FINANCIAL AID FOR VALLEY CONTROL

A Washington correspondent in his daily review of events predicts inclusion of the lower Rio Grande valley flood control project in President Roosevelt's $3,000,000,000 public works program appears almost certain, following Secretary Cordell Hull's recommendation that the proposed emergency work be approved by Budget Director Lewis Douglas for incorporation in the program.

The budget commissioner has indicated that he is ready to accept the proposed project. According to the plans outlined, approximately $1,000,000 would be spent immediately to complete the emergency flood protection of the valley, with future expenditures to bring the total cost to approximately $4,700,000.

Self-liquidating projects are the ones which would be put across in the public works program. These projects afford employment to labor at living wages "until good times roll in again," and in addition to this it will be money well invested.

FARM MORTGAGES AND THEIR HOLDERS

According to Henry Morgenthau, Jr., federal farm board chairman, insurance companies hold about 23 per cent of the farm mortgage debt of the nation of approximately $8,500,000,000.

Speaking of the new law, it was explained that when a mortgage holder accepts the scale down price, and amount in bonds less than the face of the mortgage taken in exchange, he would not be permitted to take a second mortgage for any part of the debt. Paul Bestor, federal farm loan commissioner, said the purpose of the act is that the farmer borrower "shall get the benefit of any reduction in principal that may be made by this process." Well, machinery is moving, and the plan will be given the acid test. If it is a failure, then another plan will be substituted.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

Michigan has a democratic governor and a democratic legislature. The legislature ratified the child labor amendment to the constitution. This happened when the house completed action by a vote of 2 to 25, the senate having previously given its approval.

Someday it may be possible to keep children out of the sweatshops and many of the factories and the mines of America. It is a tough problem at best, but it is a human problem and in future a partial solution is certain to come. Evolution is the eternal order of life and living and in its flight the evolutionary eagle overturns governments, changes civilizations and eliminates all structures, economic or otherwise, of dead ages.

Drastic measures are required if the vicious circle of over-taxation, stifled enterprise and unemployment is to be broken, but it can't be done by drastic economy which takes buying power away from millions of people.

People are intensely interested in reading newspaper advertisements when what they have to spend must be carefully spent, because the ads tell them where to find the bargains.

Every city has a few men who are only half human when it comes to cooperating in building the home city. They might change and become nearly human and believe in the home city.

The success of a business is to a large extent dependent on public sentiment toward a business or articles of merchandise. Newspaper advertising brings favorable attention to a business.

A man who doesn't know where he is going seldom gets anywhere.

BEER AND BIERS. A physician, in relating his experience with beer drinkers, said: "My attention was called to the insidious effects of beer, when I began examining for life insurance. I passed as unusually good risks five Germans, young business men, who seemed in the best of health and to have superb constitutions. I was amazed to see the whole five drop off, one after another, with what ought to have been mild and easily curable diseases. On comparing my experience with that of other physicians, I found that they were all having similar luck with confirmed beer drinkers. My practice since has been confirmation upon confirmation."

Lubricated Gas Now Offered By All Gulf Stations

HOUSTON, May 29.—Lubricated gasoline, a distinct innovation in motor fuels, was announced today by the Gulf Refining Company through O. H. Carlisle, district sales manager. The new product is the result of extensive experimentation in the Gulf Refining Company laboratories, and the answer to the problems presented by lubrication engineers by the increased demand of the motoring public for high speed motors.

The new product is being marketed under the slogan "That Good Gulf Gas—Now Lubricated" at no extra cost. Mr. Carlisle pointed out salient features of the new gas, according to Mr. Carlisle, correct lubrication of the valve seats and top of the valve stem, which tends to prevent dryness and pitting of valves; plus lubrication to the upper part of the cylinder walls, thereby reducing wear on cylinders and pistons as well as on rings.

Through use of lubricated gasoline it is now possible to design motors with smaller clearance between piston and cylinder wall and to use tighter-fitting oil rings, in some cases two oil rings are used, all of which reduces crank motor oil consumption.

Ease of starting with lubricated gasoline is believed assured by the fact that when combustion chambers are flooded with lubricated gasoline in choking the motor, fires are less apt to stick, while use of "That Good Gulf Gasoline Now Lubricated" assures longer life for certain parts of the motor such as valves, guides and piston assembly.

