A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GO BE MAGNIFIED: Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee; and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.— Psalm 70: 4.

HUNTING A FOUR MILLION DOLLAR FUGITIVE

"We now come to the home stretch of the legislative session," writes W. O. Huggins, president of the Texas Goods Roads association. "It is the most important period of all because during the short time which remains the financial juggling will be done. The books must balance. Our fear is that the legislature will hit further into gas tax revenues, not because its members believe such a course to be right or fair but because they will have become weary of dickering over revenues. We believe our case is sound. Jobs are the basic need. The job value of road work is irrefutable. It has this value right now, as the state will learn through human misery if its highway program is curtailed."

According to a bulletin issued by the Texas Good Roads association Comptroller Sheppard is elated over the new legislation against gasoline tax thieves, making the offense a felony, requiring the keeping of complete records and providing for a corps of enforcers. It is the viewpoint of the association that the comptroller's aim is the recovery of more than four million dollars a year in stolen gas taxes and information is given that already a group of Sheppard auditors and investigators are at work in Eastexas and several major cities. It is hinted that the filing of numerous charges may be expected soon. Moreover the comptroller, in frequent statements, is pleading for the full support of public opinion.

That the people may fully appreciate the state's annual loss to gasoline bootleggers, the editor of the highway bulletin points out what this four million dollars distributed as the law provides would do. First, one million dollars, or one-fourth, to schools, would pay 1000 teachers for a year, or would pay the entire per capita for nearly 60,000 children or would pay the free textbook allotments for 700,000 children. Second, one million dollars, or one-fourth, to bond refunding would be a major boost to the now insufficient fund with which the state is striving to relieve counties of outstanding bonds issued to build state highways. Third, two million dollars, or one-half, to state highways, if spent in building new roads, would be doubled through federal aid and thus could employ 4000 men for a year or nearly 50,000 for a month, at salaries sufficient to support their families, after which the state would have the self-liquidating assets (through the gas tax) in the form of several hundred miles of modern roadways.

This is the new slogan of the Texas Good Roads association: "Help Find This Money." Well, why not?

BUSINESS ACTIVITIES IN TEXAS

An A. P. dispatch from Dallas carries a cheerful little earful:

"Evidence of a better feeling through the trade is reported in the monthly business review of the federal reserve bank of Dallas as well as some improvement in consumer buying. Reports indicate that business in both wholesale and retail channels held up well, in the first half of April and in some instances closely approximated the volume of the same period last year."

This is more than a cheerful little earful: "Commercial insolvency in this district for March was greatly reduced in number and the amount of liabilities involved and the amount of liabilities involved as compared with previous month and the corresponding month last year. In fact, it is necessary to go back to October, 1930, to find lower figures. This is merely an extension of the favorable trend which began with respect to insolvencies last fall. Banking operations gradually resumed more normal proportions during the past month."

Watch the ticker as to cotton. It is the new money crop of Texas and all the cotton belt states. It tells the story of commodity price levels.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT one of the greatest joys of living is doing for others.

To give pleasure to people brings happiness to the giver.

A selfish person never can attain that degree of happiness which comes to those who think of and do for others.

A selfish person never can attain that degree of happiness which comes to those who think of and do for others.

Absence of appreciation of recipients should not prevent continuance of good deeds.

That selfishness which centers all of one's interest in one's self is sinful and its reward is unpleasant but just.

Soviet Schools Get Uniforms

MOSCOW.—All school children in the soviet union will be put into uniforms next September, according to the commissariat of education. The decision merely revives a system traditionally in vogue in Russia until the revolution. The distinctive school outfit at that time set the wearer apart from the mass of children who had no schooling. In abolishing uniforms the soviet regime at that time in fact sought to obliterate class distinctions. Now that elementary education almost is universal here, it is felt that the uniforms can be re-introduced. Until the revolution, Russia was perhaps the world's most thoroughly uniformed country. Practically every trade and social station had its distinctive clothes, usually obligatory. A man's costume was an accurate indication of his calling and his social station.

