C. W. Hoffman of the firm of Hoffman & Page, returned from Washington Tuesday full of enthusiastic optimism with reference to the future of the independent oil operators over the nation. Mr. Hoffman states that he is solid for federal control. He believes it is the only salvation.

VALUATION OF CURRENCY IS STILL PROBLEM

LONDON, June 22.—The United States turned thumbs down on immediate currency stabilization at the economic conference today, while the dollar dropped rapidly on every important exchange, making new records in abandonment of the gold standard.

GEORGIA ROAD FUND BATTLE GOES TO COURT

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22.—Georgia's spectacular $2,000,000 battle between the governor and the state highway department was carried to federal court today when Captain J. W. Barnett, ousted as chairman of the state highway commission, applied for a federal injunction to restrain activities of Gov. Talmadge and J. P. Witthit, who replaced Barnett as highway commission chairman.

When we hear a business man make that statement unsolicited, we know that his loyalty can never be questioned. That's what it takes to make Eastland... and his kind are the ones that will stay in the middle and ride... regardless of how rough the going some times.

Real cold nights... and terrific hot days, such as we are having now, have a danger point in slowing down vitality. We have come in contact with several people who have severe colds... no doubt due directly to the fact that the relief they seek from the heat of the day by enjoying the cool of the night takes us careless enough to get chilled, hence, a first class summer cold slips up on us.

And at the first sign that you have a cold, your doctor should be called because a cold can be serious.

The Fashion Shop, Eastland's latest ladies' ready-to-wear shop, will open a special mid-summer clearance sale Friday. Mrs. Wolf states that everything in the house will be reduced for this special occasion. Coming as it does at a time when most all merchandise is advancing there is no doubt that this sale will be appreciated by the women of Eastland and surrounding community.

This progressive store is a valuable asset to Eastland and deserves the patronage of its people, because they feature exclusive lines of quality found in the most exclusive shops of larger cities, and their prices are always within reach of the average purse. We wish them much success in their business.

Don't forget that Eastland is setting all set to entertain this whole country on July 3-4 with a real big celebration. Everything no admission charge to entertainments. Committees are busy and active. Make all plans to be here. Everybody is welcome.

Senator Wilbourne B. Collie attended a dinner given at Abilene Tuesday night to three legislators of this section of the state as a testimonial of service rendered in the recent session of the Legislature towards reducing the expenses of the state and keeping bills which would add additional tax to the people from being passed.

BRYAN, Texas, June 22.—Fear of mob violence caused a man and two women, brought here Wednesday from Houston, to be viewed by Ervin Conway, 21, in the slaying of his fiancée, Ledelle Hammond, to be transferred from jail here last night.

Conway went to the courthouse yesterday to view the man and the elder of the woman as suspects in the case. The sheriff, who was in another room, could not say today whether Conway identified them or not.

FORT WORTH, June 22.—Two men, one 24 years old and the other 35, were being held here today by police for possible connection with the slaying of Ledelle Hammond, Baylor co-ed, near Bryan.

The men were taken into custody Monday. Last night they volunteered the information that they had robbed a postoffice at Meadow, Texas, three years ago, officers said, and told officers they were ready to go to Leavenworth prison.

Apparent eagerness of the men to get into the federal prison, investigators said, caused officers to decide to check the men's description with those of Miss Hammond's killers. Detectives were communicating today with Bryan officers.

Ferguson May Be a Candidate For U. S. Senator

AUSTIN, June 22.—That former Governor James E. Ferguson may again enter the field of politics personally by running for United States senator against Morris Sheppard, is being heard about Austin.

Liberal forces make no secret of the fact that they were disappointed that Governor Ferguson did not name Congressman Joseph Weldon Bailey to call the wet convention of June 27 to order. They would have welcomed selection of Bailey whom they had hoped to pit against Sheppard.

If James E. Ferguson intends to match a race with Sheppard, the cards were well played to that end. By naming Senator Sheppard and B. Y. Cummings for the rural vote, the governor keeps Bailey out of the spotlight as Sheppard's opponent. Ferguson is outspokenly wet in the coming fight and has announced he will probably make a speaking campaign. If he can focus attention on himself as the chief opponent of the dries, led by Sheppard, he would be a logical candidate in event of a wet victory Aug. 26.

Senator Tom Connally, who will vote dry, has a race coming up before that of Senator Sheppard. A wet victory on Aug. 26 may give him an outstanding opponent. State Senator, Welly K. Hopkins of Gonzales, is mentioned as the possible opponent.

The gubernatorial race more now than ever appears likely to have Attorney General James V. Allred in it. He refuses to discuss it but gets evident pleasure out of the references being made to him as "the next governor."

The list may also contain Mrs. Ferguson as a candidate for reelection though many Ferguson stalwarts have proposed that Speaker Coke Stevenson of Junction be a candidate. If her husband decides to run against Sheppard, it would help his chances for to hold another term as governor.

MITCHELL IS NOT GUILTY OF EVASION

NEW YORK, June 22.—Charles E. Mitchell was found not guilty today on both counts of an indictment charging violation of the income tax laws.

The acquittal of the former chairman of the National City Bank and its affiliates, appeared to make safe from prosecution scores of boom-year millionaires who, on advice of income tax experts and lawyers, followed procedure similar to Mitchell in writing off capital losses to balance incomes and evading tax payments.

The verdict meant that the jury decided Mitchell acted with no intent to defraud when he sold bank shares to Mrs. Mitchell in 1929, and later bought them back; when he failed to list a $666,666 payment from the National City Bank's management fund as income; and when he sold Anaconda Copper stocks to W. D. Thornton, copper magnate, and later bought it back.

