SPEAKING OF THE TENANCY PROBLEM.

According to the Texas Weekly "an economic awakening is on in Texas." Peter Molyneux is the editor and publisher of the Weekly. His theory is that the farm landlord must play an important part in economic advance of Texas "if we are going to have anything like economic advance and if we are going to have any very material improvement in agriculture."

This is a noble editorial utterance for another experiment. He predicts that the farm landlord who is merely the owner of farm lands is destined to pass out of the picture. If so in this machine age, isn't it possible that his tenants will pass out of the picture with the passing of the landlord?

There are eight states in the union in which more than 50 per cent of the farmers are tenants and they are Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina—the states which produce the bulk of American cotton.

There are farm leaders on the roster of the Texas house of representatives. There are spokesmen for senatorial districts which are agricultural districts. "What are they going to do about it?" It is the dictum of Editor Molyneux that if the farm landlords "had all their state taxes remitted it would not help them much."

A NEW YORK BANKER IS VERY OPTIMISTIC.

It goes without saying that when a banker becomes optimistic the lights must be rosy on the financial horizon. Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National bank of New York, told the shareholders in his annual report that the next important move in business would be "upward."

He ventured the opinion that conditions at the end of 1931 will be a good deal better than they were at the end of 1930. He outlined a program for the congress and the president. He is thoroughly convinced that it would be good business for the administration to initiate a reduction in inter-allied debts; a modification of the tariff; and advocated to promote security market stability, reduction in the capital gains tax from 12 1/2 to 7 1/2 per cent.

Rapid-Fire Fun Raps Gangsters In Oakie's Hit

Up-to-the-minute fun-farce, with Jack Oakie's wise-cracks permeating the action, will entertain patrons of the Lyric theatre Thursday and Friday of this week. "The Gang Busters" is the smart crack at American gamdom in which the contagious comic "Sap from Syracuse" and "The Social Lion" lets loose with laughs.

"The Gang Busters" turns big city racketeering into a jocular jamboree of laugh moments, and swirls the big-guns of the underworld around a pretty little romance that manages to fight its way out of a series of breath-taking action scenes. Jean Arthur takes the place as the sweetheart of "The Gang Busters," and William Boyd, recently seen with Gary Cooper in "The Spoilers," has the chief menace role.

In "The Gang Busters," Oakie is introduced as a cock-sure small-town insurance agent transferred to a large city business. His boasted ability to "get the business" through his insurance selling is handicapped, however, by the activities of the gangsters who put all his clients "on the spot." Bewildered, Oakie stumbles into a hotbed of mischief, rescues a pretty girl from the clutches of the villain, saves her father from a vindictive racketeer, and, in general, cleans fair wholesale price for the remainder of their produce. A round table discussion followed the talk in which minor details of the operation of the corporation were discussed, most of which would have to be embodied in the constitution or decided by the stockholders or by the directors after they were selected.

Students Find Trachoma Has Its Advantages

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 21—Trachoma has its advantages, as thirteen youngsters in school here will tell you. In fact, if one may take the word of Mrs. Reba Barr literally, followers of the three R's even welcome the excessively rosyate eyelids which cause them to be hustled off to her combination clinic-school.

Special privileges, individual attention, treatment of the ailments, all appeal to the pupils, and when the time comes to go back to regular classrooms, tears are often in evidence, Mrs. Barr said.

Besides serving in full capacity as nurse, Mrs. Barr teaches all necessary grades from one through seven.

When the school was established eight years ago, 150 children were enrolled. So successful has the treatment been that the number has dwindled to 13.

Money Is Raised For Market At A Meeting Here

A little over $1,000 of the necessary $12,000 needed to assure the starting of the produce market in Eastland was secured at a meeting in the county courtroom last night and the other amount needed to form the corporation is expected to be secured before the day is over.

Joe Driskill acted as chairman of the meeting and made a talk on the importance of the movement and mentioned that those who invested their money would not only be doing a good turn for the city of Eastland and the farmers and citizens of the rural communities, but would in all probability realize a return on their investment.

H. C. Davis made a report on the trips that were made to Graham to study a similar organization and pointed out where a poultry and turkey market alone would be well worth the $12,000 that is to be invested. He stated that the manager of the Graham market said that he had been running it for seven years and spent on an average of $200,000 a year for produce from within a radius of 50 miles of the city.

