CUMMINGS SUBMITS THE DRAFT FOR GANGSTER CRUSHING

Atty. Gen. Homer Cummings has submitted to the congressional judiciary committees a 12-point legislative program designed to give the justice department power to convict gangsters, kidnapers, racketeers and criminals operating in interstate commerce. Senator Ashurst (d) of Arizona and Rep. Hattin W. Summers (d) of Texas received letters from the head of the department of justice saying that "legislation should be limited to functions to be performed by a central agency and not to invite problems of political subdivisions." He declared the program was justified under the commerce clause of the constitution. It calls for the death penalty for kidnapers, registration of all firearms, the making of all stolen property sent into interstate commerce subject to federal prosecution, and makes it a criminal offense to extort or seek to extort by telephone, telegraph, radio or oral message and to intimidate or otherwise interfere with interstate business or in any way to interfere with banks with criminal intent.

Crime should be crushed the nation over. Racketeers should be blotted out or sent to prison. Kidnapers should be given the limit. Bank robbers should be put away. Highwaymen should be "herded together." Uncle Sam has been very successful since the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the smashing of bands of ruffians who prey upon the lives and fortunes of law abiding people and slay with impunity and without remorse of conscience. Ever the law should be held uppermost in the sisterhood of states.

KANSAS LAWMAKERS ASKED TO ENACT MORATORIUM LAW

Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas has called a special session of his legislature for March 1 to pass a new mortgage moratorium law. All the states in the wheat and corn belts of the upper country appear to be clamoring for moratorium legislation. In 1932 the farmers, mostly republicans, deserted the party of the elephant. They placed Roosevelt at the head of the government. They elected democrats to the house of representatives. In 1933 the tillers of the soil who deserted the republican party in the Rocky Mountain states and the Missouri Valley states were enthusiastic advocates of the New Deal program. Now where will they land on November election day of this year?

Whose Fault?

If a Child Won't Play with Others?

Parents who understand children know where to place the blame when a youngster mopes, keeps to himself, or is "ugly" toward others. Sluggishness runs any disposition, and that's what is usually wrong. But it's just as wrong to dose that child with sickening cathartics. Until 15- or older—a child's bowels need but little aid—a very mild form of help. Stronger things often upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. Because of the weather it was necessary that she postpone her return to Eastland for several days as trains were unable to make their scheduled runs.

Her brother, Milburn McCarty, is a student at Smith college, Northampton, Mass. Winter sports being enjoyed by sport enthusiasts this period of the year, Miss McCarty states, include skiing.

On the trip she visited Sally McLaughlin, from Dallas, who attends school in South Head, N. H. According to Miss McCarty, the trip was an unusual one and she enjoyed it immensely, her only regret being that her visit was of short duration.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

CHAPTER I It all began some 30 years ago when a young Englishman saw a maid, Mary Marriage, in the upper hall of an old place that is well known in England. It was a spring day and perhaps had something to do with it; and she had a fine prettiness that he was to learn was not echoed in her mind or speech.

When she told him about "the baby" he grew up. Something that was good for him happened to him when he saw her sitting before him, sagged and humble and utterly at his mercy. He covered his young eyes then to shut her out but he still saw her and heard her saying without words to him, "And what will you be doing with me—now?"

The passengers were shocked and sobered but none of them felt the tragedy so fully as did Concepcion and Helen Villaverde, two young Cuban girls traveling under the chaperonage of a poor relation.

"I will say yes," he stated after full consideration of the danger that he ran. Concepcion drew a deep, shaken breath to close her eyes. Helen said a triumphant, "He is named Pablo Tomas Francisco Villaverde y Blanco!"

"I give you a name and my own of that brand! What get for this?" began her mother's words which ended another scar on Pablo's face. The monthly remittance Cuba would go in one direction. "It's charity I give Charity!" Angela would say.

By Cowen Dartmoor Prisoners Spurn Church's Aid

LONDON.—Dartmoor prison has long been reckoned one of the toughest of British penal institutions. The prisoners mutinied there in 1932.

Now the Bishop of Exeter thinks the trouble is that they do not have compulsory attendance at Sunday service.

