A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE THIRSTY LAND: O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, and my flesh longeth for thee in a dry thirsty land.—Psalm 63: 1.

BRATTON GIVEN LIFE JOB

U. S. Sen. Sam G. Bratton of New Mexico has been handed a life job by President Roosevelt. Senator Bratton is a democrat; he is widely known in Texas from the Gulf to the Rockies, and has been one of the outstanding leaders of the democrats of the Spanish-American commonwealth.

He has accepted an appointment to be a judge of the 10th district court of appeals but will remain in the senate until the special session ends. Bratton and Senator Bronson Cutting are warm personal friends.

Cutting is a newspaper publisher, a man of wealth and high culture, an independent republican who followed the flag of Roosevelt as against the flag of Hoover in the election last year. He is the scion of an old New England family, one of the scholars of the American senate, and a power in the politics of his adopted state.

Bratton fought his way to the top. Now a life job as a federal judge is a position of honor and trust not to be sneezed at in these so-called days of world-wide economic wars and strife with Japan working a strangle hold on China and preparing to give battle some day to the communistic Russian Bear, the pet riding animal of Dictator Stalin, known to the world as the steel-handed successor of the Romanoffs.

COMMINGS PROMISES TO GO DOWN THE LINE

Attorney Gen. Homer Cummings has made a new departure. He has pledged his department to press forward the prosecution of "those in high places who have committed financial crimes." His attitude: "Those who have considered it legitimate to gamble with other people's money must abdicate their leadership and those who thought the center of government was located in the financial district must learn that its proper seat is at Washington." This must have sent cold chills down the backs of those vitally concerned.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN GIVEN FEDERAL RECOGNITION

National guardsmen are to be given federal recognition. Legislation authorizing the federal government automatically to take over the national guard in the event of a national emergency has been approved by the house military committee of congress. "Preparedness" is said to be the thing.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

LAWRENCE W. HAGER, publisher of the Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger and Inquirer, says:

"The average subscriber in an average American town would pay $10 a year more than at present for his daily paper if there were no advertising, provided the number of subscribers equaled the present average.

"The number of subscribers would decline under such an increase in subscription price, and the necessity of still higher subscription rates would run the cost up, per subscriber, until none could afford a daily newspaper such as we enjoy today.

"Without newspaper advertising, towns of 25,000 people would probably support no more than a twice-a-week four-page sheet devoted to little other than local 'news' and discussions of local interest.

"Advertising pays for every service that goes into your daily paper. Subscriptions pay for nothing but paper, printing and distribution.

"Your patronage, when bestowed upon non-advertisers, tends to destroy the modern newspapers; when local merchants pay to send their message to you, through your local newspaper, and find you inattentive or perhaps supporting merchants in other cities or those who do not advertise, they must restrict their advertising appropriations, which threatens to restrict newspaper services to a disquieting degree.

"During the recent economic disturbance your merchants fed and clothed all trustworthy people whether they had the money to pay or not.

"Progressive merchants are indispensable to community progress. What they need is not sympathy but loyal support.

"You should realize the extensive wire news, feature services, the daily pages of comic pictures and numerous other additions to your daily paper made in the last 14 years—some the last three years—must go when the support that made them possible goes.

"Patronize local advertisers. Buy the nationally advertised brands you see in your favorite newspaper. 'Believe it or not,' your intelligent self-interest dictates this course."

Clive Brook Lives Youth Over Again in Fox, "Cavalcade"

To Clive Brook his role in Noel Coward's "Cavalcade," coming to the Lyric Theatre Monday is more than acting a part. In many places it is like retracing the course of his life.
 The action of the picture covers the period of the last thirty-two years, winding up on this last New Year's Eve.
 Brook was an active and energetic youth. Any movement of political or social importance engaged his interest. He recalls his activities during the woman suffrage riots in England. And although these play no part in this moving story of three great loves, they are associated in Brook's memory with other events in the picture that surrounded and followed.
 Brook recalls several occasions when his clothes were nearly torn to shreds. Once, when he was stumping for England's valiant female would-be voters, he was pelted with small sacks of flour that burst easily. But this was but mildly offensive compared to the barrage of odoriferous eggs for which he was target on another day.
 "I remember one riot particularly well," he declared, "because I started it."
 "An intrepid woman was addressing a crowd composed largely of the anti-s. A husky dock worker began to call her uncomplimentary names. My youthful chivalry was outraged. Without thinking I struck him. On the instant, I was seized by the crowd, generously mauled and a few minutes later, was conducted at the head of a procession to the Lyric Theatre Monday is more than acting a part. DARLING FOOL

By MABEL McCELLIOTT

GIN HERE TODAY

DAN GARDIGAN, heir to the fortune, Dan doesn't want to know of the estate. He and Monnie plan to leave in January when he will receive his share of the fortune of CHARLES EUGENE GARDIGAN, who died last year.