John M. Mouser, president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a talk in which he explained that the manager of the corporation would be selected by a board of directors who would be selected by the stockholders. In this way, it was pointed out, the investors themselves would have a voice and the only voice in selecting the men who would govern the corporation and the directors would be the ones who could hire and fire a manager.

and that he be not held responsible for its funeral expenses in case of sudden death en route or later on.
Ginger, who was not to be daunted by any conditions, pressed Patty into service and they two went out for it in Ginger's smart little Dido. And while Ginger drove back to Mill Rush at a snail's pace Patty led the bewildered animal which trembled with emotion at the outburst of laughter and an applause evoked by her unconventional tour.
Ginger ate, near beer and other bottled drinks were bought in large quantities and at the cheapest possible price for resale to customers and guests. Sandwiches entailed so much labor and required so many expensive ingredients that the sale price was prohibitive—the only market being the financially handicapped juniors—and cheap cookies and plain cakes were adopted as a substitute.
Ginger's early training stood her in good stead. She had a recipe for a particularly good and inexpensive brand of fruit cooky, one which had been a prime favorite with the Tollivers in the frugal old parsonage days.
By a strict mathematical process she figured out that these cookies if made up in large quantities on the gas stove at Doorndee—with Ginger cutting the raisins—cost exactly one and one-half cent each.
The cookies were large and filling and could be sold for five cents as fast as she would turn them out.
So whenever Ginger had a few hours' respite from the stirring activities at Mill Rush, she could usually be found flapping about in rubber-soled sneakers, without stockings, in the kitchen at Doorndee, enveloped in a big white apron, her bright bobbed hair entirely concealed beneath a big red handkerchief.
On a balmy morning during the first week of May she was so engaged. Gooby, at her direction, was chopping raisins by the pound. Ginger was carefully measuring ingredients into the mixing-bowl. There was a smudge of flour upon her flushed face, a streak of it across the red handkerchief that bound her brow. She was well into the sixth dozen when a step sounded upon the kitchen floor and a shadow fell across the room from the open door.
Gooby, who was opposite the door, raised her head. Ginger did not turn.

If a baseball player this season asks Bill Klem how he got that "school girl" complexion, he'll probably be ordered off the playing field. If truth be told, however, the veteran National League umpire will admit that it was sunshine, taken in large quantities in Miami Beach this winter. The photo above shows Klem practically down to his birthday suit and going through the motions of a Lobby Jones.

He carried favor with Ginger Ella right at the start by asking, and following, her advice in regard to rates, she deciding after careful consideration that 25 cents each way or 40 cents the round trip would be about right, with a reduction of five cents on each fare when more than five passengers were carried. When the work was under way and particularly hearty refreshments were held out as an inducement, he often carried as many as 10 or 12 each trip.
Day after day the fascinating work of rehabilitation went merrily on. As soon as the rooms were in fairly habitable condition, Ben and Jenky Brooks spent week-ends at the cottage, Ginger taking them out immediately at the close of school on Friday.
Cars that had been relegated principally to the graveyard of old motors years before, were towed out, oiled up a bit and forced back into noisy service. Discarded bicycles were unearthed from attic and cellar recesses, re-tired and put to work. CASTORIA
FIVE million modern mothers will tell you that children DO cry for Fletcher's Castoria. For mothers always give a few drops of this pure vegetable preparation when a child has any of the symptoms that tell of sluggish bowels, colic, or other upsets. When tiny tongues are coated and breath is bad. When a child is restless, irritable. Always soothing and comforting to an infant—yet it is effective for children in their teens. You never have to coax children to take Castoria; they love its taste. Be ready for the next case of sour stomach, constipation, or other need for Castoria.

THESE MEN CAUSED HOOVER'S BREAK WITH THE SENATE

NEA Washington Bureau

Here are the leading figures in the "power trust" controversy that has brought a bitter break between President Hoover and the insurgent Democratic coalition in the Senate. The upper photo shows the three voted to reconsider a favor they had discharged two subordinates who, senators say, had fought the "power trust" issue. Left to right, the commissioners are Marcel Garsaud of Louisiana, Clark L. Draper of Wyoming and George Otis Smith of Maine. Below are the two out-of-control employes—former Solicitor Charles A. Ressell (left) and William V. King, formerly chief accountant for the commission.

al pick-pockets. When the big American Legion parade was held in Boston last October plainclothes detectives were brought in from cities as far away as Chicago. Naturally, these officers were unacquainted with the faces of the best known Hub "dips," a severe handicap to their usefulness.

