Accused as Aide In Kidnaping

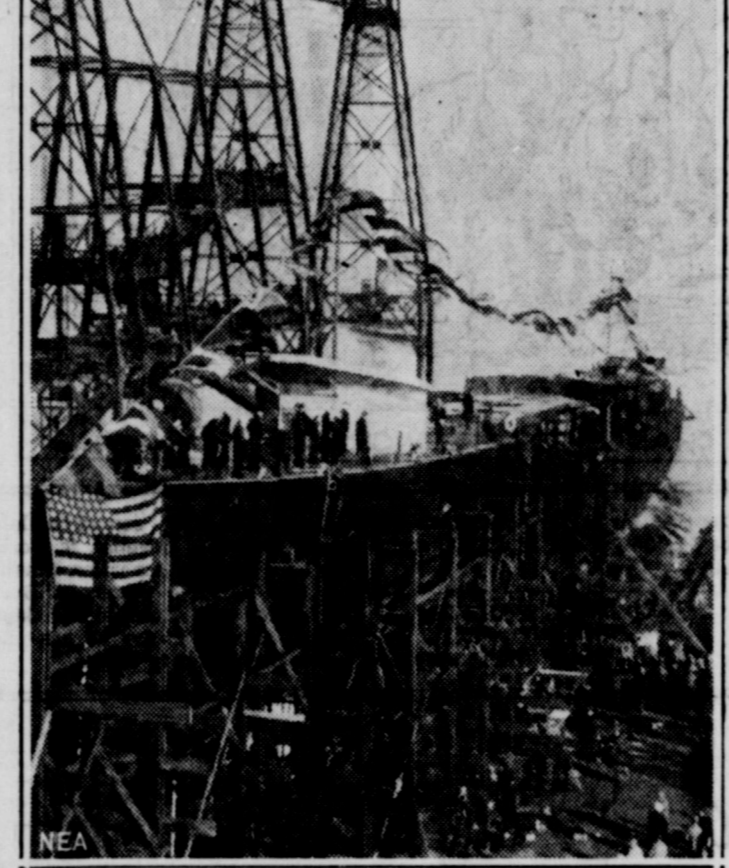

Charged with conspiracy in the Boettcher kidnaping, Mrs. Verne Sankey, above, has been rearrested and lodged in the same jail, at Sioux Falls, S. CONTROL OF COTTON URGED IN HOUSE BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The senate agriculture committee voted a favorable report on the Bankhead bill on control of cotton production. The bill as it will be reported, will carry provisions for forcing crop limitations through taxes rather than through a licensing system.

Under the taxation plan a prohibitive tax would be placed on any cotton gins in excess of a stipulated number to be set up by the secretary of agriculture as the prospect demand.

BASEBALL TO BE TALKED AT BANQUET HERE

In furtherance of the plans in motion a few days ago for a baseball club in Eastland this season a banquet will be given by the temporary organization at the chamber of commerce rooms Monday night. Barbecued calf and goat will be served free.

L. E. Spaulding, a former professional baseball player, was named temporary chairman and H. C. Davis was elected secretary-treasurer at a meeting held a few days ago. At the meeting Monday it is proposed to elect a permanent organization.

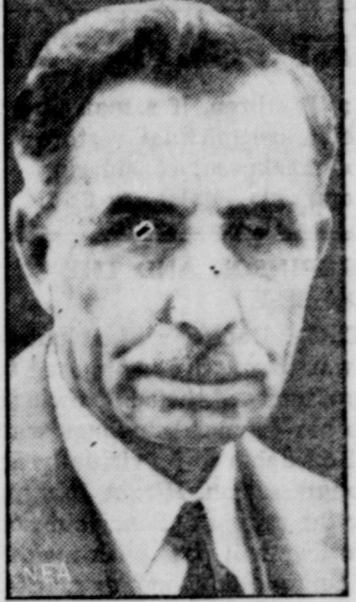

The Eastland Lions Club, Rotary club, chamber of commerce, Retail Merchants association and American Legion are each being invited to select one of a seven member board of directors. Fans outside of the civic organizations named are to be asked to name a director and the president of the association will be a member, making up the seven member board which will manage the association.