Search Started For Spanish Fliers

MEXICO CITY, June 22.—Search of jungle and mountains between Mexico City and the coast was redoubled today for Captain Mariano Marberan and Lieutenant Joaquin Collar, Spanish fliers, missing on a Cuba-Mexico City flight.

Squadrons of military planes were sent out at dawn to fly over the jungle and soldiers and citizens co-operated to run down a score of rumors the plane had been located.

Due here Wednesday, they disappeared after being seen flying in bad weather up the coast.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing the dry forces of Eastland to work against the repeal of the 18th amendment to the federal constitution, has been called for 8:15 o'clock tonight at the Baptist church. Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas will be present, it is stated, and plans will be made to work with the county-wide dry organization perfected in Eastland Tuesday.

Jewish Problems At Rabbi Session

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 22.—The first of a series of sessions will open here this afternoon of the Central Conference of American Rabbis here tonight.

Rabbis from all sections of the United States will attend the conference, which will close June 26, to discuss problems of significance to Jews both in America and abroad.

Of particular importance will be the report of the special committee of the World Jewish congress which was appointed last November to confer with American and foreign Jewish communities and organizations upon the advisability of instituting united counsel and action among Jews of the world with respect to Jewish needs and rights. Recent events in Germany will be stressed.

Highway Contracts Will Be Awarded

AUSTIN, June 22.—Contracts for surfacing and repairing approximately 315 miles of Texas highways to cost $548,462 were awarded Wednesday by the state highway commission.

Another half million dollars worth of maintenance contracts will be let later. Low bidders on surfacing included: For Parker county, 18.7 miles bituminous surfacing on highway 34 through the county, Morgan Construction company, $31,950.

ROGER W. BABSON ISSUES ANOTHER WARNING

In days gone, speaking of the days of high prosperity, and wild living, Roger W. Babson was one of the army of economists who predicted that "prosperity would go on forever." Now Roger W. is in the picture again. Addressing the National Association of Purchasing Agents in the city of Boston, Babson said this was the first year since 1928 that he could bring a message of optimism but he warned of the danger of too much inflation.

Roger used the wrong word. It is not inflation. It is deflation. Roger is wedded to the gold dollar, without revaluation. This nation owes $100,000,000,000. Roger would pay it with a gold reserve of less than $5,000,000,000. Borrowers when their borrowings were advanced, did not receive gold. They were handed the "currency of the country." But back to the warning of the great man. This is what he said: "Public works programs and farm relief measures may open the way for the biggest graft scandal in the United States history and a reaction that is too ugly to contemplate." Of course, it may open the way.

Human nature has not changed. Human greed will go on forever. Human venality, like the poor of the Lord, will be in evidence for all time. Perhaps the watchdogs of the New Deal will prevent the coming of the "biggest graft scandal." It would be well for the public servants in the lookout chair the nation over to be on their guard.

HARVEY FIRESTONE ORDERS A BIG WAGE HIKE

Harvey S. Firestone has announced that all his companies and stores throughout the nation will increase pay of employes 10 per cent "effective today." Firestone has thousands of wage workers on his payrolls. He appears to be an optimist. After a coast to coast trip he landed in the city of New York. He surveyed the field. He declared he found "an unusual revival of business and a spirit of confidence in every part of the West, especially in the agricultural districts." Henry Ford is an optimist. He discovered rainbows in the sky before the speaker of the house of representatives lifted his telescope skyward. Henry is telling it to the American public in the huge advertising campaign he launched in the month of May.

Harvey Firestone and Henry Ford are outstanding supporters of the republican standard bearers last year. They appealed to the American electorate to return Herbert Hoover to the high place he had held four years. His defeat did not result in the two distinguished captains of industry going haywire. They have been converted to the New Deal gospel and their thousands of agents or representatives are out hustling and seeking the buyers of the American world.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

HAROLD B. JOHNSON, president and editor of the Water-town (N. Y. Daily Times, says:

"Newspaper advertising is emerging from the depression with greater appeal than ever before. It requires fire and water, highwater, flood and famine, to bring out staying qualities. During the past four years lineage was cut down, manufacturers and others tried the experiment of eliminating advertising in so many instances, but when the rainbow of hope began to spread across the sky again they lost no time in making their plans to get back into the papers.

"The newspapers of America have never before been subjected to such a test of strength as in the recent past. They emerge strong and vigorous. Their qualities have been demonstrated. If they had been less stable and vigorous during this recent depression, if their appeal to the people as an advertising medium had been less, they would not have survived as the American institution they have so long been in America. It was their great trial and they came through admirably.

"Fortunate that organization, commercial or otherwise, that was able to keep up its advertising throughout the depression. It emerges strongly fortified today. And fortunate indeed is that community or locality that has a strong newspaper that stood up vigorous, alert, unafraid, throughout the depression, to present itself as an avenue of advertising now in this movement of rehabilitation.

"The newspapers contributed more than any other agency toward steadying our people throughout the depression. If it had not been for a free, independent, courageous press that gave the facts and commented honestly we might have gone most anywhere. But we now come out of it all, recognizing in full measure the value of the newspaper during the past four years as an institution of enlightenment, opinion and dissemination of fact, and appreciating the medium it presents for advertising in this period when we are all striving toward rebuilding and for full measure of prosperity again."

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Senator Carter Glass of Virginia will be one of our most outstanding and picturesque national figures as long as he lives.

At the age of 75 this white-haired, fighting little bantam is told by his physician to take things easy and handle himself with care.

But at 1:30 o'clock in the morning you find him holding the Senate late in session, shaking his fist and pouring bitter scorn from the corner of his mouth at a senator who he thinks has reflected on his personal integrity and his courage.

