ANOTHER BIG LOAN FOR THE UNIVERSITY

Washington wires carried the news to The Austin American that the University of Texas building program has been assured by a federal loan and Beauford A. Jester of Corsicana, chairman of the board of regents, confirmed all that the Washington correspondents had placed in the record of daily events in the new capital, on the banks of the Potomac, of the republic of George Washington. An agreement has been made whereby the university of Texas will receive a loan of $1,200,000 plus a grant not to exceed 30 per cent of the labor and materials from the federal government for the construction of a new main building and the completion of the library of the university. Chairman Jester has made the announcement that the contract will be signed and executed at a meeting of the board of regents at Austin the coming Saturday. Moreover, the loan and grant is not to exceed $1,633,000 from the government, and $167,000 of the $500,000 bond bequest left by the late Major George W. Littlefield will be used in this $1,800,000 project. A reminder that the project calls for a four-story administration building, replacing the old main building; complete the front of the library and finish the tower at the rear of the present U. T. library unit. According to the terms of the government contract, the administrative office of the university will be housed in the new main building.

Congratulations to the board of regents of the university. Congratulations to citizens of Austin who are not regents and senators and representatives of Texas who gave powerful aid to the regents in winning the desired results—in the shape of coin for the completion of the building program of a great institution of learning which should be the pride of all Texans as well as educators and students of the American world.

THOMAS B. LOVE BREAD BOND PLAN BOBS UP

Away back in early winter time Thomas B. Love advised that the life insurance companies of Texas purchase the bread bonds. Now the advocates of the repeal of the Robertson life insurance law are in evidence again. Like the ghost of Banquo they are ever bobbing up. All an out-of-the-state life insurance company has to do is to comply with the provisions of the Texas law, obtain a permit and conduct business in a business-like manner according to the provisions of the law. So that's that.

The necessities of life seem to be tempting targets for the revenue hunters. The people must have them and, therefore, they are the most readily productive source of revenue. Such taxes just make living harder for the average person and will inevitably turn out to be a boomerang where any government or state uses such foolish means of filling its coffers.

Some people should use their "Think Caps" more often. If they did, they could save more money. A lot of people are always thinking they will start saving tomorrow, but that tomorrow never comes. They should start saving today. That's easy. One of the best ways to save is by reading the newspaper advertisements and buying where the best buys are.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

G. K. LE FEVRE, advertisement manager of the London (England) Daily Mirror, says:

"That great American, Thoreau, considered that the advertisement columns of a newspaper were always of more interest to him than the news columns.

"A craftsman himself, he held in sympathy those who offered for sale the work of hands and brain. This exalted and detached view of a highly technical branch of modern commerce awaits an exponent who will more speedily elevate to ethical dignity a fast developing science of ill-understood beginnings.

"It is by no means unlikely, and indeed I think I see evidences of it, that the advertisement columns of the newspaper will be looked at by readers for excellent prose and art of a very high order which hitherto has been the domain of the journalist.

"All this has a direct effect on selling. The delegation of 'pep' to the journalist and the obvious acquisition of dignity by the most desirable of advertisers is all to the benefit of the manufacturers who wish to 'stay out.'

"The whole of business is dependent upon credit and confidence, and I feel certain that the best way of establishing these is to follow this new trend in sales-talk presentation through the medium that always has, and always will be the most powerful stimulant to purchasing and selling—the newspaper!"

THE STREETS OF PARIS

Married Flirts

BEGIN HERE TODAY GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married on the same day as LILA HOTELING and DEREK BLISS but Lila's wedding is a society event while Gypsy's is very simple.

While Lila lives in luxury Gypsy has to struggle to keep expenses within Tom's income. She keeps her job teaching until she learns she is to have a baby. After David's birth she is extremely busy, caring for him and for her home.

Tom is frequently away in the evening and Gypsy begins to get interested in VERA GRAY. One day she sees them going to lunch together. She is heart-broken and refuses to listen to his explanations.

