A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

DISASTER RELIEF

The legislature is certain to have before it measures for relief of the hurricane-stricken Valley.

Relief is of two kinds: the emergency feeding and shelter of storm victims; provisions for setting up shop again and carrying on.

The first type is being taken care of well, with resources of both the state and the nation mobilized swiftly and efficiently. The other is, on the whole, the biggest job.

The first need, after caring for the injured and feeding and housing the homeless, is to make provision by which the Texas citizens in the Valley may rebuild, may restore a semblance of the normal order, and may remain in the Valley country.

The thing of greatest importance is to make it possible for them to rebuild their homes and business establishments, and to carry on in the Valley. The alternative would be for many thousands to draft away, leave the beautiful and well-developed section in its present desolation, and permanently reduce the Valley to a lower level of development.

Dollars spent quick enough to let the people rebuild the Valley and make it possible for them to stay there will be productive dollars. Their spending-if spent quicklywill preserve what otherwise will be abandoned and lost; and will enable those who have suffered such losses to get going again toward recovery. In general, there is no place all the homeless can go; no other field of opportunity away from the Valley better than that at home, even under the possibility of recurrent storms.

Tax remission, moratoria on the heavy bond-payment tax levies, and the like in the long run will be of general benefit; but the greater need is ready money or credit to put the houses back in shape again to be lieved in; to repair and restock the business establishment; to re-create the citrus orchards that were seriously damaged. This year's fruit crop is lost. If the government pays for its destruction, as it paid for cotton plowed up, it will put in money to be used in salvaging values and in preserving the Valley. If the state can assist in this, and if the state can apply relief funds, and rehabilitation funds quickly enough, it will make possible that those who are willing, can stay on in the Valley and rebuild much, if not most, of the unmeasured toll of storm damage.