With reference to the lubrication of gasoline, Mr. Carlisle says C. B. Veal, research manager of the Society of Automotive Engineers, as follows: "We are now facing a rather new type of automobile engine... a tendency for the past few years has been to increase the speed of our engines."

At first we encountered excessive oil consumption above certain critical speeds, but blow-by and other features of ring and piston functioning have so improved to prevent excessive oil consumption even at the high speeds common... personal experience and reports from others lead us to believe that some of these deficiencies may come close to experiencing a deficiency in oil supply at moderate speeds."

"If the oil supply actually fails, I agree that lubricated fuels would not solve the problem, but some of these new engines are being close to the danger point of the meagerness of the oil supply at moderate speeds it seems reasonable that a lubricated fuel would offer a sufficient panacea to bring about satisfactory car operation."

In Germany and England lubricated gasoline has been used widely for as long as two years with notable success, Mr. Carlisle pointed out. Also, the lubrication of motor boards is taken care of through mixing lubricating oil with gasoline. Many large truck and gas operators have been using lubricated gasoline for some time though it was necessary for them to purchase a proper oil to mix with their gasoline. Most car manufacturers recommend mixing lubricating oil with gasoline during at least the first 2,000 miles of driving the new car."

"I would like to state," Mr. Carlisle said, "that in using 'That Good Gulf Gasoline—Now Lubricated,' automobile owners may be assured of correct special upper-lubrication under normal driving conditions and at the ordinary driving speeds. No extra charge is made for our new product."

'Young America', New Organization

FORT WORTH.—Young America, an organization of youths unmarked by blue, black or brown shirts, has been created here with President Roosevelt's "Looking Forward" as its text-book.

Young America has a three-point program according to Henderson Van Zandt, 18, freshman in T. C. U. and student of economics: 1. To bring youth to a clearer realization of conditions existing in the state and nation, and the perils that lie ahead if those conditions are not altered. 2. To right injustices and the wrongs. 3. To create for youth a foundation of practical as well as theoretical knowledge by which to judge the differences of the social, political and economical order.

"Old, white-headed leadership has failed us. We must find new leaders who are progressive in their policies. We have in this nation resources which would make everyone happy if we could apply them in such a way as to have fair distribution," young Van Zandt pointed out.

He hopes the movement will spread throughout the state and nation.

Aged Mayor Drinks Ocean Water Daily

SANTA CRUZ, Cal.—The old saying of the shipwrecked sailor, "Water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink," fails to hold true in the case of Mayor Fred Swanton of Santa Cruz.

The mayor, who is nearly 70 years old, but looks about 45, has been drinking ocean water for many years. He attributes his healthy old age to it. Swanton drinks a glass of ocean water every day as a tonic.

He is planning a trip to Europe this summer, and will take a big bottle of ocean water with him to be used on the continent. On shipboard he doesn't anticipate much trouble obtaining his daily glass of salt water.

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Ickes caused another earthquake in California when he decreed that the name Boulder Dam should be restored and Mr. Hoover's name be dropped. Opinion here is that if anyone's name should be honored it is Hiram Johnson's, for it was Hiram who saw the bill through to victory after several weary years of fighting. The bill was signed by President Coolidge, not Mr. Hoover.

The Interior secretary's recall of Louis R. Glavis to the government service calls to mind Mr. Glavis's controversy with Secretary of the Interior Ballinger 23 years ago, in connection with Cunningham land frauds in Alaska. Glavis, who ferreted out the frauds, could get no action from Ballinger, and appealed over his chief's head directly to President Taft. Gifford Pinchot, then national forester, joined in the scrap and both he and Glavis were dismissed. It was an unpleasant episode that helped to defeat Taft in 1912. Ickes belonged to the Progressive crowd in those days, and still holds fast to the faith that is in him. Hence Glavis's return to the interior department.

When the Senate passed a bill the other day providing that in future the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should make no loans to corporations paying any of its officials a salary of more than $17,500, the life insurance, bank and railroad lobbyists turned out in force to block the measure. They didn't need any coaching as to the advisability of such action.

Some of the top-notchers in these borrowing corporations receive annual salaries ranging all the way from $75,000 to $200,000. The small fry in these organizations get all the way from $25,000 to $60,000 a year. Naturally, if corporations seeking government aid can afford to pay such fabulous salaries in these days, a senator cannot be blamed for thinking they have small claim on the government for financial help.

