TUESDAY LAST DAY OF GRACE FOR TAXPAYERS

SCHOOL HEADS OF FOUR TOWNS TO HOLD MEET

A joint meeting of the school boards of Ranger, Eastland, Cisco and Breckenridge has been called for Thursday night of this week at Ranger, it was announced today by E. A. Ringold, secretary of the Ranger board and school tax collector for the Ranger independent school district.

All poll taxes must be paid with the other taxes, but when paid after Tuesday will not enable the person to vote.

All taxes will be subject to penalty, unless provisions are made to that effect by the organization in charge, and so far no provision has been made to remove any penalties.

T. L. Cooper, tax collector of Eastland county, announced today that he would be at the Commercial State Bank in Ranger all day Tuesday, where he would collect poll taxes. Anyone who wishes to pay his poll tax on Tuesday can do so at the Commercial State Bank.

It was pointed out that in Ranger there would be a city election in which a mayor and all commissioners will be elected, as well as a school board election. In addition it is anticipated that a prohibition election will be held by the state in the early summer and all who have paid poll taxes before Feb. 1 can participate in these elections.

They swirled out, stinging the bell boy until he was forced to flee. Mrs. Keek was their next victim. Then they made for the open hotel lobby where state legislators were relaxing. Chairs were overturned and general chaos reigned for nearly an hour. Finally, R. W. Childs, hotel manager, leading a squadron of employes armed with fly swatters, drove the bees into another cage.

MAN AND GIRL ALSO HELD AS ACCESSORIES

Alertness of County Prisoner Leads To Capture of The Trio. DECATUR, Texas, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Ida Hunsucker, taken into custody at Childress yesterday, in connection with the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Joe Brown at Rhome, today was charged with murder. Charges of accessory in the murder were filed against E. C. Hawthorne and Faye Pennington. Hawthorne declared he was from Memphis, Texas, a hitchhiker given a ride by Mrs. Hunsucker at Vernon. Miss Pennington, 16-year-old Dallas girl, denied any knowledge of the Brown slaying and declared she was riding with Mrs. Hunsucker only as a guest. Capture of the woman and her two companions was credited to the alertness of an unnamed prisoner in the Childress county jail. A deputy sheriff left a sick bed and almost contracted pneumonia in the chase that preceded their capture.

The prisoner saw an automobile in a filling station across from the Childress jail yesterday, which resembled the description of Mrs. Hunsucker's machine. He aroused the jailer, who set in motion an unofficial posse which captured the woman and her companions at Cary, 15 miles west of Childress. Meantime 50 peace officers of four counties hunted two other men wanted for questioning. Their search centered about a wooded section in southwest Denton county in the vicinity of Lake Dallas. Shots were fired at a state ranger participating in the hunt about midnight last night.

No announcement has been made as to which church will be attended on Sunday, Feb. 5.

A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

PRAISE THE GOOD GOD: Make a joyful noise unto the Lord. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving. For the Lord is good.—Psalm 100: 1, 4, 5.

MONTANA LAWMAKERS DECLARE FOR STATE GASOLINE

Montana is a Rocky Mountain state. Montana has two democratic senators—Thomas J. Walsh and Burton K. Wheeler. Walsh is a native son of Wisconsin; Wheeler was born in the Old Bay State. Now members of the Montana house of representatives have launched a plan to put the state in the gasoline business. They drafted a bill which will permit the state to refine petroleum and buy and sell it "at a profit." Montana owns a refinery acquired by a foreclosure of a gasoline tax lien, and annually acquires a considerable quantity of crude oil as royalty from producers operation on school and other grant lands. Sponsors of the plan hoped by this means to bring about a reduction of the gasoline price in Montana. Another measure affecting the oil industry would bond distributors to assure payment of the gasoline tax. This is a queer old world, and among its people are many wonderful as well as amazing performers.

Just now petroleum is responsible for many upheavals. There are Texas lawmakers who would strip the State Railroad Commission of its power to regulate oil. Well, the commissioners and their friends and followers are ready to battle for its existence with Ernest O. Thompson of Amarillo challenging all comers to battle. Oklahoma has a state corporation commission which handles the petroleum and gas hot jokers. These Oklahoma commissioners like the Texas railroad commissioners are ever hammered by lawyers and litigants and injunctions and three judge federal courts until there are times when a commissioner does not know whether he is "a-foot or a-horse-back." On with the dance. In the last analysis sanity may rule in the playing of the game so vociferously indulged in by the performers from the outside and the players of the inside.