Lila confesses to Gypsy that she intends to divorce Derek and marry MARY WARD BROUGHTON, richer and older.

Gypsy is seriously injured in a motor accident and she and Tom rush to the hospital home. While Gypsy remains there, desperately worried, Vera continues to visit her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV No one met Tom Weaver at the station that night. He swung up the steep street away from the station, a frown creasing his brow. Of course he hadn't expected Gypsy to come . . . but he did fear the news that might greet him at the big house in Upper Dean street.

The spring twilight was full of pleasant sounds. Birds chirped in the budding trees and children played in the hedged yards, mad with release after the long winter. Supper smells drifted in the crisp air. And in a quiet room a man lay dying.

The nurse came and went. The doctors touched and looked and shook their heads. And the wife, white and stubborn, refused to accept their verdict. As Tom came into the hall he heard Mrs. Morell saying in a clear voice, "It's all nonsense. I tell you, he's going to get well."

Her eyes, Tom thought, were un-naturally bright and her color feverish. Gypsy, in the background, looked white and strained. He went to kiss her and she said quietly, "We can't do a thing with her. She's angry with us all . . ."

Maybe she's right, Tom thought. Maybe she knows better than the rest. But after he had talked to Dr. Bannerman he became imbued with a sense of hopelessness. Death struck at you in such a cruel way. It made life naked, terrifying.

The long night began to wail by. The patient was surprising them all with his vitality. He was clinging stubbornly to life although he had not as yet opened his eyes. Mrs. Morell refused to go to bed. She looked at them with scorn when they suggested it.

"Sleep!" she said with bright, contemptuous eyes. "Why, I want to be here when he wakes."

Gypsy's fearful eyes sought Tom's. When he woke indeed! Tom played patience—he had to do something. The atmosphere of the house was oppressive. Dread made the undercurrent and the low voices were surcharged with it. Gypsy could not sit still. She kept getting up and going to the door, as though there was something she could do. The baby had long since been tucked into his crib.

IT was 10—it was 11. Suddenly they heard the nurse's running feet above. Tom vaulted the stairs. The tall night nurse, shaken out of her professional composure, stared down at him.

"I—think he's going," she said. "Will someone call the doctor?" Gypsy had heard. She was on the step below. Her dark eyes were enormous. "I'll call him," she said, frozen. "You look after Mother."

They were in the room now. The solitary light burned dimly under its extra shade. The patient was conscious now after the long spell of silence. He tossed and muttered on his pillow. His thin hands plucked at the coverlet.

It seemed hours, although it was actually only a matter of minutes, before the doctor came. A doctor, Gypsy thought, was a little like God; you expected too much of him. He bustled into the room, tall and stooped and beginning to be a little portly, his eyeglasses dangling from a thin chain.

He put an exploring hand on Harvey Morell's wrist. He bent down, the stethoscope adjusted, and assumed the listening crouch. He straightened and his eyes sought those of the nurse. "When did the change come?"

"Ten minutes ago, doctor. . . ." "Ah!"

"Why don't they do something, Gypsy thought wildly? Why do they stand calmly around? What good are they? She was grateful for Tom's nervousness. It was something to hold to in this terrific hour."

"The doctor turned to Mrs. Morell. Was it possible that his worst fear showed encouragement? He said, very low, "You've been a good soldier, Louise. I think perhaps you've kept him here. . . ."

"You mean . . ." She pressed her handkerchief to her lips. Doctor, give me too much hope, Doctor."

"I'm not sure," he told them all slowly. "But I think he's taken a turn for the better. . . ."

IT was a long, slow struggle, that convalescence. Gypsy and Tom moved back to the apartment in the middle of the second week to take up their own problems again. By that time Harvey Morell was sitting up, propped by pillows, in the big four poster. The morning before she went back to the city Gypsy had a talk with her father. The nurse had left the day before and Gypsy had brought him up his mid-morning cup of broth. All the windows were opened wide this morning to the bright spring sunshine. The curtains moved fitfully and just below the sill at Gypsy's elbow an old gnarled lilac bush had burst unexpectedly into blossom.