It is planned to secure sufficient donations to buy suits, balls, bats, etc., to start the season off. The committees working on this are meeting with splendid response.

As to a field on which to play. Two or three different parks are available. Any of them, however, will have to be fenced and grandstand erected. Plans by which this can be done at little expense are being considered.

Eastland has a number of professional and semi-professional players. Mr. Spaulding says, and plenty of other material to organize a good team.

WOMAN HELD AS 'BRAINS' OF COLEMAN GANG

Husband of "Madame Hendrix" is Also Sought By Fort Worth Police.

COLEMAN, Texas, Feb. 6.—A charge of complicity in the robbery of the First Coleman National bank was filed today against Mrs. H. E. Robards, held in jail in Fort Worth.

Vice President Sam Gray of the bank said Fort Worth officers also were closing in on one of the suspected robbers. He was described as a short, dark complexioned man. Meanwhile the county grand jury began an investigation today of the robbery.

FORT WORTH, Feb. 6.—State highway patrolmen and city detectives today arrested Carrie Robards, 46, suspected of being in the party which robbed the Coleman First National bank of $24,000.

The woman was arrested early today as she returned to a residence here. Officers had trailed her yesterday and last night in an effort to find her husband, who is also wanted.

The suspect was subjected to a grilling today but held her poise well and police were unable to obtain any information from her.

Chief of Police Lewis said the suspect also was a fortune teller who went under the name of Madame Marlene Hendrix. Reports emanating from Coleman said the woman was believed to be the "brains" of the bandit gang which held up the bank Friday, but police here could not make certain that belief.

Search for the husband, believed one of the three gunmen who staged the holdup, spread to Dallas as officers planned to look for the man in a hotel there.

Notified of the arrest, Coleman authorities told police officers would leave there with a warrant for the woman's return to Coleman to face charges.

Her arrest was the third in the search for the bandits. A man and woman known as John and Marie Newton are held in Austin in connection with the robbery.

Officers here believed the three men who robbed the bank split at once into pairs with three women, each couple fleeing in different directions with their share of the loot.

Further weight to the belief the woman arrested here was connected with the robbery was given, officers said, by the announcement of the sheriff at Coleman the woman had been seen frequently for several weeks in and near Coleman. Police believe she may have been mapping roads.

Henry Ford Raises Wages of Workers

LOWER MOTOR LICENSE FEES BEING SOUGHT

AUSTIN, Feb. 6.—Sen. W. R. Poage, Waco, today sought to amend the senate's automobile license fee bill to provide a permanent reduction of 20 per cent in the motor vehicle fees.

The bill under discussion set March 31 as the final date for paying license fees without penalty. Motorists with 1934 license plates now would be entitled to use them for 15 months before purchasing new licenses.

Thus, for the year 1934, a reduction of 20 per cent in the cost of licenses would be established from the standpoint of time. The amendment would specify that from April 1, 1935 the fees be cut 20 per cent in dollars and cents, thus making the reduction permanent.

Filling Station Operator Fined for Code Violation

FORT WORTH, Feb. 6.—S. R. Smith, filling station operator here was given a suspended $500 fine in federal court today on charges of violating the NRA oil code.

Smith pleaded guilty before U. S. Commissioner Newman to charges of paying an employe $7 for more than 73 hours work during a week. The fine was suspended on the stipulation Smith refrain from further code infractions.

ARMY STORES SALES TO BE INVESTIGATED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Secretary of War Dern today disclosed he had authorized a sweeping investigation by the department of justice into all phases of the war department commercial activities, both purchases of supplies and sales of surplus material.

He said the investigation had been ordered as result of loose talk in and out of the war department concerning the "power of certain lobbies" and rumors concerning Joseph Silverman's relations with the department in the purchase of surplus army goods.

