STRONG AND SUMNERS STAGE WRESTLING MATCH

Hatton W. Sumners of Dallas has been a congressional representative 20 years. Sterling P. Strong of Dallas won an election as congressman-at-large in 1932. Sumners is chairman of the house judiciary committee. Joseph . Weldon Bailey of Dallas was elected a congressman-atlarge a year ago. He will not be a candidate against Sumners. He may be a candidate for another office.

Bailey withdrew in order to give Sumners a free field. Strong is not going to withdraw from public life. He has announced his honorable intention, speaking of the future. He is going after Sumner's scalp and congressional seat.

Sterling P. Strong was born in a northwest Texas county. He is a lifelong pro. He was a pro when the antis ruled the Texas roost. He filled a number of local offices. He battled for the white ribbon of the pros. Away back before the falling of the stars he was a candidate for state treasurer. He was defeated. Away back in the days of Thomas M. Campbell's reign he was the state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league. In those days he was for precinct prohibition, county prohibition, state prohibition, nationwide prohibition and worldwide prohibiton. All the time Strong was a courageous fighter.

He moved from the northwest habitat, where he was born, to the city of Dallas. He was active in business life for many years.

In the battles of 1932 he threw his hat into the ring as a candidate at large. Cyclone Davis, for 50 years a top-notcher in the pro and farm labor and later in the Klan fight on the side of the Klan, went down in defeat. Farmer George Terrell won the seat, Joseph Weldon Bailey led all the rest. He won a seat. Strong made a remarkable race. Pitted against him were two repealers.

Now Dallas is a congressional district. Bailey is out of the running. Sumners, like Barkis, is ever willing to serve. For 50 years Dallas has been a bloody cockpit of political rows and political battles. Strong is a pro. Sumners has ever been a pro. Dallas has a tremendous voting population. It is said there are more than 75,000 qualified voters in the city and county. Behind the scenes it is whispered that it will be a three-cornered fight for the

There is to be a bitter contest for the congressional seat which goes to the Alamo City. Another will be staged in the county of Harris, in the city named for Sam Houston on the banks of Buffalo bayou where the deep water ships of the seven seas dock at the piers and unload and load cargoes of precious freight for the markets of the world. There may be many new faces in the Texas congressional delegation of 21 after the primary contests have been settled in the midsummer months of the com-

Just now the real battle is onlooking to national recovery, the restoration of the purchasing power of the tillers of the soil and the wage workers in city and country. It is not a war fought by the sword, it is a war waged by the men and women in the households of the commonwealth who are making the sacrifices necessary and ever engaged in a heroic struggle to restore peace and happiness and a fair share of prosperity to the human atoms who dot the surface of the earth in this erstwhile Southwestern garden of the Lord.

If you intend living your life out in the present generation, replan your affairs on the new deal and get busy.

Joan goes to New York to scarch for PAT, her younger sister, who has run away after an unhappy love affair. Joan is hired as a masked singer fin a night club. Believing Bob lost to her, she becomes engaged to BARNEY BILAKE, owner of the night club. Pat reappears and becomes Barney's secretary. It is not long before he realizes he loves Pat instead of Joan. Joan sings at a fashionable entertainment and discovers she is in Bob's home. Bob recognizes her voice and traces her to the luxurious apartment she and Pat share with Barney's stepmother.
