

Eastland Echoes

By Casey

THOUGHT FOR TODAY: "If you think it's tough keeping up with the Joneses, think how tough it is for the Joneses." — (Hudson Newsletter).

We have always been quite favorably impressed with Eastland's room for residential expansion. In one city where we lived, there were certain conditions which made it almost impossible to arrange an orderly and reasonably close-in development. That, of course, held the city back when other conditions reached the point that residential growth was justified. The situation here in Eastland, with so much desirable potential residential building - lot property available, is a definite asset.

The boy unhesitatingly up to his father. "Dad, here is my report card," he said, "and here also is an old one of your report found in the attic."

Remember when you took your child to school for the first time? For the first flowers from Mother's garden. Yes, those were the good old days, but to the youngsters of today they are the "same days" - different only in individual perspective. You can join with the youngsters of your neighborhood and visit the nearby public school during the statewide observance of Public Schools Week, March 5 through 10. You will be welcome. It will not only be fun, but a privilege to see how the schools of today are meeting the challenge of today. Yes, your schools invite you now to open house - March 5 through 10.

If you'd like to make a donation to the Fire Department's project for purchase of a portable resuscitator, Eastland National Bank or any member of the department will accept it - with thanks.

Commission Stands Pat on Open Roads Approaching Leon

In a contested hearing Friday morning at Eastland, the Commissioners Court heard reasons as to why county roads servicing Lake Leon should or should not be closed as three land owners with lake frontage have effected recently by fencing.

Last Saturday the court met with all members in attendance and ordered that the persons who had closed a county road leading to the shoreline of Lake Leon be notified that the road should be opened immediately.

Three land owners, T. A. Utley, Walter Duncan and O. T. Hazard, however, have not complied with the order, would be open to fishermen without charge. Utley answered in the affirmative but said "that if they (the fishermen) camp overnight I would have to clean up after them."

County Attorney Joe Nussle asked if the fences torn down were not situated on the Water Board property or on an elevation of 1,375 feet, or below. He indicated that the landowner would be entitled to construct at the 1,375 foot elevation point, but that the Water Board was not compelled to fence their lines.

Utley said that his understanding with the Water Board was that the Board owned to the 1,375 foot elevation line but that the landowner had control to the actual shoreline as the water fluctuated from time to time.

Commissioner B. M. Bennett backed the Water Board's contention that all roads should be left open to the public. He said, "I have studied this problem for two years" (Continued on Page Two)

New Uniforms Of Band Due By Late April

Eastland High School Band will be outfitted in new uniforms and it is likely that the youngsters will make their first appearance in them at the Interscholastic League Band Contests in the latter part of April.

This development was disclosed at a meeting of the Band Boosters Club Thursday night when the uniform to be purchased was decided upon. The uniform will have a double-breasted military navy blue coat with either matching or contrasting trousers, trimmed in red and white. Probably forty uniforms will be bought at a cost of $2,000.

"We have around $1,500 in the Band Booster uniform fund now," said Club Co-ordinator Howard Gill, director of the band. "Some benefit features will be presented prior to uniform delivery time and the school board will help us as much as possible on making up any balance. The new uniforms certainly are needed as the ones the boys and girls are wearing now are 8 or 9 years old. In the future we hope to buy a few uniforms each year, to take care of any expansion in membership and retire worn uniforms so that the next time there won't be needed such an outlay of cash."

Saturday, the band - happy with news about the uniforms - journeyed to Snyder for the West Texas Music Festival, returning Saturday night.

Admission Tax Elimination Is Measure's Aim

Rep. Noah M. Mason (R. Ill.) has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives calling for elimination of the federal admission tax. Rep. Mason's bill for the elimination of the tax was passed by both houses of Congress in 1955 and then vetoed by President Eisenhower.

R. J. O'Donnell, general manager of the Interstate Theaters, of Dallas is chairman of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations tax movement. The new measure is HR 9556, and is the first of several bills relating to the tax that are expected to be introduced by the House in the near future. Introduction of these bills is expected to result from appeals for tax relief now being made to congressmen by exhibitors. (Continued on Page Two)

The man posing for his picture in this photo has just had five brand new Seiberling All Tread semi-balloon tires—size 4.40 x 21—installed on his car by the Jim Horton Tire Service—about 30 years ago.

This car does not look much like our modern "two door hard tops" and the tires don't look (nor wear as long) as the modern Seiberling Safety tubeless tires now being sold by Jim Horton.

We all have come a long way in the past 25 or 30 years but one thing has not changed much and that is the dependability and long service that has always been built into each Seiberling tire.