I almost forgot to mention Secretary Ickes' scrap with the big cement boys. Ickes called for bids to furnish 400,000 barrels of cement to be used at Boulder Dam. Ten of the leading companies offered the same bid—$1.29 a barrel. That was 20 cents a barrel more than cement was selling for six weeks earlier. Ickes charged that there was collusion in the bidding and complained to the Federal Trade commission. He said that before the government would accept such a price it would manufacture its own cement. Inasmuch as nearly 4,000,000 barrels of cement will be used in constructing Boulder Dam, that is quite an item to the taxpayers, and it looks now as if it is the cement boys' next move.

Ickes' contention is that the job should have been done by government engineers. That proposal was turned down by Mr. Hoover and Secretary Wilbur, who insisted that the contract be given to a private firm. This helps to explain why the name Boulder Dam was restored.

Radio Corporation reports that its wholly owned subsidiaries had a gross income last year of $67,361,142.55 and that after providing some $6,000,000 for fixed charges the operations for the year resulted in a net loss of $1,133,585.65.

In its effort to build up the biggest monopoly in the world, RCA made some contracts that turned out bad, and all its profits for several years have gone to liquidating those and fighting and settling suits which have been brought against it. In Radio-Keith-Orpheum alone RCA has $16,355,558 invested.

Choosing between RCA and General Electric, Owen D. Young, founder of RCA, has elected to remain with GE, and accordingly resigned as chairman of the executive committee and a director of RCA. This action was made necessary by the consent decree dissolving RCA as a monopoly. Young could not serve in both organizations, it had been ruled.

As this is being written, Washington is still talking of President Roosevelt's master-stroke in sending his appeal to 54 nations for world disarmament. It was a good piece of statesmanship and was timed to give Hitler an opportunity to revise his plans. Hitler's wholehearted pledge with certain reservations regarding the Versailles Treaty and equality for Germany in armaments, came as a surprise here.

One Texas Movie 'Natural' Is Lost

ARCHER CITY, Texas.—A roaring, seething and spectacular movie "natural" was lost to cinema fandom when a gang of bootleggers, a sheriff's posse, 300 hounds, a squadron of fox hunters, 100 Jersey cattle, three coyotes, a number of jackrabbits, several jugs of "white milk" and a quantity of "three-point-two" became inextricably embroiled on the dusty plain near here one recent moonlight night.

The fox hunters, participants in the program of the Texas Fox and Wolf Hunters' convention, were following the hounds in search of game. The Jerseys were seeking peace and grass. The posse was on the trail of bootleggers, and the bootleggers were looking for refuge.

All came together on the Abercrombie and Taylor ranch. For a time no one knew who was bootlegger, officer or hunter. Each element sought to disentangle itself.

The net result was three coyotes for the hunters, the illicit liquor for the posse, an extension of liberty for the bootleggers, and a stampeding herd of cattle.

DARLING FOOL

By MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 MONNIE O'DARIE, beautiful and young, snails for Europe with her friend, MISS ANSTICE COREY, to try to forget DAN CARDBAGAN who Monnie believes has lied her for SANDRA WRENCE in New York before sailing Monnie encountered ALTHUR MACKENZIE, a middle-aged man of wealth. She meets him again on the boat and he obviously admires her.

Monnie is poor and the trip is a Cinderella adventure for her. Back home she tells her mother, sister and two brothers, CHARLES, EUSTACE, handsome newcomer to town, sends her new child and comes to see her at the station.

Meanwhile Sandra is striving to win Dan and taking advantage of Monnie's absence. Sandra tells Dan that Monnie and Eustace are engaged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XXVI
 CHARLES' thick letter awaited Monnie at the hotel in London. Curious now her heart leaped at the sight of it. It must be, she told herself, that she expected from Charles some news of Dan. Yes, that was the reason. The square white envelope, the bold, irregular black handwriting were eloquent of Charles' personality. The letter, too, was filled with characteristic phrases.

"Miss Anstice's voice aroused her. 'I said, my dear, that if we are going to make the Cheshire Cheese for luncheon we'd better hurry. That must be a very fascinating letter. I've read it three times and I've been speaking to you for five minutes without getting your attention.'"

