TRUSTFUL WAITING: Our soul waiteth for the Lord: He is our help and our shield.—Psalm 33: 20.

GOVERNOR BRYAN PERMITS BEER BILL TO BECOME A LAW

Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska permitted a bill to legalize 3.2 beer in dry Nebraska, effective next Aug. 9, to become a law without his signature. He furnished the generous alibi: "I feel it is my official duty to permit the bill to become a law without my approval subject to the action that those opposing the bill may feel it their duty to take."

If William Jennings Bryan were in the land of the living, legalized beer in Nebraska would have sent his heart to the grave for a second time. Nomination of James M. Cox for president in 1920 sent the heart of the "prince of peace" to the grave after he had declared that the democrats had named a presidential nominee on a beer keg platform. Governor Bryan would like to go to the senate of the United States to fill the vacancy caused by the death of R. B. Howell, republican, months ago. Nebraska has managed to get along with one senator since the passing of Howell. After the adjournment of the Nebraska legislature, the governor may resign. A democratic lieutenant-governor will take his place and then perhaps Brother Charlie will be given the right to sport a senatorial toga.

CONGRATULATION TO LAWMAKERS OF TEXAS

County home rule is on the way in Texas. Place it in the record of Texas history that the senate adopted the conference report on county home rule. Place it in the record that the house had already adopted it. As enacted the amendment applies to counties of 62,000 and over. It was a splendid victory for those who believe in county-city government, sweeping reduction in the cost of local units of government and placing Texas on a higher plane and it is to be hoped a higher efficiency at a greatly reduced cost. Now it is for the qualified voters to make the amendment a part of the organic law.

Kenny, the recently elected president of the Thursday Afternoon Study club, announced her list of appointive officers, and standing committees, at the last business session of the club, held in a called meeting, yesterday morning, at the home of the retiring club president, Mrs. B. M. Collie.

The session was opened by Mrs. Collie and the regular business routine presented in formal procedure. Reports of all officers and standing committees were submitted, showing all debts paid, money treasury, and an unusually good club year record, with average attendance of 25 out of 30 members present each club meeting.

Mrs. Grady Owen was elected to active membership in club. The membership roll is now full and several are on the waiting list.

Mrs. C. U. Connelley tendered her resignation as club member at this time. The resignation was accepted with regret.

Mrs. Kenny made a delightful talk along the lines of the work for next year, and stressed the need for co-operation, in all lines of club work.

Mrs. Kenny was elected delegate to the sixth district convention to be held in Sweetwater in April, and Mrs. E. Roy Townsend elected alternate.

Mrs. B. M. Collie was elected delegate to the state federation convention in November, and Mrs. Grady Pipkin, alternate. A rising vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, Mrs. B. M. Collie, for her splendid administration, and the many good things she had brought into the club life.

The sixth district president, T. F. W. C., Mrs. J. M. Perkins, presented a personal gift to Mrs. Collie, a large, handsome flowering plant.

A letter received from Mrs. Wilbourne B. Collie (who is with her husband, Senator Collie in Austin), which was read, expressed the writer's appreciation of the club work, and congratulated the club on the honors received at Midland convention; and on the sixth district president being chosen from the Thursday club; and expressed appreciation for Mrs. Jackson's club articles, which she considered most interesting.

Mrs. B. M. Collie, in formal measure, stated the club had received splendid support in publicity throughout the year, and expressed personal appreciation and thanks to the Eastland Telegram.

Now that the house leaping season is over, a survey by the gas company reveals that customers pay more than half of their entire year's gas bill in only four months of the year. The survey of gas customers' accounts in this vicinity, according to Frank V. Williams, division manager of the Community Natural Gas Co., further shows that between 60 and 80 per cent of the customers use so little gas during the long hot period that they fail to pay for the cost of service rendered during these months. The average amount received by the company in 1932 was $46.63 per customer for a year's service, or less than 13 cents a day per customer. This is arrived at by dividing the total revenue by the total number of customers.

Gas Consumers Pay Half of Gas Bill In 4 Months

This average bill for each month in the year is as follows: January $6.73; February $6.09; March $5.63; April $4.26; May $2.54; June $2.15; July $1.94; August $1.88; September $1.98; October $2.66; November $4.39; December $6.38. # DARLING FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MONICA O'DARE, 29 and beautiful, is in love with DAN CARROLL, heir to a local fortune. They are secretly engaged. BILL O'DARE worries his mother by planning to marry the beautiful girl who has not yet got her divorce.

SANDRA LAWRENCE, who pretends to be Monica's friend, is trying to win Dan from her. Sandra discharges two servants and they try to kidnap her. She escapes. Dan's mother and sister plan to trip to Wyoming and ranch. Sandra is to accompany them. Dan does not want to go but finally is persuaded.

MISS JUSTICE COREY, an old friend of Dan's, is invited to Europe with her. CHARLES EASTON, newcomer to town, pays Monica attentions. She is not interested, waiting and waiting for a letter from Dan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVIII
SANDRA said, "You've been awfully sweet to me, Danny. Her voice broke a little on the words. She was leaning against the fireplace, the sweep of gray stone behind her throwing into high relief the perfect contour of her honey colored head. The flames from the big logs threw shadows on the blue velvet lounging pajamas she wore and Dan thought, quite idly, that she made a graceful picture. He was in riding clothes, casual and smartly western even to the big handkerchief knotted about his throat. They were alone—except for the Chinese servants. His mother and the rest of the party had gone to see a picture show at Benning, eight miles away.