That's why so many people have bought and are still buying Seiberling tires from Jim Horton Tire Service. They know that they get their money's worth and if the tire does not make good—Jim Horton will. What could be more fair than that?

The Jim Horton Tire Service will give five gallons of that good Premier gasoline to the first person Monday morning to give the correct name of the man in this picture.

To Make Poor Soil Good Spade in What It Lacks

Spading is essential to good soil conditioning.

Plants can be grown without soil, but nature uses it to support plant roots, and store food and water which the roots require. Men have never found a better way to make gardens, than by using soil.

Roots require air as well as food and water. Unless air can penetrate the soil, the roots cannot function. This demands that lawns and gardens have good drainage, so water which is not held in storage by soil particles will escape and allow air to enter.

If your soil is stiff, hard to spade and cultivate, slow to allow water to drain through it, every spring something should be added to make it more porous. Beginning gardeners are often persuaded that what is needed is a few inches of "black dirt." Even if your soil is clay, excavated for the foundation of a new home, that is the wrong solution. Forget the color of the soil and concentrate on its porosity, a quality without which any soil black, yellow, or red, will give you trouble.

At the other extreme are soils in beach areas, of almost pure sand. These are altogether too porous, holding neither moisture nor plant food, but letting everything wash away.

Both types of soil need the same treatment which is the addition of decayed vegetable or animal material, such as sewage sludge, muck or peat dug from old bogs, well decayed manure, commercial peat moss, leaf mould or compost from a compost pile. It is seldom advisable to mix sand with clay or clay with sand. Both are excellent to have in soil, but together they often produce an extremely hard composition.

Instead of sand, however limestone can be mixed with clay, with excellent results. Limestone causes the fine clay particles to combine into crumb-like aggregates which will retain moisture, while allowing air to enter freely and excess water to drain off.

Do not be afraid to use crushed limestone freely, since it will not make clay soil harmfully alkaline. The clay has a "buffer" capacity which prevents this, say the scientists.

All the materials used to improve your soil should be mixed with it thoroughly. Spade the organics into sandy soil and divide into sections, one for each day. Limit the day's work to an hour, until you become hardened to it.

Spading alone is a fine soil conditioner, and if planned sensibly is not a difficult chore. Mark the area to be spaded as a whole and divide into sections, one for each day. Limit the day's work to an hour, until you become hardened to it.

Spread material to be spaded in evenly over the whole area. Begin by opening up a trench at one end of the day's section, throwing the soil removed in a pile nearby. Then dig an adjoining trench, with spade at right angles to its length, throwing the soil and organic matter into the first trench. Continue this until the day's work is over, resting at frequent intervals. Fill the final trench with soil removed from the first. Drive the spade straight down each time, digging the full length of its blade; and turn the "spit" of soil as you drop it. It beats any kind of plowing for a small garden.

First Lesson of Story-Telling Course Attended by 28 Women

Twenty-eight women and high school girls attended the first of the series of "story-telling" lessons Thursday night at the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Frank Sparks, instructor, under the auspices of the Thursday Afternoon Club, lectured on standing and sitting postures, and character placement on stage, illustrating with drawings of three characters. "The opening sentence is the most important in story-telling," she said, and advised never to begin until speaker has the attention of his audience.

Always address each character the same way when reading a play of more than one character, advised Mrs. Sparks. She illustrated these and several other salient points of her lecture by reading some of the Uncle Remus stories. "Never talk down to children and don't over-emphasize" were among her admonishments.

The "story-telling" course will be held at 7 p.m. each Thursday for four more lessons. It is free

Teenagers Want to Drive

By Jeanne Smith, Dodge Safety Consultant

Your child, who "only yesterday" took those first wobbling steps outside his play pen, wants to learn to drive. No need for alarm. Like learning to walk, learning to drive is part of today's process of growing up in millions of families.

The most effective way in which your teenage youngster can learn to drive is through the driver-training course at his high school. Statistics show that the accident rate of young drivers who have had this thorough preparation drops 50 percent below their untaught contemporaries.

Under the guidance of expertly trained teachers, they learn all phases of driving, including mechanical repairs. Classroom instruction and actual "behind the wheel" training teach them the fundamentals of both city and open-road driving.

Special tests check their distance judgment and steering ability. Practice parking areas are provided. And, they are taught all the rules of road courtesy.

There are now more than 18,000 high school teachers specially prepared to teach driver-education. If your high school has not yet adopted this training course, do all you can to see that one is instituted. AAA officials in your area will cooperate with you in working out a program for your area.

Meanwhile, the initial teaching job may fall upon you. Your guidance and tolerance in imparting the correct "behind the wheel" attitude will be an important aid.