That was the night Congress adjourned and an exciting, dramatic night it was. Quite a few senators in their sixties and seventies had gone home at an early hour, but not Glass. He was one of the Senate conferees who had accepted the president's final compromise on veteran payments and he was there to see the fight through.

SCORES of House members were piled in the rear of the Senate chamber.

The bars had been let down for the gallery fans and hundreds stood in the upper reaches. Attorney General Cummings, Postmaster General Farley—chewing gum—and Dr. Cary Grayson sat in the front row of the family tiers. Even the diplomatic gallery was nearly full.

Huey Long was heard at length about this "outrage" against the veterans. Borah sat in a new costume—blue coat with gray bow tie, gray shirt and gray pants matching. Someone demanded that the floor be cleared of congressmen because they were groaning and mumbering "Vote!"

Tall, Hissing Cutting of New Mexico, from whose 25 per cent limit amendment the conferees had receded, was the one who aroused Glass—in the course of a rather brilliant speech of protest.

Glass thought he had been accused of changing the record. He said he never falsified the record, "even though the senator from New Mexico does." Cutting accused him of taking advantage of his colleagues' love and respect by "insulting them."

THE vote came, the administration won and everyone was starting home as Glass suddenly rose to defend himself and scathingly attack Cutting.

Earlier in the day he had laughed about an encounter with another senator. But now he reached points of bitterness, sarcasm and scorn that few others can reach. He shook with wrath as he pointed his finger at Cutting. He sneered contemptuously at Cutting's insinuation that he had feared the result of his action when Virginia voters heard of it. He hurled back Cutting's assurances of love and affection with the biblical story of the amiable Joab, who kissed Amasa and disemboweled him with a dagger.

The attack wasn't quite deserved, but the picture of old Carter Glass standing there at 1:30 a. m., hurling his barbs, was a dramatic one with which to wind up the session. (Copyright, 1933, NEA Service, Inc.)

Hot Checks Given To Pay Preacher To Marry Couples

By United Press

WELLINGTON, Texas.—The Rev. J. H. McCuiston, "the marrying preacher" of Hollis, across the border in Oklahoma, self-advised as "cheerful at weddings; tender at funerals," has evidence to show that love does indeed conquer all—even a depression.

The gray-haired Baptist preacher who considers performing a wedding ceremony "one of the most noble deeds with which humanity has ever been blessed," found 1932 the best year in his marrying career, with 1933 giving every indication of holding up the pace. Last year Rev. McCuiston joined 124 couples in wedlock, and reported 36 weddings for the first four months of 1933.

He did not note one probable effect of the depression, however—"hot checks" given for fees.

"You wouldn't think a couple would want to start their marriage life by giving a 'hot check,'" he explained. "Well, some of them do."

Not only that—some are willing to ask a preacher to marry them for nothing. During the past two years McCuiston has performed 25 ceremonies for which he got either bad checks or nothing.

But the business, in which McCuiston started some 12 years ago by performing a public wedding ceremony in connection with a tent show, has been fairly good through the years.

He estimates he has performed a total of 861 marriage ceremonies since moving to Hollis. Of that number, 432 were performed since the Texas "gin-marriage" law went into effect four years ago.

Repeat of the law this year, he said, "naturally will hurt my business." Many Texas couples, unwilling to accept the regulations imposed by the law, went over the border to McCuiston to get married.

The "marrying preacher" is also a married preacher—has been for 47 years. He moved to West Texas to do missionary work in the early '80s. During his service in Texas and western Oklahoma he established 28 churches, helped settle and civilize the frontier. Once he was attacked by a pack of wolves as he rode between churches. A rancher heard the pack and appeared in time to save the preacher's life.

His labors in the Hollis territory antedates the town itself. On Jan. 15, 1891, he preached a ser-

McGlamery came down from Eastland Friday night and led the games and folk songs at the entertainment given on the lawn of the Methodist church. Besides the songs and games for entertainment the orchestra from DeLeon furnished some splendid music which was much enjoyed. The members of the missionary society and of the church in general appreciate the help in making this occasion a success and they also appreciate the donations of cream, cake and sandwiches from some who are just friends of the church. The sale of cream, cake, etc., netted $12, which will be applied on general church expenses. We are glad to report that Russell Krapf, who is suffering from a broken neck bone, is improving

BARGAIN BRIDIE

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY BARRETT COLVIN, back in New York after four years, meets 20-year-old ELINOR STAFFORD and falls in love with her. Barrett is 35, wealthy and has made a name for himself as an archeologist. Elinor's beautiful mother, LIDA STAFFORD, has kept the girl in the background, wanting attention for herself. Lida is carrying on a flirtation with VANCE CARTER and is constantly scheming to keep in the good graces of MISS ELLA SEXTON, her husband's aunt, in order to inherit a share of the Sexton fortune. Elinor hates this hypocrisy. Barrett's half-sister, MARCIA RADNOR, is terrified for fear her husband will learn of an unfortunate episode in her past. Years before Barrett shielded Marcia when a youthful romance ended disastrously. Marcia had a son whom Barrett adopted. The boy is nine years old now. Marcia insists that if her husband learns the truth he will never forgive her. HAROLD DEXTER, the boy's tutor, threatens blackmail. Barrett, hating at knowledge of Dexter's past (all of which is bluff), frightens the man into promising he will not make trouble. Barrett takes Elinor Stafford for a drive. Each time he sees her she seems more charming. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She settled on a low stool at his feet.