GARDIGAN is engaged to a girl named ANGIE. BILL BRINGS ANGIE to the attention of DAN. DAN is angry at MRS. GARDIGAN. He is angry because she is a married woman. He is angry because she is a rich woman. He is angry because she is a woman who has a shoe box full of money.

DAN is angry because she is a woman who has a shoe box full of money. He is angry because she is a woman who has a shoe box full of money. He is angry because she is a woman who has a shoe box full of money.

nce one golden August morning

Dan liked and respected his father. The keen-eyed, graying man usually kept his hands out of household affairs, preferring to let his wife decide such matters. This time, however, he had not been allowed to choose the line of least resistance. There had been a conference in Mrs. Gardigan's dressing room the night before. This interview was the result.

"Dan, what's this I hear about you not wanting a vacation with mother and the folks?"

Dan squirmed uncomfortably. "Had enough vacation. Thought I'd stick around and see how things are going. I know they haven't been so good for us lately."

His father interrupted, rather testily. "Never mind, never mind! It seems your mother's set her heart on this trip and wants you along. I don't know what the notion is, exactly. Bears, maybe. You're to save 'em from dangers on this dude ranch." His eyes twinkled.

"Those places are safe as Main street," Dan muttered, sullenly. "Don't see why I have to go traipsing off with all those women. Anyway, they'll have plenty of protection. Lance Waterman'll be there and both the Franklin kids. They're grown up now. As for bears," his tone was contemptuous, "Gerry and Sandra can handle a gun as well as I can."

"I know that. I know that." His father's voice was a rumble deep in his throat. It made the old man uncomfortable to lecture Dan this way. No sense to it, at all. It was rank foolishness, spending all that money on a trip with the worried way it'd been. He was worried about money, no mistake about it. No good suggesting it to Mother, though. She'd just flare up and tell him he ought to manage things better. Well, maybe he should have done that. Worried about money, that made him think of something else he'd been meaning to speak to Dan about.

HE cleared his throat, embarrassed. "Dan—uh—what's this I hear about you and Sandra?"

"Me and—?" Dan looked blank for an instant, then smiled. "I'm sure, Dad, I don't know what you've heard."

"Mother thinks Sandra's pretty sweet on you. Now don't get sore, boy. You know how mothers are. Mother'd be mighty pleased to see you make a go of that and so, I might say, would I. Sandra's a fine girl, you know. Slick as a race horse—lots of spirit. Now don't misunderstand me, Dan, but she's got lots of money. What passes for a fortune these days. Her father's a shrewd business man and he's done some smart investing. Sandra's all he's got."

Dan had turned in his chair, was looking unseeingly out the window. He did not reply.

"It would be a fine thing for you, every way you look at it," persisted the old man. "I'm not saying this without having given the matter thought." He glanced unseeingly at the silent young man. "Well, I'll say no more. I won't bother you about it now. Only—the business isn't what I hoped it would be, son, to pass along to you. You've been brought up to like expensive things. I'd be the last one in the world to suggest you should marry a girl for her money, but there's no question of that in this particular case. No man in his senses could help admiring Sandra."

He waited for affirmation and Dan accorded it, grudgingly. "I suppose not," he said.

"Good. Good! I'm glad you feel that way about it. That's why I agreed to talk to you about this trip. It would please Mother, it would please Sandra and, most of all, it would please me. How about it?"

"Let me think about it, Dad!" Dan pleaded awkwardly.

"Certainly. Certainly." Both men were on their feet now, relieved that the interview was at an end. "But don't make up your mind without thinking about what I've said."

WHEN Dan met Monnie that night he told her of it—badly, not sparing her.