One of the reports on which the secretary acted was to the effect that Silverman and his associates had a virtual monopoly in the purchase of surplus army goods for the past several years.

Farmers With Less Than Five Acres Can Sign Contract

Farmers producing five or less acres of cotton during the base period will be eligible to sign acreage reduction contracts for their entire acreage, or a portion of their acreage of not less than two acres, according to an amendment to an administrative ruling announced today by Cully A. Cobb, chief of the cotton section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The amendment, which according to Mr. Cobb was made numerous small producers requested that they be allowed to cooperate in the cotton adjustment program, reads as follows:

"Administrative Ruling No. 1, paragraph (e) is hereby amended to allow any producer on a farm having a base acreage of not more than five (5) acres but not less than two (2) acres to sign a contract for reduction of any whole number of acres not in excess of the base acreage for such farm, except that in no instance may the reduction be less than two (2) acres. For such acreage reduction the producer will receive rental payments and parity payments on forty (40) per cent of the average production as may be determined for the base acreage."

According to the new ruling the producer of not more than five or less than two acres of cotton may rent his entire acreage to the secretary of agriculture and receive parity payments.

"The amendment establishes a practical basis on which the small-acreage producer may cooperate, as many have indicated is their desire to do, in the cotton adjustment program," said Mr. Cobb. "On some acreages of less than five acres if only 40 per cent is taken out many farmers would have only a bale and a remnant of production left, and this would place them at a disadvantage. Also, previous to this ruling, farmers had to have at least five acres, because of the restriction that reduction must be at least two acres, or they couldn't sign up, but now such farmers can contract for reduction of any whole number of acres, going entirely out of cotton production, if they choose."

Fist Fights Break Out In French Chambre Deputies

PARIS, Feb. 6.—While fist fighting broke out in the chambre of deputies and 15,000 police guarded the streets against threatened rioting, the government of Premier Daladier was given a vote of confidence today by the chamber.

Daladier, seeking to shorten debate, risked his cabinet life on a proposal to reduce the number of interpolations from 18 to 4 and won out with powerful support of the left.

The chamber was in an uproar as the individual deputies voted.

Damper Put on After-Midnight Saturday Dances

FORT WORTH, Tex.—The damper has been put on after midnight Saturday revelry in Fort Worth dance halls and night clubs.

Exercising official prerogative, Chief of Police Henry B. Lewis cited a city ordinance against operation of nightclubs or dance halls after 1 a. m. on Sunday mornings, and with the citation sent an effective reminder to the doors.

A lusty howl went up from many revelers and imbibers when police entered several clubs amid dancing and joviality to enforce the chief's orders. Owners, however, quickly acquiesced and early Sunday morning night club festivities have passed into oblivion.

At least one nightclub had its best hours after 1 a. m. on Sundays, putting on its floor show and attracting "night owls" who had left other dances and clubs which were obeying the city ordinance without the chief's precautions.

Capitol Press Room Has Many Queer Inquiries

AUSTIN, Tex.—This is a story of the press room, one of the few departments of the State Capitol that seldom "breaks into print."

The greater portion of the capitol news corps has its headquarters in a crowded room adjacent to the State Library. The location may, or may not, have something to do with the strange inquiries which sometimes intrude.

There was the instance of the young legislator who had come to Austin for his first session of the Legislature. He had traveled a long way from out in Southwest Texas. He was tired. His clothes were wrinkled.

He stopped at the doorway of the press room and looked about in wonder. "Where are the machines?" he inquired.

"The pressing machines. Isn't this where the legislators get their clothes pressed?"

On another occasion newspapermen were very busily engaged in transmitting stories on the government's call for a special session of the legislature. A young woman, petite but worried, stopped the proceedings to inquire if there were two "d's" in bois d'arc.

Shortly after the change of administrations, a middle-aged man in search of political plums looked hurriedly in. "Who appoints the men who work here?" he asked.

His curiosity was appeased only by a full explanation that members of the news corps are not state employes, that their paychecks are entirely independent of the state and of any of its departments.