CHAPTER X BENTWELL STAFFORD sat before the fire, flushed and heavy eyed. The usual decanter and glass were beside him on a small table within easy reach. For the first time that he could remember Elinor had not greeted him as he came in. Although the home-coming had left him hollow it warmed him, too. He hoped that she was out with some young people having a good time. The fact that she had so few good times made his eyes fill with those tears that rise easily from the alcohol. A little stir at the door made him turn to see Elinor, her eyes bright and shining. "Well, child"—he offered in a rasping, low voice after the cough that was habitual. "Dear!" she exclaimed. She came forward swiftly, stooped and kissed him, then settled on a low stool at his feet. Her father studied her. She was beautiful—rarely, undoubtedly beautiful. He didn't see how even the dullest eyes could miss that fact. "And what?" he asked. It was a nightly ritual, one that had started back in the days when it prompted a history of her play hours and of how she had done at lessons. "I had a ride," she replied. She was staring into the fire and trying not to smile. He saw her set her teeth on the lower lip which would turn upward, saw the dreaming languor of her eyes. "Um!" Stafford reached for the decanter to pour another drink. He had always known it would hurt when it came; but he had never sensed the depths of the hurt. And yet he wanted Elinor to fall in love, to be happy and settled in a home of her own. Odd how reason and instinct quarreled! He slipped his bracer, set down the glass and spoke. "And who took you riding?" "Mr. Colvin—Mr. Barrett Colvin." "Thought perhaps you'd gone with Bob Telfair—" "Oh, no!" "Like him, don't you?" "Yes, I like him but—" "BUT what?" Stafford prompted. "How had anything so beautiful come to him and to Lida? So beautiful spiritually as well as physically? He never had been able to make it out. "Well," she explained slowly, "I like him as a very good friend. You know he's helped me a lot with Cousin Philip, going to see him when I couldn't manage to because of Mother and the way she feels. He's been a very good friend!" she ended loyally. "Yes, I know. Poor young devil! Well, what about Colvin? You like him?" "Very much." The response came low. "Hum—" Bentwell again lifted his glass. "I had the most wonderful afternoon I've ever had in my whole life!" she confessed. Bentwell had known it would come to her in that way; that she was built to give a whole heart and not a cautious inch of it. Suppose Colvin were damned fool enough not to realize that which was offered him? "Do you know Mr. Colvin, Father?" she asked. She wanted to talk of Colvin, he saw. There had been a time years ago when he had wanted to talk of Lida in the same way. The time had been short, as Lida was orphaned and alone and they had married quickly. Soon after marriage he had not wanted to talk of her nor even to think of her. Elinor had his capacity for dreaming. She must not be hurt! "I know him fairly well," he responded in his slow way. "His family have lived across the street from Aunt Ella for more years than even I can remember. While I was still on the leash I used to be dragged there and Colvin and his sister ran in often. He's a good chap, I understand, but they say he's a hard-boiled bachelor. I think a good many women have tried to marry him. The Colvin fortune is considerable, you know." "Suppose," Stafford said slowly, "he hasn't sense enough to know how lovely you are? Suppose he's as blind as so many damned fools?" "Then I suppose I'll know I wasn't—nice enough." "Don't!" Her father begged. Elinor slipped her hand into his and looked at the decanter. He had already had a good deal; more even than was usual. "We must play chess after dinner," she said, eyes still on the decanter. "I'd like to but I don't want to bore you, baby." "But I'd love it! You know I love it. Father, when is Mother going?" Her voice was suddenly anxious. "They start, I believe, tomorrow morning." "Then—that's all right!" she said quickly, happily. She didn't want Mr. Colvin to meet her mother until she, Elinor, had had a little chance. She wouldn't have any chance at all if he met her mother, Elinor knew. It had happened before with every young man who had been attracted by Elinor, except Bobby Telfair, who had remained adamant under her mother's attacks. The attacks were made, the girl understood, in order that a selfish woman might prove the fact that she could attract and enchant and rule wherever and whomever she wished. The thought of this had never before really mattered to Elinor. Now it did. Benson appeared in the broad doorway just then to announce that dinner was served.

ELINOR rose quickly, her father in his slow and cumbersome way. The dining room had been decorated under Lida's direction in what she considered an impressive manner but tonight the aged oak walls and family portraits looked down on faded roses in the center of the table and a Venetian cut-work cloth that was a little crushed. The candles, too, had been burned before. It was the sort of thing Elinor detested. Consistent simplicity she thought to be so much more agreeable. The constant striving to impress others had become one of the meanest, although one of the smallest, of Lida's deceptions. "Mother dining out?" Elinor asked after Benson had pushed her chair under her. "Yes," her father said. "On somewhere with that young Carter." "I loathe him and yet I'm sorry for him, too," Elinor stated. It was odd how she could talk and hear herself as if from a distance while all the time that new, excited feeling in her heart made her seem to be a different person. "Father—" "Yes, dear?" "How are you off financially just now? I saw a dress yesterday I would like to have." "Then get it," he answered quickly. Elinor's doing without because Lida simply "had to have" this or that had always angered him. And yet somehow he never managed to compensate Elinor for her patience with having so few frills. "Thanks ever so much," she said. Elinor was thinking that she would try her hair a new way. Low on her neck. Her mother had seen her with it that way and called it "idiotically starchy." But her mother would be in Miami. Beautiful thought! And Tuesday when they drove up the Hudson to have dinner at the inn that he liked she'd wear her tan coat that looked quite well in spite of being so old and the little tan hat that Celeste, her mother's maid, said was becoming. Benson appeared in the doorway. "There's a call on the telephone for you, Miss Stafford," he said. "It's Mr. Colvin." (To Be Continued)