Monnie blushed. "Fibber! I only just finished reading it the first time."

"Well, anyhow we've got to be starting. I'm perishing for food. The Tower of London was very interesting but I'm a wreck. I said I would do all the tourist things and I'm doing them though it's hard on me."

Monnie tucked Charles' letter in the bottom of her overnight bag among her creams and brushes. He'd said he missed her—but he hadn't said a word about Dan. Gossip about home, about Kay and her mother and the boys. The Watermans had given a party on the 17th and Kay had looked lovely in some yellow thing. Kay and Charles! Well, that would be nice. Why did her heart suffer that queer little pang at the thought? It was Dan whom Monnie wanted—Dan whom she loved! Pride was all very well. It sustained you sometimes but not when you were aching desperately for news of the loved one. Why hadn't Charles mentioned Dan? Probably no, like everyone else, thought Monnie had gone away to forget about Dan. Well, every one was right—only the plan didn't work as well as she'd hoped it would.

"COMING, Miss Anstice!" Monnie crowded her small green hat, the one Miss Anstice had insisted on buying for her in that Bond street place, over her bronze curls. She looked well, she told herself critically. Quite the young-woman-about-London. A year ago if anyone had told her a single one of these fairy-tale happenings were to take place she'd have laughed at him. Well, here she was thousands of miles away from home, going to smart places, eating rich food, being feted. Yes, feted! Hadn't Arthur Mackenzie given a dinner party for her the night before at the Ritz? Wasn't he taking her this very evening to dine and dance at one of the new night places—the Club Cavendish or something like that?

Monnie liked Arthur Mackenzie now—wasn't afraid of him any more. Maybe his dark eyes had lost that predatory look which at first had frightened her. He played big brother to her these days. Oh, she knew he was spoiled—she could see that but it didn't matter. He was inclined to pout, quite like a big baby, at the first hint of not getting his own way.

"Women have spoiled me, Monica," he had told her, half laughing, the night before as they danced. "You're the first one who ever kept me from having my own way in all things."

That was funny, Monnie thought—funny that she, a small town girl, should be the one to humble this king of finance. What he had been speaking about in particular was her stubbornness in standing up against him when he'd wanted to buy her that fur wrap yesterday morning. He had come upon her and Miss Anstice, trailing along Bond street looking in this window and that, and had insisted on accompanying them upon the foray to buy the hat.

The mannequin in the fur wrap had strolled past them at Mackenzie's bidding. Monica had crowded softly at sight of the wrap—deep, soft fur, cuddling the thin cheeks of the blond English girl who wore it.

"Splendid for foggy weather, eh?" Mackenzie had asked with a twinkle.

"Oh, excellent for that, sir," the saleswoman had chirped, and the mannequin had given Monnie an envious sidelong glance.

"Try it on, Monica," the man had urged under Miss Anstice's clear, critical gaze.

"Nonsense." She had been very sturdy about it. "No use making myself unhappy. I should be remembering always how it felt."

He had smiled again at that. "But I'd like you to have it. Little remembrance of this trip." Monica had not needed to look at Miss Anstice to know that the price of the wrap was pressed together even more firmly. Her own conscience had risen in protest.

"Sorry. I couldn't possibly—"

She had thought with a flash of amazement that the glance the mannequin gave her held something like contempt.

AFTERWARD Miss Anstice had been downright strange about it. She had said in a dimly regretful tone, "What a pity you couldn't have accepted it from him, Monnie." At the girl's exclamation of surprise she had hastened to add, "Naturally I know you couldn't! But, after all, he's so nice. Take such an interest, and you would have looked so lovely in that. Quite dazed, Bolvedere."

Monnie gave the older woman a bug. "Miss Corey, I'm surprised at you!"

"I know. I'm surprised at myself. But I guess I've got my values a bit mixed on this trip. I'm getting soft with so much luxury."

Tonight Monnie was dining with Mackenzie alone. Miss Anstice was to go to the theater with some friends who lived in that Kensington Gardens and Mackenzie was to pick Monnie up at 8. At half past seven she was ready and restless. Miss Anstice, called for early by the Mr. and Mrs. Richardson from Cincinnati, had gone.