Once a masculine voice pleaded by telephone for the press corps' help in locating his girl friend, "A blonde, tall, and with a mole on the left side of her nose."

MAIL CONTRACT SCANDAL IS THREATENING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Department of justice agents moved today toward an investigation of Hoover administration air mail contracts, dealings which may shock the nation more than the famous Teapot Dome oil scandal of 1924.

The United Press learned from a reliable source criminal prosecution was being considered as a result of findings of the special senate air mail committee.

Meanwhile, a former "little cabinet" officer under Hoover and major air line company officials awaited a hearing on charges of contempt of the senate.

They were William P. MacCracken Jr., former assistant secretary of commerce; the president of Western Air Express; his secretary, and the vice president of Northwest Airways.

Plowed-Under Beans Now Ready to Pick

MERCEDES, Tex.—Another "true story" concerning the amazing fertility of the Lower Rio Grande Valley's alluvial soil came to light here on a 20-acre vegetable farm of J. R. Paxton, Mercedes shipper.

Paxton planted a bean "patch" last fall on the acreage near Donna. When the beans were ready for harvesting, market prices had dropped to such a low level that there was no profit in picking the crop. Paxton plowed the beans under and replanted the acreage to carrots late in December.

The carrots were in perfect condition when inspected recently by Paxton, but much to his amazement, he found the beans well ready for picking early this month.

MAJORITY LEADER ROBINSON AND THE JOHNSON BILL

Majority Leader Joseph Taylor Robinson of Arkansas is opposed to cancellation of war loans. He is opposed to repudiation by European governments of their borrowings. He predicts that legislation to bar financial dealings with nations which have defaulted on debts to be virtually assured of enactment by the congress. Sen. Hiram Johnson of California is responsible for the proposal. Sen. Robinson predicts that the Johnson bantling will pass with modifications. If so, it will close the United States money market to all countries which have not paid their debts. Under the proposed changes the legislation would apply solely to nations behind in their debts to the United States government "but not to those countries owing private citizens or corporations only."

Sen. Johnson is a republican-progressive who gave unqualified support to the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932. He will be a candidate for re-election this year. According to Washington advices the New Deal administration hopes for the re-election of Johnson and Sen. Norris of Nebraska, another progressive republican who gave his support to Alfred E. Smith in 1928 and went all the road for Roosevelt and Garner in 1933. More than 5,000,000 former republicans in the states lying between the Allegheny mountains and the Pacific ocean followed the flag of Roosevelt and assisted in placing Roosevelt and Garner in the proudest po in the gift of the American people. They were good democrats two years ago. All the signs indicate that they will be good democrats this year and perhaps in 1936.

KINGFISH LONG AND KINGFISH BURKE 'HOLD A SESSION'

Sen. Huey Pryor Long of Louisiana has returned to Washington. He lost in his battle with the regulars of New Orleans. A committee of the house of representatives has declared the Kemp seat vacant; that the widow of the dead congressman is not entitled to the prize; that Sanders who made the race as an anti-Long democrat, is on the outside looking in.

Hard knocks for the big kingfish but he has four or five years to serve in the United States senate. He never knows when he is whipped. He will be back again to make life interesting in the Pelican state. According to a New Orleans AP correspondent, Ulric J. Burke old regular leader of New Orleans famous first ward democracy, paid Kingfish Long a call before his departure from New Orleans. Burke described the interview as "strictly personal." New Orleans political circles circulated a report that Burke handed Long a loaded revolver cartridge as his calling card but the old guardsman of the Mayor Walmsley tribe of democrats refused to confirm the report. This is the Burke version of the conference of two: "Sen. Long and I had an interview this morning which was satisfactory to me and probably to him. If it had not been, Louisiana would have had a new senator and the old regulars a new leader in the first ward."

The code duello is not dead in the Creole state. All in all, Kingfish Long continues to be the best copymaker of the period. A reminder that in the campaign where the Longites and the regulars battled for supremacy Kingfish paid his respects to Burke. Indeed, it is said that it was some thorough skinning of the thick hide of the old regular chieftain. Well, Burke came back. "You pays your money and you takes your choice."