Highway Building Ready to Occupy

By United Press AUSTIN—The next session of the state highway commission is to be held in the large hearing room of the new state highway building. Completion of the $500,000, modernistic office structure means the moving of numerous state offices. The state highway department, which had its first office in a committee room at the rear of the house of representatives hall will occupy seven floors of the building which covers a quarter of a city block. Grouped on these seven floors will be the highway forces now occupying a floor in the state land office building, a floor in a downtown office building, quarters for the state motor patrol in the old Travis county courthouse and the board for payment of county and district road bond indebtedness. The latter has been occupying space in the state capitol. Quarters in the land office building, vacated by the state highway department will be used by the state board of health and the industrial accident board, which now occupy rooms off the house and senate galleries in the main capitol. A floor of the new building will be used for the state board of water engineers, the state reclamation department and affiliated activities. The state auditor's office, which occupied temporary quarters in the governor's reception room at the capitol, now turned over to the state board of health, will be housed in the old Travis county courthouse. This building, renovated and remodeled, was built by the county on a lot leased from the state. When the county decided on a new courthouse recently the lease was turned back, the state buying the old building. In its renewed state it has been designated as the "Walton" building. The name is

Texas Wets and Drys Resume 79-Year-Old Battle Over State

DALLAS, Texas.—Texas' 79-year-old liquor battle flared along old fronts today as citizens prepared to vote Aug. 26 for delegates to a state convention for ratification or rejection of repeal of the 18th amendment.

Since 1854, wets and drys of Texas have gone to the polls periodically to test their strength. Vigor has been only temporary with neither side gaining sufficient majority to warrant boasting.

Indications are this election will be no exception. A private survey by State Senator George Purl of Dallas showed a decrease of 36 per cent in poll taxes paid for 1933, accentuating the battle because of scarcity of votes.

There is no scale by which the sentiment in Senator Morris Sheppard's home state may be gauged. The co-author of the 18th amendment has seen Texas twice defeat prohibition. He will be the standard bearer for the temperance legion during the summer campaign.

In the ranks of the wets is Joseph Weldon Bailey Jr., of Dallas, congressman-at-large, whose father fought the battles of the anti-prohibitionists in the days of William Jennings Bryan. The young congressman has let it be known he will follow the footsteps of his father, conduct a private campaign against Senator Sheppard's forces although he was not named chairman for the state wet convention June 27.

When Governor E. M. Pease called an election for Aug. 7, 1934, to vote on regulation of liquor sales he wrote the first chapter in Texas prohibition history. That election was a short-lived victory for the drys for soon after the law was instituted closing all dispensaries selling amounts of less than one quart in counties not issuing licenses the measure was declared unconstitutional.

The battle has waged along the fronts of county options, regulations and outright prohibition since.

Regulatory acts were passed under the constitution of 1869, specifying the distance liquor dispensation must be kept from schools, churches and other community institutions.

The first election under the local option provision in the present constitution, written in 1876, was in Jasper county in December, 1876. The county voted to go dry.

The state's local option system was authorized in 1884, setting out that any county, precinct, town or city might vote on the sale of liquor within its jurisdiction. The provision was amended in 1891 to include "such sub-division of a county as may be designated by the commissioners' court." Amendments to this law appeared again in 1893, 1897, 1905, 1907 and 1909.

The greatest victory for the wets came in August, 1887, when the state turned down a constitutional amendment for prohibition by a vote of 220,627 to 129,270. It was 21 years later another statewide test of strength came.

On July 25, 1908, the people voted 145,530 to 141,441 for a submission of prohibition. The victory, however, was inconsequential when the next legislature failed to call the election.

Three years later the drys received another setback when the proposal for Texas prohibition was beaten 237,000 to 231,000. The drys renewed their campaign to culminate it with ratification of the 18th amendment and the passage of the Dean law.

William J. Herwig, assistant superintendent of the state Anti-Saloon league in 1916, and Dr. A. J. Barton, superintendent of the league in 1918, were factors in the last big prohibition drive. In January, 1916, Herwig predicted a dry victory in the next election and issued a list of wet and dry counties. He counted 183 dry counties and 69 wet, or "moist," counties.

Herwig's survey was quite accurate. At the May 24, 1919, election the drys won by a 20,000 majority and gave Texas its constitutional amendment outlawing liquor.

The election produced interesting results. Forty of the 246 counties holding elections went wet. Some counties were as decisively wet as others were dry.

Bexar county rejected the amendment 2,920 to 8,587 while Tarrant county, home of the militant Rev. J. Frank Norris, turned in an almost 2 to 1 acceptance on a vote of 4,054 to 2,681.

Outlying districts swung Dallas county into the dry line after the city of Dallas had defeated the amendment.

Starr county gave eight of its 165 votes for the proposal. El Paso defeated the measure 2,163 to 1,185.

More than a year before the acceptance of the Dean law the 18th amendment had been ratified by the Texas legislature, Feb. 28, 1918.

Texas congressional members furnish another view of the state's prohibition history. Between Dec. 17, 1917, when Senator Sheppard's resolution precipitated the 18th amendment and Feb. 2, 1933, there was a shift in liquor sentiment. Only three representatives who supported Sheppard in 1917 and were still in congress voted for repeal. John Nance Garner, who had voted against the Sheppard resolution, did not have to vote this year as he was speaker of the house.

The Texas delegation in the house in 1917 was split 8 to 8. This year there were 14 for repeal, three against, Garner not voting.

United Press Has Changed Up Staff At Washington

WASHINGTON.—General reassignment of the Washington staff of the United Press went into effect this week to facilitate speedy, accurate and comprehensive reports of the operation of the vast economic recovery program which the administration is initiating under the laws just passed by congress.