In 12 hours the rectigraph camera turned out 3,800 complete copies of both sides of the record cards of 25 pick-pockets likely to be operating among the crowds along the parade route. Each out-of-control employe carried with him photographs and full descriptions of the men he might expect to find among their criminal specialty.

Army Seeking Hostess Fund

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—No night club this side of Broadway has caught the attention of the United States Army in the question of hostesses. The Army has thirteen.

The fact—minus the night club angle, of course—came out during Congressional hearings on the Army's budget. The sum of $25,740 was asked to maintain them.

But there are further differences. The night club hostess is paid to lure the soldiers from naive pockets, while the Army hostess is paid for keeping them there. Just what the latter's duties are explained by Lieut. Col. H. H. Pielt, of the Adjutant General's office.

"The hostesses really meet a need," he said. "They are women who are stationed at the larger posts. When I was at Fort Monroe a couple of years ago they had a hostess there. She had the responsibility at that particular time of taking care of the boys when they came in."

"Her duty was to see that they got decent amusement. She arranged various social affairs for them. She would go around the neighborhood and get acquainted with nice girls. Have the girls come to camp, and then arrange to have the youngsters meet them at dances and amusements of that sort."

"She looked after the families of the boys who came to see them while they were in camp, and made arrangements to have them meet the boys."

FORT WORTH, Jan. 20.—Because of the advantageous economic situation in the southwest, the convention of Oklahoma and Texas shoe dealers here Feb. 5 to 11, is attracting national attention, according to the committee planning the conclave.

Ask Park Fund Of Lawmakers

AUSTIN, Jan. 20.—To establish and maintain four State parks in Texas with 100,000 acres, the 42nd Legislature will be asked for an appropriation of $1,250,000.

D. E. Colp of San Antonio, chairman of the State Park Board for the last six years without salary, is one of the chief proponents of the proposed legislation asking for the appropriation. He has circled the state inducing private individuals to contribute their lands gratis for State parks. The appropriation asked would provide four tracts, the largest of which is Palo Duro Canyon Park, 100,000 acres. The remaining three are Davis Mountains Park, 20,000 acres; Guadalupe Mountains and Carlsbad Cave Park, 25,000 acres, and Caddo Lake Park on the Texas-Louisiana line, 10,000 acres.

Much of the land has been offered free to the state. Options have been taken on lands in Palo Duro Canyon for 105,000 acres to insure selection at a reasonable expense. Texas owns the bed of Caddo Lake and the federal government owns it on the Louisiana side. Adjacent lands would probably have to be purchased.

Texas now has 42 State parks which have been donated. Fifty-three sites have been tentatively selected. It has been reported to owners through refusal of the state to accept them.

Sheriff Starts Kindness Rule

CLEVELAND, Jan. 20.—Sheriff "Hovey" John Sulzmann is planning to make of the Cuyahoga County jail, a place for contented prisoners through kindness.

He won the affections of his feminine charges by permitting them to smoke the second day after assuming office. The prosecution incurred the hostility of the anti-nicotine societies, but the sheriff refused to revoke the privilege.

Shortly thereafter Cleveland citizens were appealed to for games so that his wards could play parchee, backgammon, ping-pong, lotto, dominos, etc. Not to stint them at recreation, the sheriff's future was to issue an appropriate discarded radio sets and graphs.

Sheriff Holds A Liquor Pep

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Sheriff James F. Hixson is pending on "collage" against his deputies to curb the sale of Jefferson County boot. "I want us to get some spirit into the fight," he said. "If we do we'll be able to clean up the liquor habit in this county."

Characteristics Of Sterling Were Seen In Political Campaign In Which He Was Elected To His Office

Raymond Brooks
Political campaign in which Sterling was elected governor unusual in at least two particulars. Each of the aspects of the race revealed personality, individual characteristics of the man to be governor; and, in distinctive traits, was illuminating the type of man who will be the executive, the trend of thought, and the probable course of the political campaign.

If Bug Bites Big Leaguers

has become the winter friend of the Farrell brothers, Wesley and two of the American League's youngest baseball stars. They took game this winter and have been playing almost every day at public house near their farm home at Greensboro, N. C.

Sterling's Life From Boyhood One Of Success

Just before Ross Sterling, humble boatman of Galveston bay in his youth, outstanding business man and industrial leader who turned administrative experience to his state's service in his maturity, takes office as governor next Tuesday, an effort has been made to whip together the varied threads of his unusual career in a little study of the pattern he will bring into the chief state office.