The safest and best rule to follow when speaking of your home town is that if you can't say anything good about it don't say anything at all.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

F. L. KATES, publisher of the Sheridan (Wyo.) Pioneer, says:

"Did you ever stop to think how we know what we are buying? How we know what Del Monte tomatoes look like unless we see their picture? It isn't enough to hear about them. How do we know a Ford from a Chevrolet? Certainly the prices don't tell us. The pictures of the cars do. "A lovely pair of sheer hose—a smart brand of perfume—a fur coat and an ice box—to completely satisfy the buyer must be seen. Descriptions alone don't turn the trick. Prices tell only part of the story.

"And don't forget that what is written need never be lost. What we hear we forget. What flickers before our eyes on a silver screen is relegated to an uncertain memory. But what is in black and white can always be referred to, looked at, studied and judged. Newspaper advertising is a vital, component part of selling anything."

Married Flirts

BEGIN HERE TODAY GYPSY and DAVID were married on the same day as LILA HOTEL and DAVID BLISS but their wedding is a society event while theirs is a simple one. While Lila lives in luxury Gypsy has to struggle to keep her head above water. She keeps her job teaching and she teaches in a school. After DAVID'S birth she is extremely busy, caring for him and for her home. Tom is frequently away in the evening and Gypsy suspects he is interested in VERA GRAY, who works in the same office. "I'll wait here," Gypsy says as she intends to divorce her husband and marry a R. K. O. GUY. Gypsy calls Marko and gives him a message. Tom overhears the conversation. He and Gypsy quarrel but are reconciled.

IT would be fun, Gypsy said herself on the Tuesday following their reconciliation, to go down and surprise Tom at lunch time. Somehow she never seemed to have time or spirit for the small honeymoon gayeries anymore. She dressed in her best, the new gray suit, the post-stamp that perched on her shoulder and blew chaff and papers in the streets. The sun sent slanting shafts of sunlight into the gray suit. It was a perfect color for an adventure. She went up in the bronze elevator, smiling secretly at the own daring. The girl at the information desk was new and did not recognize her. She didn't give her name. Was Mr. Weaver in? The girl, who had the hair and shoulders of a wax mannequin, spoke softly into a telephone and informed her that Mr. Weaver was just on his way out to lunch. "What name?" "I'll wait here," Gypsy sat in the deep divan which swallowed up her smallness. In the dim light her gray costume was scarcely noticeable against the taupe background. Presently she started to her feet. But as she emerged from the corridor she saw he was not alone. A tall, glint-haired girl was with him. He had her arm and was speaking to her earnestly. They seemed utterly absorbed. They did not see her as they stood waiting for the down elevator. Gypsy's heart felt as though an icy hand were squeezing it. She sat perfectly still as the elevator door clanged open and shut and Tom's laugh rang out as the car shot downward. The information clerk glanced up curiously as she rose to go.

"Why, Mr. Weaver left just now. Didn't you see him?" "No—I—L—" she floundered. "I'll be back later." "Anything I can do?" The wax mannequin was helpful. Gypsy's eyes wandered past her. Anything she could do? No. There was nothing anyone could do for her today. She had trusted him so completely, so utterly, and yet she must believe the evidence of her eyes. How absorbed he had been! She had been right—she had been right all the time! She walked almost down Broadway. Past Trinity churchward with doves wheeling in the sunshine, past block after block of stone facades and plate glass and table d'hotel restaurants and haberdashers.