The girl strolled to and fro, picking up a magazine, laying it down again. She glanced at the pocket clock on the mantelpiece. How restless she felt! She wished Mackenzie would come. Then she wouldn't have so much time to think about home—about mother and Kay and the boys, to wonder what they were doing. She was a selfish pig to be away from them all, enjoying this luxury. She would have to make it up to them when she got back. But how? Suddenly, like a black vista, the years yawned before Monnie. What was she going to do with her life? With Dan out of it, she seemed aimless—couldn't make plans.

SHE wrapped the dark velvet cloak around her as the pleasant British voice on the telephone announced Mackenzie's arrival. "You look lovely, as always." He was bowing over her hand. She was whisked into the inevitably luxurious motor car that always attended this man's comings and goings. A soft rug was tucked around her feet. Mackenzie spoke through a tube and the motor purred noiselessly. The car slid forward. Fog held the night without but in the small intimacy of the car the two people sat, warm and enclosed.

"You'll like this place tonight, Monica." He had a pleasant voice, she reflected.

"That's one of the many things I like about you," he continued with gravity. "Your youthful enthusiasm. I've known so many jaded people—sated with life. With you everything's new."

"That's because I haven't been any place before," the girl told him without self-consciousness.

As they sat down at the candle-lit table with an obsequious pair of waiters hovering in attendance, she returned his smile with one of honest liking. How nice this man had been to her! Last night at the party Corinth Faraway had said to her with a curious high laugh, "Artie's taken a great fancy to you. Make the most of it."

And when Monnie had looked at her curiously, the other girl had cried, gratefully, "Oh, don't be a little fool. He's all right, Artie is."

It must be true—the gossip she'd heard—that Corinth and Mackenzie had been in love with each other, although he was almost twice her age. But she was married to someone else now. It didn't seem to matter. "If I'd ever cared for anyone like that," thought Monnie, "I should have the thought of giving him up to someone else."

Suddenly she realized that Mackenzie was studying her intently.

"What is it?" he asked.

"I've a bit of news for you, Monica."

Why did her heart beat faster at the tone?

"I've got to leave tomorrow. Got a cable from the office this afternoon."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" It was true. She would miss this man and his many kindnesses.

He stared at her. "Monnie, I wonder—I want you to come back with me."

Mystery Cave In Miss. Unexplored
 By United Press
 WAYNESBORO, Miss., May 29.—Subterranean wonders, rivaled only by the famous Mammoth Cave and Carlsbad caverns, await adventurous explorers at Pitts Cave, three miles northwest of here.

Situated on the Pitts' plantation, its contrasting natural beauty and legendary treachery provide awesome thrills to visitors. A maze of winding passages, "bottomless" pits, phantomlike stalactites and ghostly vaulted domes add to its mysteries.

Probable unexplored sections of the cave include a long passage said to extend under the Chickasaw River. Tales of men, who entered the long passageway never to return, are told by J. O. Pitts, grandson of the late Dr. J. R. S. Pitts, the original owner.

The Short Route
 Pitts delights in showing visitors through the short route and relating legends connected with the cave.

The entrance, on the side of a hill, resembles somewhat the mouth of a gaping prehistoric monster. A night of steps provided by Mother Nature guides the visitor into a vestibule about 10 feet wide, approximately the same height and extending back into the hill 40 feet.

Forty-five minutes are required to make the trip through the short route. The explorer, after crawling, walking, and using natural stairs and wedging through narrow passages, finally will exit into another vestibule, similar to the one at the entrance.

Indian Legend
 Pitts said an Indian and his dog once explored the long route. The Indian returned but his dog was lost, according to the story. Returning into the cave in search of the animal, the Indian never was seen again, but the dog finally emerged with all the hair gone from his body. The supposition is that the dog's hair was removed by some form of gas which probably killed the Indian.

Later, an uncle of the present Pitts plantation owner equipped himself with a mass of twine and candles, and unwinding the twine explored a portion of the long cave. His string supply ran out when he had gone about three miles and he returned with his eyes and face swollen, probably from the same gas which removed the hair from the Indian's dog.

DUST CARRIED 500 MILES
 By United Press
 BOONVILLE, Mo.,—Heavy winds that picked up dust in western Kansas—more than 500 miles away from here—carried the dirt to Boonville. A recent rain, coming the day following the Kansas dust storm, showered this section with a mud bath.

