A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SIN ACKNOWLEDGED: I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid: I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin.—Psalm 32: 5.

ANOTHER MILESTONE WHIZZES BY

When you are traveling fast and have no speedometer, one way of gauging your speed is to watch the milestones along the road and see how rapidly they are whizzing by you.

One of the handiest milestones now available for Uncle Sam's children is that provided by the banking business.

Less than a year ago finance was still the sacred mystery of the old days, a realm which ordinary mortals might not criticize and into which a mere public servant might not venture without first removing his hat.

Today we find responsible government officials declaring that it may soon be necessary for Uncle Sam to assume virtual control of the whole banking industry.

The R. F. C., it is pointed out, is ready to invest a billion dollars in stock of banking institutions. In this way it could get a 25 per cent ownership in American bank capital, and would have an important voice in the control of most of the nation's banking resources.

It would, of course, take the seventh son of a seventh son to say right now whether all of this will actually be done. But the mere fact that the administration is talking about it is immensely significant. . . . Do you see that milestone whizzing past?

Now it is easy to find good reasons for opposing this proposed step. The principal reason that will occur to most people, probably, is that we have no guarantee whatever that the scheme would work out well. No one, that is, knows whether Uncle Sam is qualified to run the banking business. He might make a fine hash of things.

But any question of this kind has got to be considered against its proper background; and the proper background for this one is the simple fact that the existing system has been working very badly indeed for quite a long time. Bank depositors and stockholders have lost a great deal of money, and trade has not had the credit facilities it should have had. We may be moving at a frightening pace, but we had plenty to be afraid of when we were standing still.

NRA VICTORY RALLIES

In eight Texas cities, achievements of the national recovery program are signalized in rallies Wednesday night of this week.

Texas has responded in a way comparable with the best in any other part of the nation toward the NRA and Blue Eagle campaign. The rallies are of direct interest and concern to all who have become members of the vast Blue Eagle corps; to all of those signed up as consumers pledged to support those who support the president; and of particular interest to many thousands whose labors helped put across the NRA drive.

Texas, in these rallies, takes stock of one of the greatest achievements since the war spirit concentrated efforts of everybody into one giant undertaking.

THAT before a merchant or a manufacturer goes into business he must be properly financed. That is, he must know how to finance his business. He must know how to get the most out of his merchandise or his raw material. He must know how to sell his product. He must know how to manage his business. He must know how to make his business successful otherwise.

THE HUNTING SEASON OPENS

OLDEN

At a regular business meeting of the Olden Parent-Teacher association, Thursday, Sept. 14, a membership drive was inaugurated. Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Smith, leaders of the two sides, chose their followers for the big drive. The side which is successful in obtaining the most new members on or before next regular meeting date, Sept. 28, will be entertained and banqueted by the losing side. Much interest in the drive is being manifested and to date both sides have reported many new members. Open meeting will be held Friday night Sept. 29 and everyone is invited to attend. It is thought the P.-T. A. year here will be highly successful and many novel entertainments are planned for the season. It is the hope of the Olden P.-T. A. to create more community interest through closer social contacts and through loyal support of its members this can easily be done.

school junior class enjoyed a sunrise breakfast at Butler Springs Saturday morning. Principal Pickens, sponsor of the class was a guest at the breakfast. She is well known here, and formerly operated the Tri-Me cafe here before moving to Ranger. Since leaving Olden, Mrs. Harrison suffered the loss of her husband, who was also well known and liked here. She will be welcomed back by many old friends. Mr. and Mrs. Doxie Tate and Mrs. Will Stephens of Stephenville were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stephens in Olden. Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Clark lost their chickens Sunday night when thieves entered their premises and took them sometime during the night. IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE SHARPSHOOTER

THREE TIMES HIGH MAN on the U. S. International Dewar .22-calibre rifle team, and former U. S. small bore champion, Virgil Richard is professional shooter for Remington Arms Co., Inc. He always has to be a brilliant marksman—regardless of sun, wind, or rain. There is no question about his knowing the secret of healthy nerves!

DURING THE DAY'S SHOOTING, and later around evening fire, Camels add to the pleasure of your outing. As Virgil Richard says, "Camels are a much milder cigarette and they never interfere with my nervous control, no matter how much I smoke."

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW. Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camel

Virgil Richard, in discussing smoking and shooting, says: "People often ask me if a professional sharpshooter can smoke as much as he wants. I've been enjoying Camels for years, without difficulty in keeping my eyes in shape for making record scores in target-shooting events. That's because I have long been a steady smoker. I have experimented with all the popular brands, and I find Camels are better for steady smoking. They're a much milder cigarette, and they never interfere with my nervous control, no matter how much I smoke."

KLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

OUT OUR WAY

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HER TODAY... EVE HAYLNESS, secretary assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager of Bick department store, married DICK REECE, construction superintendent. Dick is sent to take charge of a construction job in St. Louis. It will require almost a year to complete, but he refuses to give up her work and go with him. MONA ALLEN, copy writer, dislikes Eve and constantly causing trouble at office. She is responsible for several mistakes for which Eve is blamed. Mona is friendly to ETHEL REECE who continues to force unwelcome attention on Eve. Unknown to Dickie has been playing the stock market, borrowing money from mother and sister. She is going this as well as all her savings and $500 Dick left in bank. Mona invites Eve dinner and Eve, anxious not to offend her, accepts the invitation. Mona comes to take Eve to her home where she stays. Eve dislikes ReECE, he leaves the others, becomes and sends the night at a house. Next day ReECE telephones. He frightens Eve by saying he is in love with her and wanting that Dick has been dying on fire. NOW GO ON WITH VICTORY CHAPTER XXX

ALL day Sunday Eve stayed in the apartment. She tired and spent after the nervous experiences of the night before. There was no doubt in mind that Mona Allen was possible what had happened. Mona whose invitation to Eve take dinner with her had seemed so friendly! At first, angrily, Eve decided to think how she could in the other girl pay for her trick. Gradually, however, Eve decided to consider the matter more calmly. By Monday morning she decided that it would be best to ignore the whole affair. Night Mona had an alibi well reeled and would be only too glad to recite it, her bias eyes widened and looking completely blank as she did so. "I'm not going to be put on the defensive for an attack she on me," Eve told Arlene, after relating all that had happened, urday night. But it was Mona herself, brought up the subject. She entered the office, removed her hat and a moment later was at Eve's desk. "Whatever became of you Saturday night?" she demanded. "I was so worried! My boy friend and I met a man who invited us to have a drink. We were in a booth at opposite end of the room and when we came back ReECE told us you had gone. In a way I don't blame you. That place is an awful frog. I'd never had gone there if I knew what it was like!" "I went home," Eve told her. "I said on the subject. Never again. Eve was resolved, would Mona have an opportunity to place her in an awkward position. BUT such resolutions were easier made than kept. In the days that followed Eve was constantly facing petty annoyances—small matters that became increasingly irritating, because apparently there was no explanation for them. Objects would be missing from Eve's desk—her fountain pen, the vanity case she kept in a desk drawer, leaves from her calendar pad on which she had jotted memoranda, or bits of copy not yet seen by Mr. Barnes. The things which disappeared were always objects the lack of which would cause inconvenience to Eve herself but were too trivial to come to the attention of the advertising manager. Eve, of course, blamed Mona Allen. She concluded that the other girl was working her mischief with greater care. "What would you do?" one day Eve asked Arlene. "I'd go to Barnes about it," Arlene advised. "Oh, I couldn't! He wouldn't like it and he'd only think me catty." "I don't see why? You'd merely be protecting yourself—asserting your rights. Do you think for one minute that a man would let another man get away with what Mona's doing? Of course he wouldn't! I don't like a busybody. No one does. But there's a difference between being meddlesome and standing up for yourself." As it happened Eve did not find it necessary to complain to Barnes about Mona. Two days later Arlene returned unexpectedly to the office for something she had forgotten when leaving to go to lunch and found Mona going through the drawers of her desk. The situation was too much even for one of Mona's impudence to carry off with nonchalance. "I—I was just—" she began with a nervous laugh. "Yes, I see," Arlene said. "You were just going through my desk, weren't you? Now listen. I understand your racket and the next time anything is mislaid in this office I'm going straight to Earle Barnes and tell him who's responsible." "I was only looking for—some copy paper," Mona tried to defend herself. "What's wrong with that stack of copy paper over there in its usual place?" "Oh! There is some, isn't there? I didn't see any this morning. Charles must have brought down a new supply." "There was plenty there this morning. He brought it down yesterday." WITH this Arlene tumbled things back into the desk drawers and locked them. Mona forced an abused smile, retreated to her desk and began to type with the appearance of great industry. Eve hastened out to join Eve, leaving Mona's treachery, as of ex- annoyance by her. Lone Star promised, Eve's expense. be as certain. Apparently seemed to be expense of gath- Arlene.