A HOODED subway entrance at Park Place reminded her that she must be home before it was time for Elsa to leave. She ran down the stairs and clicked past the turnstile, paying her fare. There was the baby to be thought of. If all else failed, if her world crumbled to dust around her here was always David, small and pink and trusting and fond. She never knew, later, how she got through the dreadful day her throat would be dry, her art would beat thickly and unavailingly when she thought of her husband's name. What if he said she say to him? How? She put on her gray coat and soft, shapeless hat and went. Gypsy nudged the baby and carried him down to the ambulator garage in the basement of the building and trundled a cart out into the sunny street. When she let herself into the apartment at 5 o'clock the telephone was ringing shrilly. She dived carefully down upon the bed—he was peacefully asleep and hurried to answer it. "It's your voice," she said. "Look, dear, is Elsa's night in?" "No. Why?" She thought, so re talking commonplaces while she deceiving me and my heart's aking. "Oh, good gosh, I asked Gypsy to dinner before I thought, sorry, darling. What shall I do?" "You mean Hunt?" "Yes. Meet him outside the Central. Hanover an hour ago and it's a good idea at the time. I've been trying to get you . . ." This was reprieve, Gypsy thought, both for him and for her. He steeled her voice. "Oh, don't take too long," she told him. "Let him come alone." "That's a good girl. That's a girl." Gypsy put the phone down with unnecessary vigor. So she was a good girl and a darling, was she? Well, she'd show him!

It was almost twelve when he rose to go, with apologies for having stayed so late. He held Gypsy's hand for a fraction of a moment longer than courtesy demanded. Admiration shone from his eyes. "It's been great," he told her. "Will you both come and dine with me some night and see a play?" "We'd love to," she felt a surge of genuine liking for him. He was simple, direct and honest. You felt he'd never let you down. As Tom was doing. When he returned from seeing Hunt to the elevator Gypsy was already at the dishes. He came out into the kitchen and took her by the shoulders. "Look here, baby, you're dead. I'll pile these up and you can leave them for Elsa."

SHE slipped out of his grasp. She whirled, facing him. "Take your hands off me!" "Was it really she who said those ugly words? They echoed in the quiet room." "What's the matter, darling?" She flung herself back to the sink, running hot water into the enamel pan, winking back the fierce hot tears. "You're asking me that!" Tom's tone was patient, inquiring. "Honestly, if I knew what this was all about, I didn't know you were going to be so burned up about a guest for dinner. Besides, I thought you liked . . ." "That's got nothing to do with it," she said thickly and painfully. "Hunt's grand. I'm fond of him. It's you . . ." "What have I done now?" "Oh, this can't be us . . . it can't be, ran Gypsy's wild thoughts. Quarreling . . . shouting at each other . . . without dignity or love or tenderness. "I saw you today," she gave him a level glance. She continued to wash cups, meticulously and daintily, without being conscious of what she was doing. "Saw me? Where?" He reddened slightly. "With Vera Gray." "Ah, that! Honestly, sweetheart, I would have told you about it before if we'd been alone. But she would not let him go on. "Never mind lying," she said. "It doesn't matter. Only—I know where I stand now. I'm parked with the baby and the house and everything. You can go and do as you please, lunch and dine and call it business. Decide me. Lie to me. You know I'm safe at home." "It was business, I tell you," Tom almost shouted. "I had to have a conference with her. I couldn't get out of it. She was dashing out to Queens to see this chap. The Nasik people. Lie to me. You know I'm safe at home." Gypsy supplied bitterly. "You had her arm—she acted as if she owned you. You both walked right past me—?" "Where? How? What use to go over the old ground? He had broken his word. That was all she needed to know. (To Be Continued)

Admiral Is Back To Scenes of His Early Experience

By REUEL S. MOORE
 United Press Staff Correspondent
MANILA.—Three decades have brought many changes to the Far East, and particularly the Philippines, according to Admiral Frank B. Upham, newly appointed commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet.
 Seated on the after deck of the U.S.S. Isabel, trim gunboat which serves as the flagship when the fleet is in winter quarters, Upham looked out over the blue waters of Manila Bay to the palm-lined Dewey Boulevard skirting the shore, and Manila's rising skyline of hotels and clubs in the vicinity of the Luneta.
 "That was a marsh when I last saw it," he said.
 He was referring to the days of 1904, just after the close of the insurrection, and only a few years after the American flag was first raised over the Philippines.
 He left the islands that year as