"It's all right," he said rather awkwardly. "Glad to do anything I could. You had a rotten time of it and you've been a good little soldier."

"Do you honestly think so, Dan?" Her eyes shone. This was the praise she wanted above all else. "Of course I do," Dan reflected that it was something of an effort, supplying Sandra with the moral courage she needed. Only this morning his mother had said to him firmly, "You've simply got to pour confidence into that poor nervous child, son. She's splendid but she had a shock and it is our duty to see her through this bad time."

Ever since the kidnapping Sandra had been having "bad headaches" and "wretched nights." It was not, she said with a charmingly patient smile, at all like her to go to pieces this way. The others agreed and pointed out how brave she had been through the dreadful experience itself. Now—well, Sandra needed Dan to lean on, needed him at her side when they rode. She seemed perfectly content, perfectly happy when he was murmuring in her ear, when they sat at table, side by side.

"You're awfully good for me," she would say softly with a sideways glance at him. Dan felt, in a puzzled way, that he was committing himself to something without knowing what it was all about.

"Sure you didn't want to see that picture?" he said now, hoping to change the subject.

"No, honestly," Sandra said with pretty eagerness. "I'm perfectly content—perfectly—just to sit here and talk. Isn't it cozy?"

DAN agreed, stuffing his pipe and setting himself in the big leather chair opposite.

"Just like," giggled the girl in blue velvet, "just like old married folks." She shrugged her shoulders and murmured delicately, "I'm not, Dan. I don't know what's got into me lately—I somehow I seem to be changing. This time last year I thought of nothing but tearing around. I was in Monte Carlo in October—having the most wonderful time. And now—"

Dan prompted her. "And now what?"

"Well, I seem to be perfectly contented with the simplest sort of things. Books and good friends—"

Her limpid gray eyes besought him to understand.

Dan, sensing dangerous ground, said gruffly, "What about Monte Carlo? Did you have a good time there? Father wouldn't take us when we were over. Said it was a gambling hell and he didn't want us to go near it."

"Oh, Dan, how quaint!" Her laugh rippled. "I can't imagine—"

She broke off suddenly to say quickly that of course his father was a dear—so upright—so charming—but Dan had to admit he was a bit old-fashioned.

"I'd love to show you the place," she said with enthusiasm. "Oh, the times I had on the Riviera last autumn! It was all too marvelous. There was a count who rushed me frantically. Honestly, Danny, I almost took him up. He was the best looking thing! And there were two Englishmen—don't you adore the British?" she broke off to inquire.

"Can't say I do," said the man. "Considering that my forebears came from County Sligo, I'm not so crazy about them."

"Well, I do—simply adore them. You're rather like an English country gentleman yourself, Dan. Big and taciturn—and handsome."

"Oh, cut it, won't you?" growled Dan, pleased in spite of himself. Sandra's light laugh rippled again. "I never saw such a boy," she declared. "Just a great big bear. That's what he is!"

DAN grinned, reflecting it wasn't so bad to have Sandra talk that way to him when there was no one else around. Honestly she was kind of cute when you got right down to it. Entertaining. And she didn't seem to have any moods—was always bright and charming. As his mother had said, Sandra had had a great many advantages. She could chatter French in a way to excite Dan's envy and alarm since he had never mastered the college course in the language. She indicated that her German was excellent also and that she managed to make herself perfectly understood in Italian. Dan wouldn't know about that. But it did seem that Sandra did everything well. She rode and swam "like a streak," Dan said. She played a marvelous game of contract. She could sing. She had taken tap dancing and fencing lessons in New York last year. No doubt about it, the man who married Sandra would have a beautiful and accomplished wife. That was the way Dan still thought of her—as some other man's prospective wife. Never for an instant had he seriously considered her as his own.

She left his pulses unstirred. All her pretty ways, her exquisite clothes, her charming impertinence were lost on him in that respect. As an onlooker he admired her performance quite impersonally. But it was Monica, he reflected, whom he really loved.

"She's so darned sweet," Dan thought to himself now, forgetting the beautiful girl here beside him in the intimacy of the warm room.

Dan, holding his temper in leash with an effort, asked why.

"Oh, I don't know," Sandra narrowed her eyes. "You want—well more excitement if you ask me. And of course in a wife you want passion—experience. Poor dear Monica is pretty, of course, but she's a frightfully unsophisticated. She's not going your way, you wild, big bad man, you!"

Dan, hot, uncomfortable, stung with resentment he scarcely knew how to put into words and also by an annoying conviction that he was unequal to the situation was on the verge of saying something which would have, as he later told himself, "given the whole show away." But just at that moment the group from the picture show broke in talkative, hungry, tired. The Calnese boy brought sandwiches from the kitchen. They all sat around for an hour or two, chatting and laughing. There was no further opportunity for a tete-a-tete.

As the party broke up for the night Mrs. Cardigan detained her son in the hall.

"My big boy's making me very happy these days," she said, no handsome, automatic face creasing itself into a smile. And then she struck dismay to Dan's heart by adding, "And he's making someone else very happy, too."