Instead of being to chapel, the convicts lie on their beds and read novels, the bishop told the house of lords. Rude songs were sung at the prison concerts, he charged.

Out of a total of 200 Church of England prisoners, the Sunday congregations often numbered only five, said his lordship.

And the growing tendency towards impudence in modern crime is reflected in the conduct of the prisoners. The prison chaplain was threatened that if he didn't make the concerts more amusing, the prisoners would get him dismissed, said the bishop.

The bishop himself withdrew his application to hold a service for the inmates after the mutiny, when the governor told him that he could not be responsible for his safety.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

He held a lighted match between cupped palms and, looking down, said, "My God!"

He held a lighted match between cupped palms and, looking down, said, "My God!"
fearlessly where he would: shop windows; theaters; warmth; good food. But he had only his shack and the loneliness there. "Come again, Mr. Smith," said Jake. "I probably shall," said Noyes bitterly. His shack was far from Key West and on a remote, stretching finger of an island. He hurried toward it, for the night was cold and of the ink-dark quality that is made by a storm in the tropics. "Not too pleasant to be out," he thought and stumbled over something soft. After several futile attempts he held a lighted match between cupped palms and, looking down, said, "My God!" Pablito, again aware of life, shook from fear. Had not Angela often said, "Ah, had I a man's strength now I would make you suffer!" and here was a man. The man lifted the child and carrying him, walked a long way over a train track and down an embankment. Then he said Pablito in a boat and after stepping into it pushed it off. Pablito tried to get out but the man caught him and held him closely. He made soft sounds and Pablito found in his heart the sensation he had had from holding the bird with the broken wing. Toen the man went back to his place and began rowing. Despite fear Pablito crept close to him, clutching a fold of his coat. "Senor! Senor!" Pablito whispered. ("Mr. God!") He heard, "No. Niño mio, un nom orecto solo!" ("No, my son, only a contemptible man.") After quite a little trip the man pushed the boat, threw Pablito and carried him into a shack where, for a little time, with a to see over small measures." The strange noises made Pablito feel afraid again. He slipped from his chair to stand by Noyes who hesitated shyly for a moment and then looking determined, lifted Pablito to his knees. Over the child's head he could see the portrait of a woman with another little boy in her arms. Pablito felt the arms tuck were around him tightening. "Perhaps—he will stay here—with me," said Noyes half aloud, and then a sudden wild onslaught of the night's wind made Pablito turn to cling to the man who was beginning to realize how lonely he had been. A little later Noyes undressed Pablito and saw the scars and bruises that were upon the child's body "Infamous!" he said unsteadily. Pablito stood wide-eyed, wondering as his ragged were being pulled from him. It was a wild, cold night to venture into the sea. El Hombre going, he would follow. "I go where you go!" he said in Spanish. "That is good to hear!—that is good to hear!" Noyes answered.

WITH the passing of a week Pablito's fear began to evaporate in the warmth of kindness. "It is a good place," he remarked again and again in his low class Spanish, and it was a good place. The water on either side of the island was shallow, providing two pockets of riotous color. At the narrow end of the island that stretched toward the sea was deeper water and there the boat was dragged to a steep, business-like looking beach. At the other end of the island was inundated land reaching to the tracks at low tide and becoming a marshy, fishy smelling sea when the tide was high. Pablito's life was simple. He awoke to eat and ate again when the sun was in the middle of the sky. At night there was another meal and then he went to bed. Between these meals stretched hours for play and peace—niter peace! Some weeks after his informal adoption Pablito one morning said to Noyes, "The wind makes the trees turn in their beds and they stretch—" Noyes looked for a long while at the small blond boy who was learning English, with other more important things. He said slowly, "What will come to you, I don't know. All I can teach you is wildness and the classics; to see the truth it not to speak the truth—and perhaps, from my bad example, a loathing of strong drink." Pablito arose from his heels where he had been squatting and stretched. The earth was awake, a train had pounded by and the smoke that it snorted had drifted away high, clear and almost transparent instead of hanging sully low. This meant to Pablito a long day of play in the sunlight. "Breakfast now; breakfast," he said loudly and in English. "We are becoming civilized," said Norris. "Shall we have it sent in from the club, old man, or knock up something for ourselves?" (To Be Continued)

French Marine Program Third

PARIS.—France was in third place for merchant marine construction at the end of 1933. The total tonnage and ships being built in the various shipbuilding plants of the world officially is given according to Lloyd's Register as 757,274 tons comprising 206 ships. The figures by nations are: Great Britain, 331,541 tons for 90 ships.

