will be called into action.

These spectacular contests should engage the attention of all the people. They concern the welfare of all the people. They concern investors as well as the vast army of consumers. There must be a high, middle ground somewhere on which the interests of all may be protected. The pursuit of last analysis, should be guaranteed to all alike.

nally served at luncheons and breakfasts. Strangely enough, however, they bespeak an un-known realm to many a housewife and she hesitates to include them in her menus. Yet the secret of delicate popovers lies in the simple factor, temperature.

The materials-milk, flour, eggs and salt-required to make popovers are always at hand. If an emergency arises, it's an easy matter to stir up a dozen of these fascinating shells and they are sure to be liked.

When the physical change that takes place during the baking of popovers is understood the mystery of their "popping" become clear Milk contains a large per-centage of water and the sudden application of intense heat to the popover batter causes the water rapidly to change to steam Steam seant cup milk. 1-3 teaspoon salt, is, of course, many times the volume of water and stretches the gluten walls of the flour to their milk gradually, bearing to make utmost. This with the help of the egg forms the hollow shell of the