Not since the war have news developments in Washington imposed such a burden of responsibility upon the American press as the task of reporting President Roosevelt's attack on economic depression. Touching as it does, every pocketbook and every business man in the nation, the story of these recovery efforts requires expert reporting, endless research and the same simple, lucid writing which distinguished the Washington staff of the United Press during the special session of congress.

House and senate galleries are deserted and the correspondents who reported the enactment of the program step by step are now reporting the progress of its execution. The new staff assignments, made by Raymond Clapper, bureau manager, and Merton T. Akers, news editor, are designed to supply United Press newspapers throughout the world with close-up views of the recovery machine in operation.

H. O. Thompson, who prepared the daily congressional leads during the special session, is now giving his attention exclusively to the industrial recovery activity centering around General Hugh Johnson.

William F. Kerby, chief of the United Press house of representatives staff through the last two sessions, is concentrating on the administration of the farm relief machinery.

Lyle C. Wilson, chief of the senate staff, is reporting the reaction to the recovery program as it comes back to Capitol Hill.

Richard L. Gridley, United Press financial writer, has been assigned to report the operation of the public works program and economic aspects of the rise in commodity prices.

Frederick A. Storm, now with President Roosevelt off the New England coast, will return with him to follow the white house developments.

Duane Wilson, formerly of the house staff, has been assigned to report the operation of the securities control bill.

Ronald Van Tine, after long experience reporting the work of the interstate commerce commission, is concentrating on the new railroad administration under former Commissioner Joseph Eastman.

Frederick C. Othman, widely known feature writer, is picturing the personalities who have been brought to the fore by the "new deal."

Raymond Clapper, head of the Washington bureau, is co-ordinating the various developments in general interpretive dispatches.

HOOKS and SLIDES BY BILL BRAUCHER

Muldoon at 44
WILLIAM MULDOON, the old professor of the New York Boxing Commission, turned the page of his 88th year the other day. When July comes it will mark the passing of 44 years since the old professor helped John L. Sullivan to beat Jake Kilrain in 75 rounds at Richburg, Miss.

Helped Sullivan? The old professor more than helped Sullivan. My books say that the old professor was the fight himself, and it was a victory of mind over matter purely and simply.

Sullivan a Wreck
IT was just about 44 years ago this time when Muldoon haled Sullivan out of a sick-bed where the Boston Boy had been lying at the point of death from typhoid fever. Sullivan didn't look so good, as the boys would say now, when the old professor gave him a rope to skip. The Sullivan legs were wobbly from illness, and the paunch hadn't been helped by John's hilarious habits. In addition John L. was mentally sick.

Muldoon had to be a professor to get the Boston Boy into shape. He would talk to John L. by the hour of how fearful would be the consequences if Kilrain should win this one. He literally had to overpower Sullivan mentally to get him to work.

Muldoon got Sullivan out of bed at 7 a. m. and gave him dumbbells to play with. An hour's rest followed breakfast. Then to the barn where John L. would punch the canvas box.

Knocked Him Around
AFTER Sullivan began to reach some kind of fighting shape, his self-conceit began to assert itself. Muldoon took this out of him by wrestling—tossing John L. around like a bean bag.

When he first gave Sullivan the rope, John could not skip more than a dozen times. Before Muldoon was through with him, the Boston Boy was hopping over the hemp as many as 809 times.

Muldoon was given credit for doing what no other could have done for Sullivan. He made John L. lick himself. After that Kilrain, in 75 rounds, was not so hard.

Free Vocational School Drawing Elderly Style

FORT WORTH.—A large number of grown-ups here are vying to debunk the old adage "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

With that in mind, and determined to prepare themselves the best that life can offer in the hope it is to be a new era of business prosperity, men and women, mothers and fathers, have rolled in a free vocational school here this summer.

Some of them, as old as 55, arms with their sons or daughters and march to school to learn "tricks." Nearly 1,000, a group of them elderly persons have enrolled for the summer session.

Changing business methods, crumpling of machines and causes of unemployment have brought these men and women realize their incompetency in rapidly changing world. Entrance enrolled for varied pursuits.

One 42-year-old father, a mer telegraph operator, has enrolled his son in a course in bookbinding and machine calculation.

A theatre organist, shut aside by sound pictures and has been unemployed for years, is taking a course in commercial art.

A 54-year-old farmer, father of children, receives instruction in salesmanship.

Numerous similar cases are cited. Many reasons for seeking national training are given. The predominant among them is factor of a changing business environment and preparation for a new era.

New motor oil shows American how to get 28 1/2% more miles per quart

MEASURING THE EXACT AMOUNT OF OIL placed in each of the test cars. Representatives of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association tested Gulf-lube against leading brands of 25c oils in 6 borrowed cars—and Gulf-lube stood up 28 1/2% longer before a quart of oil had to be added.

Gulf-lube wins amazing test with borrowed cars of different makes

SIX AVERAGE CARS—from new to several years old—were borrowed from their owners and placed on the Indianapolis Speedway.

In these cars, representatives of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association tested four of America's leading brands of 25c oils.

In a 4-day grind around the track, at a constant speed of 45 miles an hour, these cars tested each of the competing oils.

And, at the end of the test, Gulf-lube had beaten every oil in every car! In Car No. 2, for example,—when oil "C" was replaced with Gulf-lube, consumption dropped from a quart every 652 miles to a quart every 1447 miles!

And, averaging the figures for all cars, Gulf-lube cut the oil costs on these cars 28 1/2%!

Buy less oil—get better lubrication

Switch to Gulf-lube now. You'll buy less oil. And you'll get better lubrication. Try it! It's the finest motor oil a quarter ever bought. Get it at any Gulf station.