Minnnows Improve Health Conditions Physician Declares

HOUSTON.—Give a greedy little minnow a great big hand, for his appetite means much to Texas. Dr. C. P. Coogle, field director of malaria control work in southeast Texas, gives lots of credit to these little fish. He says they do more to control malaria than any other agency.

Gambusia Affinis, as these special minnows are known, are glut-ton, never so happy as when they are gulping mosquito larvae.

Boy Scouts are carrying them around by the bucketful in East Texas towns and the Lower Rio Grande valley, presenting them to housewives who plop them into rain barrels and other places.

In that way, says Dr. Coogle, the mosquitoes haven't half a chance. They must breed in water and if the gambusia gets there first he finishes off the younger generation with great ease.

The gambusia is very prolific, according to Dr. Coogle. It and the whale are the only known mammals among fish.

Putting the gambusia to work is only one phase of the anti-malaria campaign being waged in Texas. It was inaugurated in 1931 when the legislature appropriated $50,000 for the work with the stipulation that the federal government would send a man to take charge.

The U. S. Public health department sent Dr. Coogle. He makes his headquarters at Longview, covering 72 counties. Recently he has been quartering here to direct South Texas work.

Dr. Coogle discusses the anopheles (malaria-bearing) mosquito as familiarly as other persons discuss their neighbors. He has been fighting the pests for 17 years and they have no secrets from him.

"The female of the anopheles is deadlier than the male," he said. "The female bites. The male does not. His is a vegetable diet. The female has to have a meal of blood in order to fertilize her eggs. Sometimes she will bite a snake, but only when a juicy human being is not available."

Further text: 'Early in the 17th century, tobacco seed from America was taken to Turkey. Different soil, different climate, different temperatures night and day, and different farming methods produced an entirely new tobacco—small in size, but very rich and aromatic. This tobacco is known generally as Turkish tobacco; but there are as many varieties of Turkish as there are kinds of apples. Four certain spots are famous for the quality of their Turkish tobacco—Xanthi Cavalla in Greece; Samsoun and Smyrna in Turkey. And it is principally from these places that our buyers get the Turkish for Chesterfield. These Turkish tobaccos are blended in the just the right amount, with Domestic tobaccos. It is this blending and cross-blending of just the right amount of Turkish Domestic tobaccos which gives Chesterfield a flavor that neither possesses alone.'

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL MCCELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, 20 and beautiful, is unhappy because DAN CARDIGAN who professes to be in love with her is influenced by his snobbish family, CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome newcomer to Belvedere, says Monnie marked attention. He helps her with family difficulties and when KAY, her younger sister, tries to run off with a traveling salesman, he and Monnie bring her back without scandal.

SANDRA LAWRENCE, one-time friend of Monnie's, tries to win Dan away from her. Sandra's maid, HEFFY, thinks Sandra is trying to swag JAMES the chauffeur, and is jealous.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

MONNIE heard Kay's voice and looked up. It was Sunday morning—11 o'clock, to be exact—and Monnie was enjoying the sweet freedom of her "day off," celebrating it by the weekly washing of her burnished bronze hair. Sitting under the apple tree in a shabby old basket chair, looking extraordinarily childish in the white smock she wore, she answered her younger sister.

"Yes? What is it?"

A new Kay, since the adventure. A curiously silent, obedient, almost pathetically anxious-to-please Kay, Monnie reflected. It had been lucky—it had been really miraculous—that no one else had learned of Kay's brief night with Chester Bigelow, from which Charles Eustace and Monnie had providentially rescued her.

"Monnie, I want to do something!" Kay's voice, her expression were tragic. Her sea blue eyes, long lashed, shadowed faintly with mauve, stared straight ahead.

"I've got to find something. I—I'll go crazy if I don't."

Monnie said mildly, "But there aren't any jobs for you in Belvedere—"

"I know," Kay interrupted. "That's exactly what I mean. If I could get away—to Chicago, or New York—"

Her voice fell on the name. The magic name of The City. Kay, starting through apple-branches at the sky, was seeing, instead, the high minarets and towers publicized by the picture postcards—the famous "skyline." She was seeing the Empire State building and the Chrysler tower, the twinkling lights of Times Square.