McLENNAN LEAGUERS FAVOR A SALES TAX

A petition has been completed by the McLennan Taxpayers League for presentation to Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson and members of the 43rd legislature. This petition favors a sales tax for Texas—provided it be applied in lieu of ad valorem taxes—and suggests the abolition of a number of offices and courts, some of them in McLennan county. Senator W. R. Poage and Rep. J. B. Ford, W. C. Harman, and Edgar Davidson will handle the petition. This is its preamble: "It being well known that the burden of taxation has become unbearable so that many homes are being confiscated to pay taxes and other obligations, we respectfully but most urgently request that these measures of relief be granted and carried into effect by laws enacted by your honorable body."

Rep. W. C. Harman managed the speakership campaign for Coke Stevenson and is very close to the throne. Let us forget, Tom Hunter of Wichita Falls who made a remarkable race for governor last year, is a representative of many taxpayers leagues and associations under the big dome.

This is going to be a history making session. It came in like a cooling dove. It may go out like a prairie fire blazing or a cyclone sweep wherever its terrors hit the earth. Regardless of this all sane-minded Texans are praying or hoping that the legislation enacted will be beneficial to those who pay the freight—speaking of the cost of government.

Newspaper advertisements are mighty hunters. They go into every home and hunt out the thrifty buyers and deliver their messages to them.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

GORDON K. BUSH, publisher of the Athens (Ohio) Messenger, says:

"Until merchants generally gain enough courage and understanding of buyers' psychology to 'trade up' from their present levels of trash merchandise made to suit depression prices, the much-wanted retail business improvement will elude them.

"Added to all the other reasons why people are not buying now is the fact that people who have money and quality needs to be satisfied are unable to find things worth spending their dollars for.

"This 'cream' of the retail business, for almost every line of merchandise, is being passed up by manufacturers and retailers who are too mass-minded for the god of their merchandise stocks, their mark-up percentages, and their cash register bells.

"This is a wonderful time to buy advantageously, but it is hard to find anything advantageous to buy."

THE CHINESE AGGRESSION

Mexican Families Working On Small Valley Truck Farms

By United Press. EDINBURG, Texas. — Twenty Mexican families numbering 101 persons have offset the depression and paved the way for aid to other worthy persons through a novel farm experiment in Hidalgo county.

Each family was given two acres of land to work, with various governmental units furnishing seed, irrigation water and plows. The land was planted to carrots, broccoli, cabbage and lettuce.

The total cost of the project has been 62 cents per acre, of which 19 cents per acre was borne by the persons aided.

"The small amount of assistance given these 20 families has enabled them to become virtually self-supporting," said O. W. Curry, Edinburg, who acts as overseer and offers suggestions. "With a little more help, they would become independent in a small way."

"A little co-operation has prevented them from becoming dependent on charity for existence. Sooner or later they will be able to care for themselves and will become useful employes on some farm."

Land used in the co-operative gardens was loaned by Dr. F. M. Olmstead, Brownsville, and Mrs. Eleanor M. J. Moore, Kolomo, Ind.

Firemen Repulse Youths With Hose

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind.—With the avowed intention of crashing the gate at a local marathon dance, a crowd of Louisville, Ky., youngsters celebrating a football victory, trooped over the toll bridge here without paying tolls. The gate-crashing plan was abandoned however when firemen met them with two lines of hose and after police had cuffed a couple of the marauders lightly.

BAD LUCK CAME IN BUNCHES

QUINCY, Mass.—For Policeman James H. Baker, bad luck comes in bunches. First, all six of his children had the mumps. Then all six had scarlet fever. After that, the family physician had to make three calls at the Baker home in a single day: Louis, 7, the croup; Andrew, 11, cut his face in a tumble down stairs; and David, 3, required eight stitches for a cut on the head, suffered when he fell off his tricycle.