"Grand day!"

Her father nodded, his dark face smiling. "You're leaving us?"

"This afternoon," she told him. "It will be less work all around. I feel I can safely trust you to Mother."

"Yes, of course. Why?"

"I just wondered."

She flushed. Daddy was smart. You seldom fooled him about anything. Had he noticed the last time he had been to see them and brought her and Tom?

"Of course, I'm all right. Haven't I got everything in the world?"

"I guess so."

"Just don't you worry about anything but getting strong. I feel I can safely trust you to Mother."

New Gas Tax Law
Has Recovered
Millions of Dollars

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Texas' new gas tax enforcement law, which has been recovering millions in hitherto-stolen state revenues since its enactment last March, stood on firm ground today, its constitutionality upheld by the court of civil appeals in its first "test case." Validity of the law was attacked Jan. 1 by the Owl Oil & Refining company, whose permit had been cancelled by Comptroller George H. Sheppard for alleged failure to comply with provisions of the statute. The refinery countered by obtaining a temporary injunction in Travis county district court, restraining the comptroller and the attorney general from enforcing permit or bond provisions of the law, as well as its criminal clauses. The state promptly appealed. The court of civil appeals, in a sweeping opinion written by Chief Justice J. W. McClendon, upheld the law's constitutionality on all of the disputed points, set aside the order of the lower court and dissolved the injunction. In upholding the permit and bond clauses of the law, Justice McClendon called them enforcement measures to help collect a tax "peculiarly subject to evasion and fraudulent defeat in its collection." Criminal penalties for evasion, ranging from a minimum of $100 fine to a maximum of two years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine, drew this comment from the court: "It can hardly be seriously urged that there is anything excessive, cruel or unusual in the prescribed penalties."

OUT OUR WAY

First Auto Show
Was Held in 1805

By United Press
PHILADELPHIA.—The first automobile show ever held in America took place in Center Square, the present site of City Hall, in the summer of 1805, some "fact-hounds" here have learned. Oliver Evans, who was about 50 years old at the time, was the inventor of the first machine to move under its own power. He had worked for years to perfect his steam engine. Then he learned that the city authorities wanted mud removed from the banks of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers. Evans completed his engine, mounted it on a crude wagon frame and prepared to demonstrate its value as a digger. He decided to take it across the city so that the people would have an opportunity to see his invention. In those days Center Square which had been used as a drill ground by British, American and French troops in the Revolution, was the favorite promenade of the society folk of the city. Evans decided that would be the place to exhibit his "horseless carriage." An advertisement in the Philadelphia Gazette of July 13, 1805, describes the affair: "The original wheels and axles have been unable to hold the weight of the Oruktor Amphibolis, or any Amphobolis Digger," the paper said, "the workmen have agreed to construct heavier wheels and axles so that the public may see my machine in exhibition. It has been agreed that all monies received from generous persons coming to inspect the machine will be divided between the workmen and the inventor, who pledges himself to use the money to perfect other machines which he has arranged in his mind." SWALLOWS HIS UTENSILS TRIESTE.—Giovanni Rencel, 35, was so hungry when he came home from work that he "wolfed" his food, then complained of pains in his stomach. Surgeons found that he had swallowed a spoon and a fork. The suspended warden of the New York city prison that was run by gangsters now wants to retire on a pension. At least, he's sure to retire.