BRAND-NEW—This car's mileage will be over 1000 miles. Rings and pistons tight and oil consumption was low. In this almost new car, Gulf-lube lasted more miles per quart than the average competing oils!

SURVEY SHOWS KING COTTON ON WAY BACK

DALLAS, Texas.—It may be King Cotton's comeback this year. Rising prices, a sellers' market and economies of operation point towards a profit-making year for cotton planters, a United Press survey has disclosed. Losses of the past several years may be wiped out.

The profits to cotton farmers probably will be greater this year because:

1. Planting and farm costs have gone out to the nub.
2. Home-grown feed and fodder crops make living costs and maintenance of farm animals cheaper.
3. Much marginal land has been abandoned.
4. Credit, especially federal government loans, has been available at low interest costs.
5. Much labor was available, and for the most part, seed and equipment were bought before inflation.

Cotton Prices

Skyrocketing cotton prices since March 21 already have enriched some farmers. Statisticians of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange report that farmers have 4,500,000 bales of last year's cotton in storage. The percentage of holdover to the farmers' hands, however, is small.

The present price has given the farmers much to look forward to. Current prices are approximately 50 cents higher than last year, and if they maintain their level, millions of dollars more will be paid to farmers.

Briefly, reports to the United Press from cotton raising sections are:

Good Weather

Arkansas—Good weather promises to give planters a chance to catch up with their work. There is much diversified farming, cutting down living and farming costs. Conservative estimates are that the present crop will be grown at one-third the cost of the 1931 crop.

Memphis (reporting for Tennessee, Mississippi and Eastern Arkansas)—Floods hindered planting, but farmers hope to be able to make a crop. Probably 50 per cent of the crop is in normal condition. The estimated acreage increase of 8 per cent in this area conforms to the estimated United States cotton acreage increase. Diversification is practiced, but a shortage of feed crops is seen. A

CADDIE TO KING By Laufer

Dallas.—The progress of the Texas crop, on the whole, varies from fair to poor, the former in the upper half of the state. The gulf coast is very dry and cotton is beginning to suffer, the weekly survey of the Dallas News said.

About 90 per cent of the cotton crop is planted in the eastern half of Texas, with Central Texas about 40 per cent chopped out and Northeast Texas about 25 per cent.

Planting Complete

Atlanta (reporting for eastern cotton states)—Planting is complete except in the northern extremities of the belt. The acreage increase is due largely to availability of government funds. South Georgia and particularly South Alabama are leading in diversified farming.

Oklahoma—H. B. Cordell, president of the state agricultural board, is authority for the statement that cotton acreage has increased 10 to 20 per cent, with feed and fodder acreage about normal. Sufficient credit is available, but farmers are cutting the corners.

Recent report showed the 14 cotton producing states had increased their government seed loans by $5,500,000 over last year.

New Orleans (reporting for the lower Mississippi cotton belt)—The crop is practically all planted and best reports indicate substantial acreage increases due chiefly to more federal crop loan funds available.

New Battle Predicted Over Metric System

BOSTON.—The world-minded handful of U. S. track officials who, under the spell of the Olympic Games, railroaded the metric system into American competition, should beware the Ides of March.

In that month the Interscholastic Association of Amateur Athletes of America holds a winter meeting, prior to its indoor championships, and a showdown on the meters vs. yards controversy will be forthcoming if sentiment at the recent I. C. 4-A outdoor games at Cambridge is a criterion.

Foremost among those demanding reconsideration of last year's

Buckling Down to Job of Developing Tennessee Valley

Equipped with an initial $50,000,000 for spending money and broad powers for developing the Tennessee River basin, including the completion of the Muscle Shoals project, the Tennessee Valley Authority is pictured as it met for the first time in Washington. Left to right, Harcourt A. Morgan, formerly President of the University of Tennessee; Arthur E. Morgan, chairman, and David E. Lilienthal, who resigned as Public Utilities Commissioners of Wisconsin to join the board and become its chief legal counsel.

vote are Dean Cromwell and R. L. (Dink) Templeton, respective track coaches of Southern California and Stanford University. Neither had a hand in the vote at which the I. C. 4-A went metric, is logic in their insistence upon a for neither thought the system had a chance of being adopted.

Since their schools have been duelling for top honors in important outdoor championships more than a decade, and probably will be for another decade, there is logic in their insistence upon a new poll.

Templeton started the ball rolling at the Cambridge games when his motion against continuance of the metric system was approved, 22 to 3, by the Track Coaches' Association of America.

Gustavus T. Kirby, chairman of the advisory board of the I. C. 4-A and former president of the national A. A. U., is the chief advocate of the metric system, and has been quoted as saying it will take a unanimous vote of the collegiate association to overthrow it. The coaches claim there is no rule to support this opinion. Further they contend the majority of delegates to the A. A. U. convention last year were opposed to the metric system but were told the colleges wanted it. The I. C. 4-A delegates, on the other hand, took no flat vote on the metric system but merely voted to abide by the A. A. U. decision, it is charged.

A prominent college official attending the Cambridge games summed up the sentiment against the metric distance when he said Americans "know what a yard is and like to figure in miles." Asking that his name be withheld, he predicted that "you probably have seen your first and last intercollegiate meet at metric distances."

One of the chief regrets of the Cambridge meet was that Bill Bontrou of Princeton didn't have a chance to challenge John Paul Jones' mile record of 4:14.4. Bontrou, who also won the 800, ran the 1500-meter race in 3:54 and it was generally believed he could have done 4:13 for the mile had he gone that distance.