"There'd be a chance for me there," Kay stated eagerly. "I could make something of myself—he somebody. Get some place."

Monnie sighed. They had gone over this ground before. She sympathized, wholly and utterly, but what could she do about it?

"You're too young to be on your own," she said with gentleness. "Even if we had the money to stake you for a while—which we haven't—you're far too young to go off that way by yourself. Mother would never hear of it."

"Girls don't see bit older than I am," said Kay with fervor.

she earning loads of money in the movies?"

"Oh, the movies, of course," said Monnie dismissing them.

"Well?" Kay seemed to think she had made a case.

"Yes, but for the half dozen who are successful," argued the older sister, "aren't there hundreds who starve? Turn on the gas—all kinds of things. You read about it every day."

"I," said Kay magnificently, "would be successful."

MONNIE gave her a speculative look. "You might," she said slowly. "And then again you might not. It's not being pretty and talented alone that puts you over. I read just the other day that a good camera man could make an actress and an unfriendly one ruin her chances. There are tricks—why, some of the most successful ones are not a bit pretty if you meet them face to face! Don't you remember Lillas Martingale, the girl I told you I met at Sandra's last winter? She was plain, really. Anguila—and her skin was awful. Yet Sandra said she got a screen test that was wonderful. And she's getting along very well. I saw her picture outside the Cameo the other day when I came home."

"I forgot you'd met her," said Kay interested. "Was she really ugly?"

"Not ugly—but, well, plain in a distinguished kind of way. She," remembered Monnie, "was the girl Sandra met in Florence. From an old Boston family, I think."

Kay frowned. "Sandra, by the way, is throwing a big party tomorrow night. Having people from the city and the usual snooty crowd here. Wonder she wouldn't invite you? You used to be awfully clubby."

Monnie threw the bright veil of hair over her eyes. "Don't be silly," she said with affected lightness. "You wouldn't expect me to be asked to every party Sandra gave."

"She might have done it this time anyway," Kay went on, stubbornly loyal. "I know her. What she wants is to get Dan Cardigan all to herself. She worked hard on that job. She deserves him. All I hope is," prattled Kay, turning the knife in her listener's heart with blissful unconsciousness, "is that she gets Mamma Cardigan with him! They'd make a fine pair. Both bosses. Neither one will give an inch."

"What makes you think," asked Monnie in a muffled voice, "that she's going to get Dan, as you so elegantly put it?"

"WELL, I'll tell you," began Kay confidentially. "Mind you, Monnie, I wouldn't be talking this way if I weren't certain you'd get over Dan—and a mighty good thing that is, too," she interpolated. "Ever since that night you turned him down when he asked for a date I've been awfully glad. I was afraid," said Kay with sisterly candor, "you might be turning out to be the sort of dumb bunny who cries with joy when a boy shows her any attention. And that, with your looks, would be dumb!"

"Thanks," Monnie was brushing her hair now. It did not matter if her face had crimsoned.

"What I say," cried Kay warming to her subject, "is, let Sandra

Pictures of Silver

Mark 10:32-43

By Beulah K. Hicks

PICTURES OF SILVER

"And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem."

Jesus was walking ahead while the disciples, frightened and amazed by the stately, determined tread of Jesus and a great solemnity which seemed to envelop him, were lagging behind in the road.

How sublime was the courage which radiated from his person as he turned his steps toward Jerusalem, resolutely looking steadfastly, not a dark shadow of the cross, but a reality from which he knew there was no escape.

His eyes did not behold the road his feet were traveling; they did not see the shallow woody through which a swift stream rushed, or the high mountains on whose sides clung great monasteries. His eyes were focused directly upon the cross at Jerusalem; that "Old Rugged Cross" esteemed and loved wherever the name of Christ is known. While perhaps His heart ached for understanding and for His disciples who seemed to understand so little that he was "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

Jesus called them up beside him and in conversation began for the fourth time to impress upon them the understanding of His death and resurrection.