Representatives In Lower House Are Still Learning Things

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Some members of the state legislature still are old-fashioned enough to talk about a bogie man instead of a big bad wolf. Representative Ben F. Vaughan, Greenville, did so in asserting that he had become tired of having Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins held up as a bogie man every time it was desired to scare the legislature into making more appropriations. Representatives Penrose Metcalfe, San Angelo, and J. Manley Head, Granbury, are among applicants taking state bar examinations at Austin. Between examinations they function in the house. Metcalfe is a ranchman and Head a school teacher. Representative J. W. Hunt Jr., of Tarrant county, admits he is not an authority on diplomatic correspondence. Therefore he graciously accepted a senate amendment to his resolution endorsing William J. Fanning, Sulphur Springs, for "ambassador to Czechoslovakia." The resolution being sent to Washington asks that Fanning be named "minister."

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

"—MY KIND OF TRAVELING TAKES HEALTHY NERVES, TOO"

Earle W. Schoonmaker of Nutley, N. J. travels thousands of miles every year as a commuter. He says: "I think I know something of nerve strain, too. Breakfast, the 8:04, the same trip again at the end of a hard day. I'm a constant smoker. My brand? Camels, of course. I can enjoy Camels steadily and I never have to worry about jangled nerves. Camels are the mildest cigarette. They've got what I call real flavor!"

Thomas Olsen, who sailed a 26-foot boat across 9,000 miles of ocean, says: "There's one cigarette that I can smoke steadily without getting nervous or 'fed up' with smoking. I mean Camels. They taste mild—never flat—and there is a delicate flavor to Camel's costlier tobacco that certainly does set Camels apart from other cigarettes."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Most all of us know jangled nerves by these telltale signs—jumping when doors slam, scolding, worrying, nail-biting, frowning, foot-tapping. No wonder "nerves" are being put forward as one of the great questions of the day affecting men and women in every station of life. If you are the nervous type, check up on your eating, your sleeping, your recreation. And be on the safe side about smoking—take up Camels now.

Thousands daily are turning to Camels. And finding a new zest for smoking... an enjoyment that each Camel refreshes and renews. Enjoy Camels as often as you wish. Your taste will always respond to their finer flavor. And they never get on your nerves.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt will continue to walk the tightrope he has stretched between the right and the left.

His balancing act still is the envy of his enemies and the delight of his friends.

Gracefully poised in midair, he feeds the liberals with one hand and the conservatives with the other.

As 1933 closed, the president had given the liberals complete control of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

In the few days of 1934 he has tossed these assurances to liberals: Building of a "new structure," "permanent readjustment" of many of our social and economic arrangements.

And to conservatives: "Reasonable profits," no arbitrary government dictatorship for industry, balanced budget for 1935-36.

Senators from the 11 western states in which Uncle Sam still holds public lands are griping bitterly because Senator Bob Wagner of New York is accepting chairmanship of the Senate's Public Lands committee.

Behind the scenes rages the old fight of the states for cessation of the federal lands within their borders—170,000,000 acres.

The Taylor bill, already passed by the House, embodies that program. The westerners think the administration persuades Wagner to take the chairmanship so as to push the Taylor bill, whereas one of their own number would have blocked it.

In any race with Winooka, my usual mind bet of five cents will be on Chase Me, if the weights are equal and the distance a mile and a quarter. The gelding that caught and passed Mate in the home stretch of the O'Hara handicap last fall can have some of my mental money any time he faces the barrier.

Crowd Note: WINTER crowds have been seening basketball this year as never before. Notre Dame's sensational team has shown a hard some profit on the season so far. The University of Iowa defeated Wisconsin before a record crowd of 11,000 at Iowa City. There are moments when basketball is very dull to watch. Such a situation occurred in the Iowa-Wisconsin game. With a seven point lead and five minutes to play, Iowa played a slow, deliberate stalling game, seeking to cinch victory by protecting its lead. But the home crowd liked it just the same.

Report London Is Free of Crimes

By United Press
LONDON.—London is enjoying an almost unprecedented immunity from serious crime.

Since the beginning of the year, no big crime in the metropolitan area has called for the attention of Scotland Yard. Even the minor criminal seems to have suspended his activity.