TO PLANT MORE BEETS
 SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—A 20 per cent increase in sugar beet plantings on land under contract to the Utah-Idaho Sugar company has been reported. Last year there were 80,000 acres in Idaho, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, and South Dakota. The figure this year is 100,000, with most of the acreage in Idaho, Utah and Montana.

Mrs. Hickman and Mrs. McGlamery Entertain
 Mrs. J. E. Hickman and Mrs. Bert McGlamery entertained with a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock, Saturday at the home of Mrs. Hickman, in honor of high school graduates who attend the Methodist Sunday school.

The home was beautifully decorated with bouquets of purple flowers, and the two luncheon tables, laid in gold color linen, and centered with purple larkspur, carried out the graduating class colors, that obtained also in the hand made place cards, of black caps, poised over a white scroll, representing a diploma, and attached to a dainty cluster of the class color flowers.

Places were found by the guests by matching the question given them by the answer on the place card found in the letters forming the word, "Senior."

Between the courses a trick word puzzle was solved and a story contest, called "Love in a Garden," was worked out.

The delicious menu of lamb patties with mint jelly, new potatoes and beans, had second course of carrot salad on lettuce, rolls and iced tea and last course of grape ice and sunshine cake, employing the class colors in purple and gold.

After luncheon, the young people enjoyed writing the life history of a fellow member in which pictures cut from magazines were used to depict certain episodes and entertainments.

This delightful and original affair was attended by Miss Dorris Powell, Senior class sponsor, and the following members of high school graduating class: Misses Florence Perkins, Correne Harris, Hazel Harrell; Richard White, Joe Collins, Ed Mackall, James Turk Dickson, Ralph L. Mackall, Stewart Doss and Conrad Reeves.

Miss Dragoo Honored
 Wilda Dragoo, artist, violinist, pianist, returned Sunday from San Angelo, where she was presented in recital by the College Women's club in concert Friday night.

Following the recital, a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Henry Mayer in honor of Miss Dragoo and her sister and hostess, Mrs. Wanda Dragoo Beall, and Madame Maraches of New York City, an internationally known violinist.

Mrs. Kinnaird and Mrs. Leonard Will Entertain
 Mrs. D. L. Kinnaird and Mrs. Joseph B. Leonard, will entertain with two beautiful affairs this week, in the form of a breakfast-bridge, at 9:30 o'clock, Tuesday morning, at the residence of Mrs. Kinnaird, and a second bridge breakfast Thursday morning at the same hour at the home of Mrs. Leonard.

A different group of friends will be entertained on each occasion.

Booster Class Hears Fine Lesson
 The booster class of the Methodist Sunday school, heard a splendid lesson by Judge W. P. Leslie, on Christian Watchfulness at their meeting Sunday morning.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. W. W. Kelly, president, with prayer and hymn, ensemble, "Blessed Assurance," with Mrs. Neil A. Moore at piano.

Prayer by Ed Willman was followed by the scripture reading. During the business session, it was voted to give $25.00 from the treasury, to apply on the literature debt of the church.

The sum was turned over in care of Neil A. Moore.

Those present: Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Kelly, Mmes. Neil A. Moore, P. L. Crossley, C. G. Stubblefield, Joe C. Stephen; Misses Rosalie Leslie, Jessie Lee Ligon; Judge W. P. Leslie and Ed Willman.

Regular graduation exercises will be held for the class at the close of this program.

The little people will be in the regulation black cap and gown, and will be presented diplomas to show they have finished the kindergarten course. Presentation of diplomas will be made by Mrs. Spencer.

Public is cordially invited to attend.

Charming Entertainment Coming
 The J. R. McLaughlin home will be the scene of a pretty entertainment, Wednesday night, when Keith McLaughlin and co-host, James Pipkin, will entertain with a "Prom and Dance," a number of the young people of Eastland high school.

The guests will be confined to the boys, each of whom will invite his own special "girl friend."

Other teachers who will accompany the party, picture: Mrs. James Horton, superintendent of Sunday school, and Mmes. J. LeRoy Arnold, C. W. Geue, Hubert Jones, J. J. Tabelman, and Miss Mabel Hart.

A camp fire breakfast will include a bacon-egg fry, and other good things to eat.

The members of the Sunday school and teachers have been requested to assemble at the Presbyterian church to make their start for the trip.