Heads Nation's Manufacturers

Elected to guide the destiny of the nation's manufacturers is Clinton L. Bardo (above) of Camden, N. J., president of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation. He was named to succeed Robert L. Lund of St. Louis as head of the National Association of Manufacturers at a meeting of the board of directors.

a young officer and did not return again until he became chief in command of the Asiatic fleet, with a rank of full admiral.
 In his cruises ashore since his arrival, Upham found that Manila's new front on the bay revealed the progress which he observed elsewhere.
 Cavite, across one arm of the bay from Manila, where the naval station is located, had changed but little, the admiral declared.
 It is a picturesque old Spanish city, which aroused many memories in the admiral's mind.
 In looking over the landmarks between Cavite and Manila, Upham visited an old church at Las Pinas, where there is an organ made entirely of bamboo pipes, more than 100 years old.
 Other recollections showing a sharp contrast between affairs then and today included an account of a visit to Vladivostok prior to the Spanish-American War, to participate in a coronation celebration of Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Thirty years has seen the passing of the czars and the rise of Communism in Russia.
 In those days the fleet based mostly at Yokohama, for the American flag did not then fly over the Philippines.
 The Whangpoo was so shallow that the big warships could not get up the river to Shanghai.
 Upham, in company with his predecessor, Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, served on the Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship, in the battle of Manila Bay, and returned to the United States in 1899. Upham came back to Oriental waters on the historic battleship Oregon for a tour of duty from 1902 until 1904.

One Resident of Old Cattle Town Is Still Alive

TASCOSA, Tex. — Once the boom cattle town of the Panhandle, Tascosa is nothing but a memory now. But the place has two memorials—one mute, the other living—of the rollicking days when the town was a cowboy's paradise of gaming places and drinking houses.
 On a bleak hill that overlooks the bank of the Canadian River where the town once stood are 29 unkept graves, the history of which give a good idea of the sort of town Tascosa was in the old days.
 Known as Boothill, the forgotten graveyard is the last resting place of 29 men who died and were buried with their boots on.
 The last three men claimed by Boothill were killed in a single brawl, March 21, 1886. They were victims of the famous feud between the LIT and the Lone Star ranches. Only four of the graves are marked.
 Less than two dozen live in Tascosa now, and only one of them saw the town flourish and dwindle and saw Boothill claim its victims from time to time. She is Mrs. Mickey McCormick, who was a belle of the town in its boom days.
 Dwelling alone in a two-room 'dobie, the 79-year-old woman lives on memories of the past—when she was young and beautiful and when Tascosa was the cowman's center of the Panhandle country.
 It was Mrs. McCormick and her husband, Mickey, who served Pat Garrett with a big turkey dinner immediately after the famous sheriff disposed of Billy the Kid.

Texas Has a Big Expense to Carry on Government

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Texas with capitals of many other states closer to numerous county seats than Austin, has a big expense in carrying government to the people.
 Reports show the last fiscal year's traveling expense of state officials and employees was nearly a million dollars. Exact total was $977,835.
 This is an increase over the former year but a decrease over the costs of two years previous despite the extra travel expense occasioned by a $40,500,000 highway program and field campaigns to enforce gasoline, oil and cigaret tax collections.
 Included is the travel expense of the state's force of 120 motor police, whose chief duty is traveling. Gasoline, tire and motorcycle repairs for them cost $58,705.
 Figures compiled by the state comptroller combined with those of Chief Accountant Gordon Lloyd of the state highway department show the following total for all state departments:
 Rail and bus fares, $79,463; mileage on personal cars, $335,449; rooms, $108,040; meals, $156,733; gasoline, tires and repairs, $205,337; other traveling expenses, $36,357.
 Items show that the casting of the state electoral college vote for President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner cost $1,018, of which $966 was mileage of electors. The Hospital for Crippled and Deformed Children had no travel expense. Gonzales state park was next low with a total of $5.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative
 Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?
 The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.
 The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.
 The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.
 A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given to the youngest child.