He told them of the agony which He would endure and of the triumph of the third day when He should rise again. How His heart must have ached for them when they failed to grasp the great picture which he was portraying, but asked of him a very selfish request.

How gently He rebuked them, with these words, "Ye know not what ye ask."

How wonderful the lesson He taught in such a few words. In the Roman Kingdom the first or birth-right man must be served first of all but in Christ's Kingdom the highest in true greatness was servant of all.

In Matthew we find the story of Salome, the mother of James and John, who was one of the devout followers of Christ but ambitious for her sons and the spokesman for them.

Christ does not condemn her for her ambition but shows her for the road to true greatness is through service for others.

Pray that your child may be rich and enjoy a life of ease, but that early in life it may find the Master and adjust its soul to the wonderful majesty of the true Kingdom wherein lies strength, wisdom and peace that passeth all understanding. That this Christ who lived so beautifully in this world may ever be their guide and friend in the paths of service wherein lies true greatness.

"For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

He told them of the agony which He would endure and of the triumph of the third day when He should rise again. How His heart must have ached for them when they failed to grasp the great picture which he was portraying, but asked of him a very selfish request.

How gently He rebuked them, with these words, "Ye know not what ye ask."

How wonderful the lesson He taught in such a few words. In the Roman Kingdom the first or birth-right man must be served first of all but in Christ's Kingdom the highest in true greatness was servant of all.

In Matthew we find the story of Salome, the mother of James and John, who was one of the devout followers of Christ but ambitious for her sons and the spokesman for them.

Christ does not condemn her for her ambition but shows her for the road to true greatness is through service for others.

Pray that your child may be rich and enjoy a life of ease, but that early in life it may find the Master and adjust its soul to the wonderful majesty of the true Kingdom wherein lies strength, wisdom and peace that passeth all understanding. That this Christ who lived so beautifully in this world may ever be their guide and friend in the paths of service wherein lies true greatness.

"For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Miss Pearson Is Crowned as Queen Of Eastland High

This week has been a busy one for the Eastland High School, which staged a successful benefit variety show, program by Eastland organization Monday night, followed by a brilliant entertainment in the High School gym—a genuine midway paiseance with concessions, to entertain the visitors, of a doll rack, fortune telling, the Olympic Revue, Hollywood Parade and novel refreshments.

W. P. Palm was more successful for there wasn't anyone able to "duck" him.

A number of souvenirs donated by the merchants were given away during the course of the evening, by J. O. Brothers of the faculty.

Campbell's band played several selections throughout the evening, and also opened the carnival with a peppy ballyhoo, outside the building.

The real feature of the evening was the announcement of the winner in the race for Queen of Eastland, and the pageant of the crowning of queen.

At eleven o'clock, voting closed, with the freshmen candidate stacking 586 votes; the sophomore 152 votes, the junior 590 votes, and the senior 260 votes. Miss Ellen Pearson was announced as being the choice for Queen of the Eastland High School.

The crowning ceremony professional was led by Clyde Chaney as bouncer, with Estes Burgamy as herald.

The attendants were Princess Verna Raye of the House of Knight; Princess Faye of the House of Tucker; Princess Nelle of the House of Yeager and Princess Barbara Ann of the House of Arnold.

Little Mary Joe of the House of Collie, the wren bearer, took her place at the foot of the throne, a handsome dais in white and royal purple with three wide white steps leading to the floor.

The Queen, Ellen of the House of Pearson, appeared wearing a beautiful white gown of silk crepe, with white caparison and overrobe of white lace, and was accompanied by her jester, clever Lucy Mae Cottingham, in quaint costume.

Cardinal Palm, in an impressive address, crowned Ellen of the House of Pearson, the Queen of the Eastland High School.

The big crowd that filled the gymnasium enjoyed this well arranged and entertaining ceremony of which all details were supervised by Miss Belle Wilson of the high school faculty.