Children's Operetta and Commencement Tomorrow Night
 Mrs. Sue G. Spencer will present her Kindergarten, Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock in high school auditorium, in a charming, tuneful and whimsical little operetta, entitled, "The Sugar Plum Tree," which is based on a poem by Eugene Fields, and characters taken from poems, by Robert Louis Stevenson and James Whitcomb Riley.

The clever little production is in two acts, opening with the Picknickers Scene, Carolyn Kelly, Norma Jean Maynard, Clifton Horn, Bennie Houle, James Bigby, and L. Y. Morris Jr., in the introduction.

"Hunter Lads," J. D. Fulcher and Kathryn Grisham, "Hunter Lassies," Emalee Hart and Merle Hodge Deck.

Characters in play, present: Shuffle Shoon, Austin Williamson, Raggedy Man, James Cook; Uncle Doc, Cone Johnson; Captain, Bobbie Freeman; The Dolly, Charles Layton; "Orphan Annie" Tommie Jeanette Taylor.

The Fairies: Mary Nell Cates, Beth Reineman, Clara Mae Cook, and Dorothy Lou Johnson, and The Squidgicum Squees, by four small boys.

Simple Romances Still Excel Says Mary Pickford
 Cycles may come and cycles may go, but the age-old love story of the man and woman who fight their way to happiness together, overcoming all obstacles, remains basically the greatest and most satisfactory screen theme.

So declared Mary Pickford, who considered more than 30 vehicles including stage plays, best-selling novels and screen originals, before she chose "Secrets," which comes to the Lyric for Monday and Tuesday.

"Secrets" is a simple love story, according to Miss Pickford.

There's an elopement to foil a rich American father who wants his daughter to wed a titled Englishman instead of a poor clerk; a young couple battling the hardships of western ranch life; battles with cattle rustlers; the rearing of a family; eventual prosperity, clouded by the husband's affair with another woman; a loyal, devoted wife who refuses to let threatened scandal wreck their happiness.

These are the ingredients with which Miss Pickford and her supporting cast, including Leslie Howard opposite the star, Director Frank Borzage, Scenarist Frances Marion and a technical staff have made "Secrets."

Railroads are planning a new high-speed train that can run 100 miles an hour. Now let's see a motorist beat one of those trains to a grade crossing.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED

TODAY'S MAGIC FEATURE
 Coffee—Hot and Delicious —Out of Thin Air!

LAST NIGHT I SAW A MAGICIAN SERVE 100 CUPS OF COFFEE TO THE AUDIENCE OUT OF A HUGE COFFEE POT THAT HE PRODUCED FROM NOWHERE.

HERE'S THE 99th CUP AND STILL SOME LEFT. ANYONE ELSE?

I HAD A CUP OF THE COFFEE MYSELF, SO I KNOW IT WASN'T A TRICK.

YOU HAVE BEEN FOOLED AGAIN, ELLIE.

—THE COFFEE POT WAS TELESCOPED INTO THE TOP OF THE TABLE. THE COFFEE WAS IN A TANK UNDER THE STAGE. AN ASSISTANT PUMPED IT UP THROUGH A RUBBER TUBE IN THE LEG OF THE MAGICIAN'S STAND.

POT IS RAISED TO TOP OF TABLE WHEN MAGICIAN LIFTS CLOTH.

SO THAT'S THE TRICK! HAVE A CIGARETTE?

I'M SORRY, BUT I DON'T ENJOY THAT BRAND. THEY TASTE SO FLAT!

TUBE TO ROOM BELOW

DO THEY REALLY TASTE FLAT? I THOUGHT THEY WERE SUPPOSED TO BE MILD.

MILD? TRY A CAMEL AND YOU'LL GET MILDNESS AND BETTER TASTE, TOO.

OH, JACK—THIS IS WONDERFUL! WHAT IS IT THOSE ADS SAY: "IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW?"

YES, IT'S THE TOBACCO THAT COUNTS, ELLIE.

ELLIE DIDN'T KNOW THAT SHE HAD ILLUSIONS ABOUT CIGARETTES UNTIL JACK PERSUADED HER TO TRY ONE OF HIS CAMELS. NOW SHE'S A CAMEL FAN, TOO.

IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW
 Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. You'll appreciate the mildness...the flavor...the added pleasure of costlier tobaccos.