It may be the study has appeared enthusiastic. It may have seemed to hunt only things to praise.

Rather, the result of the superficial analysis is this:

It finds Mr. Sterling elected to office.

He has been remarkably successful in private business on a big scale.

He has been engaged in economic phases of public service—head of the Houston port commission, chairman of the state highway commission.

He rendered service in these places that had won praise.

He made an unusual campaign for office, avoiding the usual political machinations.

He embodied the people's turn from political demagoguery in search of a capable business leader.

Policies he has started, or favored, since his election, have been hard-headed business policies, economic matters.

It all sums up into this: That everything up to date predisposes the state to look to him with confidence, and to expect successful leadership in the high governmental office.

And that it is up to him, and him alone, to make the record showing whether in the chief executive office he shall carry out the record of achievement that at this stage predisposes him in the direction of success comparable with another leader who came up from the everyday people—James Stephen Hogg.

Ross S. Sterling has been portrayed not as a politician, but as a psychologist capable of turning both the politician and the politician's bag of tricks to gain his practical objectives.

Instead of being a goal in itself, politics with him, the incoming governor has shown, even this early, is just an element of the complex field of his endeavors.

Economic welfare, not political expediency, is the organon of his life in public life as in private.

The man who next week will become governor of his native state, already has given many evidences of the way he will tackle state problems. A review of some of these will piece together a composite picture of Mr. Sterling in action as governor.

At the bottom, he has found that the man owning a little farm miles away from the highway should not be taxed, and maybe have his farm foreclosed for taxes, to build state highways. These highways, he has found, are state-wide matters, and should be paid for not merely by the state as a whole, but ultimately by "rent," that is, revenue from the users.

Highway financing is one aspect of tax reforms he favors—purely economic, totally non-political.

Yet Mr. Sterling was able to let

OUT OUR WAY

seasoned politicians, his opponents, will not be allowed to stand in its way.

Dimly, Mr. Sterling has told his friends that political activity for him and political pressure upon him would have no weight in winning public office from him; that the political high-pressure would hurt more than help their causes.

And he won such an evident approval from the people at home, that the politicians have had to admit their strongest weapon has been dulled against the armor of his practical business policy.

Transcending all the routine of the governor's daily grind of common sense duties, a policy that Mr. Sterling announced unofficially, but which he will carry into public office with him, is that of uniting the government as a moral force behind the manufacturing enterprises of Texas. "Feed every hungry mouth" in Texas is what it means. No one has an opportunity to make political capital out of unemployment and human misery, but as a plain, practical hard-headed measure to improve Texas business, increase Texas prosperity, stimulate the present trend of new industries to Texas, and to give the state better schools, better hospitals and better government, Mr. Sterling advanced his economic plan.

The plan is simply an encouragement to Texas people, in their own interest, to make Texas-made products; to build up the volume of Texas factories and put idle labor to work.

The three regional chambers of commerce were quick to back the plan, jointly with the manufacturers' associations of the state. A business headquarters has been set up; and the working out of the plan will be divided in credit among dozens of agencies. The idea was the important thing, and it came out of the wealth of business capacity and experience of Mr. Sterling.

A second fundamental economic improvement has been advanced, as reasonable, logical and stripped of the political fog into simple, plain clear good business, in Mr. Sterling's approval of splitting state taxes into semi-annual payments, Emergency legislation sponsored by Sen. Ben G. O'Neal of Wichita Falls will undertake to put the plan into effect for this year. It is probable that political quibbling will not be allowed to stand in its way.

This newspaper several months ago quoted an authorized statement that citizens' organizations were being formed back home in over two-thirds of the counties for direct action cooperation with the new governor in the harmonious and effective advancement of such legislative policies as he may advance. The organizations are forthcoming when the expression of public opinion is required to convince an uncertain legislator how his constituents feel on something about which he may be in doubt. In many cases the legislators are working in appreciative and wholehearted cooperation with these citizens' agencies.

This is an evidence of the non-political use of what may be considered one of the sharpest political tools.

One West Texas man summed up the incoming governor in a pungent sentence, saying, "He isn't a politician, but he'll drown 'em in politics if the politicians get to fighting him."

When the train came to a stop the crowd was ready to let Lincoln have it when my company of national guardsmen came up with drawn bayonets and made the people fall back."

"President-elect Lincoln walked around on the station platform until the train left, but no violence was done to him."