Japan, 106,760 tons for 20 ships. France, 90,656 tons for 9 ships. Sweden, 64,640 tons for 14 ships. Holland, 40,540 tons for 12 ships. Spain, 35,724 tons for 14 ships. Denmark, 24,663 tons for 6 ships. United States, 12,373 tons for 6 ships.

Italy, 11,200 tons for 2 ships. Norway, 8,950 tons for 5 ships. Steam driven vessels total 336,443 tons comprising 98 units, and of these steam vessels France has 76,080 tons among six ships; there are 102 motor driven ships comprising 418,274 tons, and of this France has 14,576 tons in three ships. In sailing vessels there are but six units under construction totaling 2,590 tons.

It is notable that France's position in third place is due to the construction of the de Luxe liner Normandie, although in number of units, exclusive of the Normandie, France, France would normally be in eighth place, with only about 22,000 tons. The tonnage of the super-liner de France, as the Normandie is called, is 68,000, the largest unit of the French merchant marine fleet.

"Private Life of Henry VIII" Shows At Lyric Tonight "The Private Life of Henry VIII," widely hailed as Charles Laughton's greatest picture and performance, is the attraction to-day at the Lyric Theatre.

Charles Laughton spent many weeks in research work preparing for the role of Henry VIII, a character he has long desired to portray. Five of his six wives are shown in the picture, Elsa Lancaster, Laughton's wife, playing Ann of Cleves, Blinnie Barnes Kathryn Howard, Merle Oberon Anne Boleyn, Wendy Barrie Jane Seymour, and Everley Gregg Katherine Parr. The first wife, Katherine of Aragon, is dismissed by an opening title that says her story is of no particular interest—she was a respectable woman. So Henry divorced her!

The clothes worn by Henry and the queens were reconstructed from paintings. The interior sets are faithful reproductions of those at Hampton Court and other Tudor palaces frequently by Henry VIII and genuine period furniture was employed to dress the sets.