ILLUSION: In this startling trick, the magician seemingly pushes a huge threaded needle through the body of an assistant, pulling the needle out the other side, followed by the thread. EXPLANATION: Under the clothes of the victim is a pipe, extending around one side of his body from front to back. The needle, which is flexible, is inserted in the front end of the pipe, is carried around the body and emerges from the pipe in back. This operation is performed so quickly that the audience does not notice that the needle and thread are momentarily shortened during the act.

Here's one that's interesting...The illusion that by some obscure magic certain cigarettes are "COOLER" than others. THE EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes burn slowly. They're cool. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They're hot. Camels are carefully wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane...in the famous, air-tight Humidor Pack. Camels are cool because they're fresh. A cigarette blended from choice non-irritating tobaccos also gives a cooler effect than one that is harsh and acrid. The finer the tobacco the less irritating it is, and therefore the "cooler." It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. This is why Camels are cool and mild, non-irritating—full of flavor. This is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made. It's the tobacco that counts. Keep the famous welded Humidor Pack on your Camels. It assures you a fresh, cool smoke. NO TRICKS... JUST COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN A MATCHLESS BLEND'

State Not Always Success in Business

By United Press.

AUSTIN.—State experiments in business are not always great successes, a report of the state efficiency committee says.

The committee calls attention to the fact that the state hospital at Austin operated in connection with the state hospital at Austin. Its products were sold other institutions. This plan resulted in better selling to institutions at 34 cents a pound whereas market quotations at the time were 15 cents a pound. One instance cited relates that a case of butter would have that day bought butter at Carlsbad at the public market for 15 cents a pound.

The charge was a matter of bookkeeping, the committee reports, and resulted in the institution's farm showing a profit of $7,532.

"The price charged the institutions has been so far in excess of the market price for butter of similar quality," says the report, "that a large part of the apparent profit has been at the expense of the institution purchasers."

"It is possible that even at market prices the dairy might still show a profit, and it is quite probable that its existence has had a tendency to hold butter prices down at the institutions outside Austin."

That is the question confronting golfers here since Ross Craig holed out 185 yards from the green to make a three on a 606-yard par six hole.

SHEILA SHAYNE, dancer, is discharged from the show because MARRION RANDOLPH, the star, is jealous of her. Sheila asks CHUCK ABBOTT, who secures a part in a musical show soon to go on tour, DICK STANLEY, rich and socially prominent, asks her to give up this job and marry him but Sheila refuses. Her idea of marriage is to live in some little town far from Broadway.

Sheila is friendly with JIM BLAINE, another actor in the company from whom she was discharged. When Jim offends Miss Randolph quite unintentionally she asks him to marry her. He is backing the show financially, to discharge Jim. Abbott, tired of starforn and her demands, tries to see Jim and through him secures an introduction to Sheila. A few days later Sheila hears that MARRION is out of the show.

Abbott takes her to tea and offers her the part MARRION had. Sheila says she does not want it. Then Abbott asks her to marry him. Sheila refuses, knowing that he is not in love with her. A few days later the company acts out on their tour. Sheila becomes friendly with JAPPY, a chorus girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV

THERE were signs of spring in the air when the "Heigh-bo" company arrived in the small city of Spencer. It was to be a full week's engagement and Sheila and Jappy were glad. They could unpack some of the things in their trunks and make the little hotel room seem more homelike.

Spencer was a factory town but it had its social life also. The factories, it seemed, were owned by aristocratic families. Sons married and brought their wives back to Spencer as a matter of course. Daughters went away to attend finishing schools, traveled, but when their fashionable weddings took place they and their husbands always returned to take their places in the family circle.

Spencer's leading citizens drew strict lines of social prestige. They were rather snobbish. They made ceremonies of every public gathering and they particularly enjoyed the theater. Business was good that week for the "Heigh-bo" company.

Sheila soon found herself becoming something of a celebrity here. Her dancing was applauded nightly. When she left the theater—usually with McKee's protecting presence—it was she and not the comedian who received the acclaim. McKee took this good-naturedly. It mattered little to him that Sheila was registering a bit in this inland community.

By the middle of the week people recognized her on the street, and stared as she passed. "That's Sheila Shayne in the show at the Capitol," she would hear them say. "She's the girl who dances in that feather outfit, you know."