It is true that the automobile thief is still very much alive, but there is now no market for stolen automobiles. The only thing to be done with a stolen car is to break it up and sell the different parts as "spares" for nominal sums.

Between 12 and 15 automobiles are reported to the police each night as having been stolen, but most of them have been recovered. Usually they have only been "borrowed" for joy-rides.

"To a very large extent the decrease in crime is due to the new police methods," a police authority told the press.

"No longer are criminals able to time a policeman's movements on a particular beat. Furthermore, the criminal never knows now when he may be surprised by the mobile police or by a flying squad patrol.

"The introduction of the stop-and-go traffic signals has released a very considerable number of policemen from traffic duties. They have been transferred to the suburbs, and have gone back to ordinary patrol work.

"Possibly another factor which must be taken into consideration," he continued, "is that at the moment many of the best known criminals are serving terms of imprisonment—at least four dangerous gangs of motor bandits have been broken up during recent weeks.

"Some of the men are serving long sentences of imprisonment, while others are on the run. Bandits and housebreakers usually have disposed of their stolen property to their notorious receivers, and these, too, have been arrested and are serving long sentences."

Blue Law Invoked Against a Justice

By United Press
PITTSBURGH.—One of the hoariest of Pennsylvania's "blue laws," passed in 1705 when the commonwealth was an English colony, was resurrected when Frank J. Vatter sued a justice of the peace for false arrest.

Under the old statute, Vatter was granted a nominal judgment of 6 1/4 cents against Justice William Nugent, who Vatter charged issued a warrant for his arrest on Sunday. A charge of assault and battery against Vatter previously was dismissed after it was shown issuance of the warrant violated the 1705 law which prohibits service of legal papers on Sunday except in cases of treason, felony or breach of peace.

PARIS STYLES Oil Equipment Men Will Meet at Houston Apr. 16

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS.—We've been approaching it for some time, but now we've actually arrived at the baby bonnet hat stage, tied under the chin et al!

Mlle. Colette Rosebert, the pretty French tennis star, is sponsoring the vogue. Here is a knitted affair in black with little turn-up tabs in front and back and a knitted bow tied directly under the chin.

Other versions of this grown-up hat fad are in straw, felt and straw combinations, and in fabrics matching ensembles for spring. There is no argument about the comfort of these bonnets—even the infants seldom fret about them—and while we allow for a difference of opinion as to the efficacy of the chinties, the turn back effects off the forehead are becoming to many. We discussed the matter with one milliner here who has arranged for the ties to turn back from the ears and make their bow at the nape of the neck. This isn't bad at all, and one or two Dutch bonnet effects have met with real favor from the younger set.

Berets and queer-shaped knitted head coverings seem to have met with such complete success last season that there is no ousting them in 1934. Knitting and crocheting is no longer a homely business, and the mode has worked its way into formal evening attire as well. Gold and silver threads, metal and silk work into delicate Juliette caps, evening bags, sweaters, jackets and gloves.

Relief Money Was Used For Luxuries Representative Says

By United Press

A recent hearing before the relief commission revealed that large quantities of toiletries are being supplied negro women.

HOUSTON.—International oil men will come here April 16 to 21 to attend the Oil Equipment and Engineering exposition.

General Manager E. G. Lenzer of the exposition said that every producing area in the United States is expected to be represented along with the Soviet, Rumania, and the Argentine country of South America.

Results of research work done by the United States bureau of mines, the American Petroleum institute, the National Safety council and universities with special petroleum engineering courses will be exhibited at the exposition here.

"This will make available to all oil men the scientific and technical developments of the industry," Lenzer said.

There will be indoor exhibits and outdoor exhibits for those too large or too dangerous to be housed in the exhibition hall. A regulation derrick with the newest model rig set up and ready to "spud in" will be among the demonstrations.

Latest fire fighting equipment will be shown with some practical demonstrations.

A cash prize of $1,000 is offered for the outstanding invention submitted during the exposition. These exhibits will be placed in a special section to attract attention of the engineers.