"Dad wants me to go west with Sandra and the crowd. He thinks I ought to fix it up with Sandra—make a go of it."

He could not see how white she had turned in the darkness. Her voice, when it came, was cool, a trifle distant. "What are you going to do about it?"

Dan felt particularly badgered that day. He was thoroughly out of temper. Monnie's dispassionate gentleness only served to irritate him further. He said what he had not meant to say—what he did not really feel.

"Oh, guess I better string along with them, just to please Mother. It might be fun."

Monnie withdrew her hand from his arm where he had tucked it only a moment ago.

"Go by all means if you feel like that," she told him. Her heart was very sore. It was full to bursting. Things had gone along too smoothly of late, she reminded herself. Dan had been so sweet and considerate. She had felt so secure, so happy, with the knowledge of their secret troth deep in her heart, with Dan's seal ring in the bottom of her treasure box, a pledge and a promise. Now they were taking him away from her, coolly, deliberately. "You shouldn't even think of staying here if you want to go," she said aloofly.

"You little fool!" Dan cried, rushing to her roughly. They were sitting in the shadows on the side porch. "Better not tell me that too often. Maybe I'll take you at your word."

"Oh Dan!" She was in his arms, the salt tears trembling on her lashes. "You hurt me so—I thought you wanted to be with them. The way you said it—and, after all, why shouldn't you? It must be fun. Why should I keep you away from it?"

"It'd be rotten without you," Dan told her loyally. "No, I haven't the slightest intention of giving in. I told Father I'd think it over, but my mind's made up."

After he had gone Monnie thought bitterly that all their lives Dan would be giving things up for her. It was the eternal battle between the rich and the poor. He loved her now and so it did not matter. But how would it be later? Would he hate her for taking him away from the easy life he had loved?

She fell asleep, wondering.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

lar or building a combination smokehouse, pantry and curing house of native stone, logs or even lumber. It is essential that adequate storage space be had for keeping the year's food supply.

Field sprouts, old stumps, boulders and border timber should be removed from cultivated fields. Where needed terraces should be built and gullies and ditches stopped. Fences should be put in good condition with stock gaps built or gates put up that will swing on hinges and stay up. A permanent supply of pure drinking water should be provided by digging more and larger wells in the shallow water belts or by erecting that dirt dam at the site which has been selected many years past on most farms. Sand should be stopped from blowing by the use of small grain sown at peanut harvest time or by subsiding or by strip rowing with corn or grain sorghums. The farm home should be made livable by putting in additional windows where more light and ventilation is needed, broken window lights may be replaced so the pillows may again be used on the beds instead of to stop the rain or drafts. Leaks should be stopped in the roof and a good job of painting done. Adequate and modern outbuildings should not be neglected.

Native pastures should be improved by clearing of brush and undergrowth and by sowing of clovers and adaptable grasses. A permanent orchard and vegetable garden should not be overlooked. The farmer who does these things will be interested in the community as a whole and will take an active part in community life.

It will require several years' time to get this improvement program over on most farms and it is well that a definite plan for these changes be made and carried out with determination. Most of the improvements involve only the expenditure of labor. Jobs of this nature will be undertaken first, then as conditions improve and the farm income justifies the jobs requiring funds should be carried out.

It is not reasonable to expect that a tenant farmer will be particularly concerned to see that these things are done on the farm he is renting and it is high time that a lot of farm owners stopped handing their farmsteads as if they were merely tenants on their own farms.

It will require determination and persistence to carry out such an improvement plan as this but the results attained will justify all efforts involved.

Sunday School Lesson

Pictures of Silver

By BEULAH K. HICKS

Mark 1:1-10, 15-18

Behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just and having salvation.—Zech. 9:9.

The people in Jerusalem, restless and dissatisfied with their civil and religious leaders and looking for the coming Messiah, one day glimpsed a procession winding down from the slope of Olivet; heard distant echoes across the valley that sounded like hosannas to a king.

A great crowd, with hope flaming in their hearts, rushed out of the gates of the city; down into the valley of Kidron and up the slope to meet this procession.

What a triumphal march; that great throng of people; that met, singing, "Hosanna," which means literally "save us"; and spreading a carpet of mats quickly woven from the branches of trees in front of Jesus, who sat on a colt.