Sheila, with her years in the theater, didn't mind being stared at. She knew it was the price of success.

"Coming to walk?" she asked Jappy one morning as she emerged from the bathroom and began rummaging in a suitcase for clean underthings. Jappy, wrapped in a brilliant coolie coat, was catching a run in a stocking. She looked up and thrust back a cloud of dark hair from her face. "Can't I have to see Fletcher at 11?"

"There are some bus rides," Sheila considered. "And spring seems to be in the air. I think I'll take a ride and see if I can find anything interesting."

"You could have taken a ride with us last night," Jappy observed reproachfully. She had invited Sheila on a blind date and the invitation had been refused.

"But I couldn't have looked around much. This seeing America by moonlight—"

JAPPY wrinkled her nose in disdain. "You're not going Garbo on us, are you?" she queried. "Blue glasses wouldn't be becoming to a girl like you."

"Well, I don't care to be picked up," Sheila's tone was definite.

Jappy laughed. "My dear, we didn't pick those boys up. We did them a service. They'll talk about knowing girls from the show for months."

"That's what I mean—"

"And they bought us a grand supper. I was starved—hadn't eaten since breakfast."

Sheila moved toward the telephone. "Shall I order something sent up now?"

"Do."

They had found that by buying fruit and bringing it to their room they could order breakfast sent up as cheaply as it was served in the dining room downstairs. Toast and coffee for two with oranges or grapefruit from the dessert tray came to about the same price as a more substantial breakfast. In the dining room would have cost.

By the time Sheila had dressed the waiter appeared with a tray. The girls ate, discussing plans for the day. Half an hour later Sheila boarded a bright yellow bus and was soon skimming along a road that appeared to lead to the country. It was a sort of adventure, taking this bus with no clear idea where it might take her. Of course she would inquire when she left it how to get back to the hotel.

A new residence section of tiny homes, side by side and all alike, caught her attention. They were attractive houses. Instead of being monotonous the street with its uniform dwellings was pleasing.

SHEILA was told by the obliging bus driver that these houses had been built by one of the large manufacturing companies as residences for their employees.

The driver added that the bus returning to Spencer did not follow the route they had covered but that Sheila could hail it by walking a short distance through a lane leading to another main thoroughfare. The buses ran every 25 minutes, the driver said. "I think I'll get off here," Sheila decided. The lane was flanked by a brook on one side and a baseball field on the other. It was a picturesque spot. The trees were budding and the grass was a fresh new green. Long-legged bugs flitted over the water and sunshine shimmered through the branches of the trees. Sheila loved spring even in New York, but she had never seen anything quite like this.

She decided to stay a while and enjoy it all. Sheila sat down beneath a tree, settling back against it, her hat in her lap, the breeze playing with the tendrils of her hair. Yes, spring was definitely in the air. Oh, it was good to be alive on such a day!

It was late morning. Presently a whistle blew and from the brick factory far across the field men in overall uniforms emerged. Some walked to a building which, though Sheila did not know it, was a lunch room. Others settled beneath trees to open lunch boxes. Still others ran immediately to the ball field and began a game.

Sheila smiled, sighed and watched them lazily. These signs of brisk activity only served to increase her own indolence. Presently she discovered that she was not alone. A few yards down the brook a young man was lying full length on the grass, his clasped hands pillowing his head, his eyes staring at the branches above him.

"Probably one of the factory workers," Sheila thought to herself. "Maybe he hasn't the money to buy lunch—or maybe he wants to enjoy all this, just as I do."

FURTHER investigation assured her that the young man had come from the factory. He was clad in overalls, a blue shirt and wore no necktie. His arms were smoothly tanned as if work kept him a great deal in the open.

Sheila wished that she could see his face but he was lying with his head toward her. His blond hair, which was almost gold colored, was the only part of his head that was visible.

Presently, without moving, the young man drew a package of lunch from his overall pocket and began eating.

The baseball game was evidently a good one. Shouts arose frequently and flying figures sped around the diamond in whirls of dust. Then there was a lull and another player came to bat. There was the sharp sound of the impact of the bat and the ball, a roar, and then a black speck against the sky. The ball dropped sharply within a dozen yards of Sheila's feet. It bounded and dropped again in a tangle of green vines. The crowd rushed across the field to the roadside. Sheila was wondering if she should not look for it. It's somewhere among those vines.