The prize is offered by the Oil Equipment Manufacturers association and the Independent Petroleum association "to stimulate scientific research and development of present day engineering methods," Lenzer said.

Stabilization of Oil Will Benefit Two State Schools

AUSTIN.—The stabilization of the oil industry which has been brought about through Secretary Harold L. Ickes, federal oil administrator, and with the co-operation of the railroad commission of Texas, will bring financial benefits to the University of Texas and the State Agricultural and Mechanical college, through the improvement in the price of the product, it is expected.
 The fact is not generally known, even to the people of this state, that one of the most remarkable oil fields in the world is situated on land owned by the university. It comprises that part of the area of the Big Lake field in Reagan county which is devoted to the largest group of producing deep wells known to the industry. There are 22 of these wells, each ranging in depth from 8,525 feet to more than 9,000 feet. To express it in another way, each well is nearly two miles deep.
 These wells are a striking illustration of what science and invention have accomplished during the last 25 years in providing methods and equipment for testing geological formations far beneath the earth's surface. Oil operators recall that at the time the famous Lucas gusher was completed, marking the discovery of the Spindletop field at Beaumont, in 1902, the drilling of that well to a depth of approximately 3,000 feet was considered a demakable feat. At that time there had not been devised machinery or equipment which would drill little if any below that depth.
 The success that has been met with in that area of the Big Lake field in obtaining not only large oil flow but enormous gas production may lead to similar exploration of the deep strata throughout the state in years to come, according to men who are experienced in the oil industry.

 Many men who have been men of the hour have cut their own popularity to a one-line head, while they are still living. That's the pity of the entire thing. There must be more glory to die on the battlefield, be it in the act of leading his men like Custer, or leading a nation out of chaos like Lincoln, or while working in his workshop like Edison.

The former kaiser of Germany cut his popularity short by his foolish military ambitions. Napoleon Bonaparte did the same, and we could name many others. All had at one time done things that were recorded as great achievements—which made them the man of the hour. They are only living to tell about it and not glorify it.
 It would be a pity to have that happen to the world's greatest and shall we also say luckiest aviator. He was trading on dangerous ground when he spoke out of turn at a time when his remarks should have been most carefully worded and guarded. Let us hope that he is not bidding for pity nor that it will come to him unsolicited.
 We get so many angles as to why we can't have a bank in Eastland that it would take volumes to write it. We are wondering if there couldn't be a little injection in hypo form that would get us all to talking about how we can have done. That's all it takes; the rest should be easy.

PLEADS FOR RAT
 By United Press
 LONDON.—Released from jail after serving six months for being "an incorrigible roue," William Watson Noddes appeared in court and told the judge that his only regret in leaving jail was founded on a fear that proper care would not be taken of a rat which had become his pet. The judge assured him that the rat would have a good home during Noddes' absence.

Old Car Good Enough?
 Say, just ride in a '34

YOU'LL change your mind about holding on to the old car the very first time you get behind the wheel of a Nineteen Thirty-Four. Are these new jobs smooth and smart and comfortable? And can they "travel"?
 Even if you aren't going to buy at present, you should read the automobile advertisements appearing in this newspaper. It's an excellent way to keep up to date on what the spring salons are showing. There are important developments in styling and engineering—features pictured and described—which contribute to new riding and driving ease, new safety, beauty, and e-c-o-n-o-m-y.
 ECONOMY is an important point in these messages from leading automobile manufacturers. . . . Exceptional values, long life, unusual freedom from repairs, low fuel and oil consumption! ECONOMY is the reason they advertise in this newspaper, for here they can reach you and many other logical and intelligent car buyers at a minimum cost per person.
 Read the advertisements in this newspaper as an ECONOMY MEASURE. They save time energy, money . . . and even now are pointing out that owning a luxurious, up-to-the-minute motor car is often more economical than maintaining an old one.