Jesus, now for a brief time, the Christ, was proclaiming his kingdom by riding a colt, "whereon never man sat."

Julius Caesar entered Rome in a car drawn by 40 elephants, Mark Anthony in one to which lions were harnessed. "But the King of Kings came to Jerusalem, lowly and sitting on a colt."

In the Old Testament days the ass was considered a royal animal; associated with stories of the great men and a symbol of peace.

Sholt, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just and having salvation; lowly and riding upon an ass, and upon the foal of an ass.—Zech. 9:9.

"Jesus went into the temple." But the quiet of prayerful silence was broken by the men who sold animals and birds for sacrifices; the men who exchanged temple shekels for money and gained great profits; by the people who took short cuts from Jerusalem through the farms and villages on the Mount of Olivet.

Jesus cast all these people out and taught them.

"My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

How much more the church today means to that individual who can regard it as a house of prayer, where they can enjoy a close communion with the risen Saviour, singing glad hosannas to the King of Kings; renewing spirit and strength for the coming days to work in the Master's vineyard.

"All hail the power of Jesus' name; Let angels prostrate fall; Bring forth the royal diadem And crown him Lord of All."

Let angels prostrate fall; Bring forth the royal diadem And crown him Lord of All."

Let angels prostrate fall; Bring forth the royal diadem And crown him Lord of All."

The HAMILTON BEACH FOOD MIXER DOES IT better, faster AND easier

The new Hamilton Beach Food Mixer makes food preparation a pleasure. It saves ingredients, reduces dish washing and eliminates tiresome hand work. It mixes all kinds of batter—fluffs salad whites—whips cream—beats candies—mixes salad dressing—mashes potatoes—juices fruits and, with extra attachments now available, grinds meat—peels potatoes—slices, shreds or chops vegetables and grinds coffee. . . . Ask to see one of these new Mixers—you can't realize just how good they are until you watch one work.

Whips Cream

Whipping cream is a cinch. Just put the cream in the bowl, turn on the switch and go about your other work. The cream whips by itself.

Mixes Drinks

Malted milks, fruit drinks or any kind of concoction you desire can be quickly and easily prepared. Just prepare the ingredients and press the switch. It's that simple.

Portable

CAN BE USED ANYWHERE

One of the mixer's big points—it is easily portable. You can carry the mixing part around and use it anywhere there is a convenience outlet. You'll find it mighty handy.

Following luncheon, concert was the interesting diversion.

Compiling Interesting Books
The Christian Science Monitor workers held their regular Thursday afternoon session with eight members in attendance, each of whom worked on a classified book of clippings.

Several of these books have already been made and presented various organizations in Eastland. Mrs. Agnes Harwood Doyle is compiling one on aviation, and this will be placed either in the public library or Chamber of Commerce for the benefit of the public.

Another interesting clippings book is made up of metaphysical articles and hymnal notes which will be placed in the Christian Science reading room.

Still another is being compiled of a diversified collection of poems, in preparation for the high school library.

The books are of great value as reference works of a modern and up-to-date nature.

which the talent of the school was presented to an appreciative audience that filled the auditorium and the balconies for this complimentary occasion.

Handsome printed programs were handed out by Mrs. Frank Crowell and Mrs. D. S. Eubanks, stationed at the doors.

The program opened with the West Ward school song, followed by Brahms' "Cradle Hymn," by the harmonica band; with Lavelle Hendrick as director, and Mrs. A. E. Herring, accompanist.

Reading, "Railroad Crossing," by the rhythm band, glee club and harmonica band, with Mrs. Hunter at piano, was a splendid climax to the very praiseworthy program.

The faculty is to be congratulated upon the beauty and smoothness of the music festival, a sincere compliment to Eastland's Music Week program.

Thursday Afternoon Club Final Program
The Thursday Afternoon Study club held their final program of this season at yesterday's meeting, in community clubhouse, when Mrs. W. A. Whitley was hostess and chairman for the afternoon.

Lovely bouquets of roses and larkspur were effectively employed in decoration of the clubroom. The business session was conducted by the president of the club, Mrs. B. M. Collier. Following the usual business routine, the chair announced a called meeting to be held at 9 a. m., next Thursday at home of president, when annual reports of officers will be presented and the rounding up of the year's business completed.