The young man rose, stamped about in the thick tangle, found the ball and tossed it well into the center of the field. Then he looked toward her again.

"You should be pitching for them," Sheila said. "That was a grand throw."

He laughed, settling himself once more on the mossy bank, this time facing her. "Maybe you do a few things well yourself," he hazarded.

"Don't we all?" she asked gaily.

He shrugged slightly. "I don't know. However I do know there aren't many girls who can dance as well as you do, Sheila Shayne."

Vicks Company Famous Tricks of Magic Explained

Special Correspondent.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Jan. 30.

The House of Vicks—famous for its various household preparations and plan for control of colds—has its own way of overcoming depression. Instead of retrenching, it expands. It employs more people—spends more on its research division in developing new products; more money for advertising; more. This, in turn, requires the purchase of more raw materials, and helps other business in allied lines.

Just lately, Vicks introduced a new product—Vicks Vaseline antiseptic. In its production, and in preparation for its marketing, thousands of people were given new or extra employment. Three weeks ago, 132 carloads of this new mouthwash and gargle went out through wholesale druggists to America's 60,000 drug stores. In each carload, there was an added slice of prosperity for bottle makers, cap manufacturers, carton makers, glass and paper mills, printers, and engravers—to say nothing of the various sources of raw materials for the product itself; and the thousands for whom papers envelopes were created or fattened.

Nor does all this take into account the $700,000 appropriated for the Vicks antiseptic introductory advertising campaign—over 85 per cent of which is being spent in newspaper space. It's Vicks answer to the challenge of the times—"can new business be created in a period of depression?"

Vicks believes that it can be done. In fact, it is proving it. There has been an amazing public response to the announcement of this new product—of which there were 5,000,000 trial bottles made available to druggists below cost of manufacture, to make it easy for the public to test and prove its quality—and economy. Born in a depression year, Vicks antiseptic has been priced in keeping with the times.

Immediate success of this new Vicks product has not been unexpected. A year ago, Vicks introduced two other new preparations—Vicks nose and throat drops and Vicks medicated cough drops. The usual advertising appropriation for a normal year was more than doubled—and sales of both products went above quotas in like proportion. The nose drops—new aid in preventing colds—looked Vicks nose in its particular field. More than 20,000,000 packages of the cough drops were sold during the first season. Sales so far this winter are practically double last year's figures for the same period.

Vicks antiseptic represents the first departure from the exclusive field of colds for the House of Vicks. Its introduction was based upon recognition of the place and that oral antiseptics have taken in almost every household as a modern hygienic necessity.

LESSON-SERMON GIVEN

"Love" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Jan. 29.

The Golden text was from I John: "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

Among the passages read from the Bible was the following from Romans 12: "And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

The following citation together with others from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy was also read: "Anatomy, when conceived of spiritually, is mental self-knowledge, and consists in the dissection of thoughts, to discover their quality, quantity, and origin. Are thoughts divine or human? That is the important question. This branch of study is indispensable to the excision of error. The anatomy of Christian Science teaches when and how to probe the self-inflicted wounds of selfishness, malice, envy and hate. It teaches the control of mad ambition. It unfolds the hallowed influence of unselfishness, philanthropy, spiritual love. It urges the government of the body both in health and in sickness. The Christian Scientist, through understanding mental anatomy, discerns and deals with the real cause of disease" (p. 462).

Their names are colorful. "Houdini's Milk Can Escape," the "Three-Headed Woman," "The Human Cricket," and the famous "Sawing a Woman in Half" are only a few which are being dramatized in the newspapers. Some are modern tricks, invented by the great magicians of our own day. Some have been kept secret for centuries.

How does the Human Fly stick to the ceiling? How does the magician live in the Burning Oven? How did Houdini get out of the padded milk can? How is it possible to shoot an arrow through a woman, while she smiles—unharmd?

These and many more tricks which have become famous on the stages of Europe and America, associated with the greatest names in magic, are now explained... told in full detail so you will understand exactly the principles on which the tricks are worked.

So look at the Camel cigarette advertisements if you want to know how the mystifying tricks of magic are done and the Reynolds Tobacco people will tell you.