CLEANER GETS FLEAS
By United Press

MONROE, La.—R. D. Swayze, city commissioner, was troubled half to death with fleas—on his dog, Peggy, and her pups. Various remedies for extermination were tried, with negative results. Then the commissioner got a brilliant idea. He got out the family vacuum cleaner, gave the dogs the once over, and in five minutes every flea had been corralled for extermination. Swayze wants all dog owners to know of his method.

Honor Out of Town Visitors Wednesday evening Mr. and J. M. Perkins were at home to the members of the Readers Luncheon club and their husbands, and a few close friends, honoring the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown Chase of Oklahoma City, Okla.

The house and lawn were brilliantly illuminated and a barbecue steak supper served in the spacious garden at 7:30 o'clock. A background of handsome trees and brilliant hued flower beds added their charm to the setting, gaily lighted under an overhead circle on tinted electric bulbs. A buffet table centered with a big bouquet of gladioli was generously laden with salads, hot corn on the cob, sliced tomatoes, rolls, pickles, olives, iced tea, and fresh strawberries.

Quaint blue potteryware was used in the attractive service. An artistic arrangement of chairs and tables added to the charm of the pretty scene, and informal bridge games of "42" and jigsaw puzzle tables provided amusements and entertainment.

An attractive feature was the singing of the 9:49 quartet, Messrs. J. M. Knox, A. E. Herring, M. L. Keasler, and M. G. Collins, who had just returned from their Moton Valley good-will tour and who gave a group of numbers assisted by Mrs. Grady Pipkin and Mrs. T. J. Haley. Guitar accompaniments were provided by Mr. Herring.

The hospitality of the Perkins is well known in Eastland and that of Wednesday evening was exceptionally delightful.

The personnel list included Senator and Mrs. W. B. Collier, A. H. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Springer, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Collier, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Boys and Girls World Club

The Boys and Girls World club of the Methodist church enjoyed their delightful program Wednesday morning on "International Relationship," developed through the constructive stories used as missionary lessons, and dealing with the Holding Institute at Laredo and including stories of Ramara, his pet goat and pet donkey. The assembly opened with prayer and a song service, which included learning the chorus of "Jesus Loves Me This I Know," in the language of Ramara, Spanish. Mrs. J. E. Hickman assisted Mrs. J. U. Johnson in the service. The construction of the Mexican village, now under way by Mrs. Johnson, was further assisted by the children taking part in the making of little animals and other objects. Clara Noyes, Famed Nurse Given Medal

CHICAGO.—The Saunders medal for "distinguished service in the cause of nursing" was presented to Clara Dutton Noyes, R. N., national director of the American Red Cross nursing service, Washington, D. C., at the annual banquet of the National League of Nursing Education convention.

Miss Noyes is the fourth person honored with the medal, which is presented annually. She also holds medals from the French and Bulgarian governments and the International Red Cross.

Through the national Red Cross committee and its local organizations the nursing personnel that responds to emergency and disaster calls is governed. Miss Noyes directs 58,000 Red Cross nurses, of whom 31,000 are on active call.

In these capacities and as a former president of the American nurses' association, as first vice president of the International Council of Nurses and former president of the National League of Nursing Education, Miss Noyes has accomplished three vital projects for nurses.

She established national nursing headquarters in New York, the memorial building to the American nurses at the Nightingale school, Bordeaux, France, and the schools of nursing, which the American Red Cross founded in Poland and which now are the schools of nursing in the Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Turkey. She also established a nursing school in Haiti.

Faulkner Film Opens Showing Locally Today

William Faulkner's dramatic tale of present-day youth, "The Story of Temple Drake," opened today at the Lyric theatre, with Miriam Hopkins in the title role and Jack LaRue, William Gargan, William Collier Jr., heading the supporting cast.

Miss Hopkins, cast as a wild young aristocrat, whose wildness, however, has the fortunate quality of knowing its own limits, is in love with Gargan, a young attorney. She refuses his offer of marriage because she feels she is not good enough for him. From Gargan she goes to Collier, a drunken college boy, and they speed off in his car in search of more liquor. The ride ends in a crash, and they climb from the wreckage to find themselves virtual prisoners of LaRue, a big-city gangster, in a remote, desolate hideaway. LaRue ships the boy off to the city, and forces Temple to remain with him. He kills the only man who tries to protect her; then drags her off to the city and keeps her with him in a tiny rooming house.

There Gargan finds her. He has been assigned to defend the man charged with the murder LaRue committed. In his search for evidence, he looks up LaRue and is horrified to discover Temple with him. The film reaches its climax in the action that follows.

Boy Forgets Mother Tongue and Learns Another Quickly

EDINBURGH.—A strange story of having completely forgotten how to speak his mother tongue and of having learned a new language in eight months was told here by Fidel Manchaca, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Miguel Manchaca of McAllen.

The youth, blind since birth, was accepted as a student in the Texas school for the Blind at Austin in September, 1932. He knew only a few words of English. He applied himself to his studies and so learned to speak English. He had no occasion to speak Spanish at the school.

He returned home to spend the summer with his parents. His mother greeted him joyfully in Spanish. Fidel found himself unable to carry on an ordinary conversation in Spanish, so completely had he forgotten the language. He speaks English very fluently an accent being almost entirely absent.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown Chase of Oklahoma City, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, left for Oklahoma today, following a delightful Eastland visit.

Fight of Clam and Snake Was a Draw

PLAIN CITY, Ohio.—A six-day fight between a fresh-water clam and a water snake ended in a draw.

For nearly a week the clam held the snake's lip in a vise-like grip despite the reptile's squirming and lashing.

The two were discovered by Ross Tobin. The water snake, in search for food, had struck his nose inside the clam's shell. The clam had snapped down on him.

Tobin killed both contestants. Biologists said the struggle could have gone on indefinitely until one of the contestants starved to death.