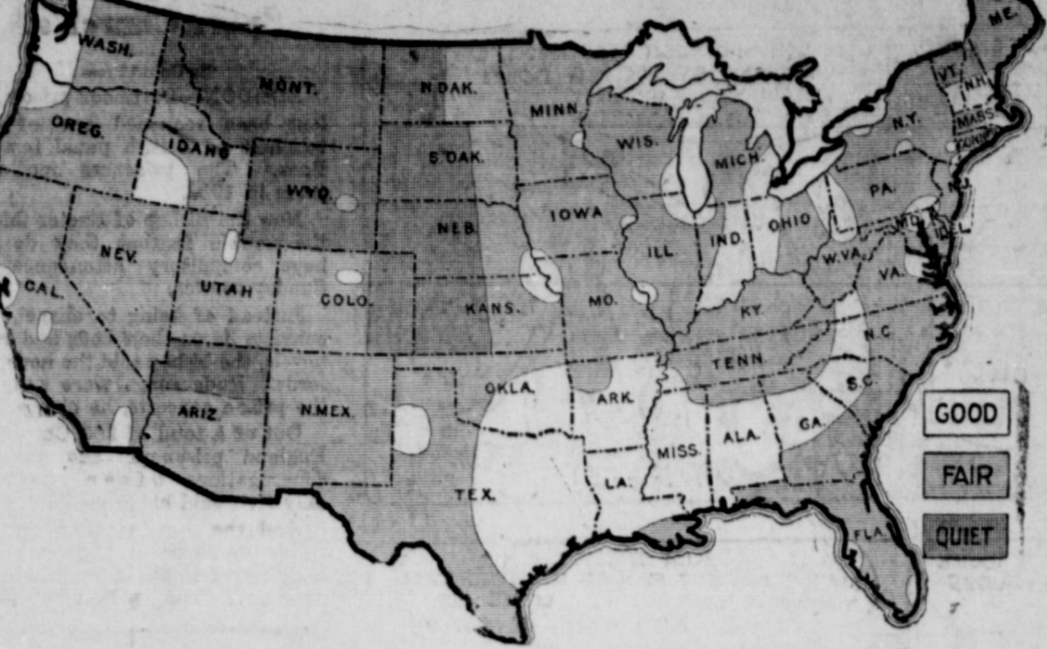

The picture opens with the execution of Anne Boleyn at the Tower of London, with Anne commenting about her "little neck" while the crowds gather for the execution and the king prepares to wed Jane Seymour so soon as the guns tell of the death of Anne. From Jane, who dies, the story passes on to the King's interest in Kathryn Howard who becomes his fifth wife after his marriage to his fourth, Ann of Cleves, and the divorce that she wins from him in a card game played on the royal bed on their wedding night. It is his sixth and last wife who inspires him to comment that "the best of them's the worst."

Alexander Korda directed "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and Lajos Biro and Arthur Wimperis wrote the story and dialogue. It's a London film production for release by United Artists.

January Saw Business Rally Carried Forward

This map represents business conditions in every state of the Union as shown in March, 1934, issue of "Nations Business," official publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

By Frank Greene, based on information supplied by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—January saw December's rally in business carried into the new year with relatively increased force and volume; the normal lull in retail buying failing to function. Mail order sales (rural buying) showed remarkable percentage gains. Wholesale trade volume was generally larger. Prices of commodities, stocks and domestic and government bonds increased. Foods led in commodity rises. Auto shows were crowded and big orders for first quarter were booked. Reports as to bank recuperation were encouraging with fewer closings than for years. Textiles sold better than a year ago. Wheat and cotton reached the highest levels since November. Dry, cold weather west of the Mississippi makes possible a third consecutive small winter wheat yield. January failures and liabilities were less than half those of a year ago. The 1933 auto output and net railway operating income were 42 per cent above 1932. Cigarette consumption 7 per cent, domestic merchandise exports 4.5 per cent, merchandise imports 9 per cent and general trade volume 10 per cent higher. Chain store sales 1.5 per cent off. Shoe production next to 1920 record.

Editor Declares Isolation Is Fatal Cleveland.—Statistical data and "cosmic precept" prove that neither America, nor any other nation can live alone, Oswald Garrison Villard, magazine editor, said in a lecture course address here. Villard pointed out that, in his opinion, America could not isolate herself and live as a self-contained unit, as advocated by James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, in his theory known as autarchy. Social as well as economic reasons make the Gerardian belief impracticable, Villard stressed as his viewpoint.

Ragweed Blamed For Hay Fever

PHILADELPHIA.—The ragweed, and not golden rod, is the chief cause of hay fever, according to Dr. Louis Tuft, associate in immunology of the school of medicine, Temple University. "There are three forms of hay fever—spring, early and late," Dr. Tuft told a group of physicians here. "The blossoms of trees cause 5 per cent, or spring cases; grasses such as timothy cause 60 per cent, or early cases, and ragweed causes the remaining 35 per cent, late cases."

Broadway America Clubs Are Being Organized Today

H. A. Kyler, field representative of the Broadway of America, was in Eastland county Thursday, planning meetings in the three towns along the highway, for the purpose of forming Broadway of America booster clubs. A meeting was called for Eastland at 10:30 in the morning and another in Ranger for 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time he was to explain the club plan. He stated today that 90 per cent of the towns along the Broadway of America from San Diego to Central Texas had formed these clubs and that much good was being done by the organization through the interest being shown in the highway by the club members.

Cosmetic Honor Roll For 2,000 Years Compiled

By LAMAR MIDDLETON United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS.—What women in the past 2,000 years exercised most seductively the arts of powder, lipstick, eye-shadow and rouge?

Helena Rubinstein, internationally known author and lecturer on beauty, gave the United Press today her list of 10 women extending from about 50 B. C. to A. D. 1934.

Her expert selections are based on many years' research into the tricks of facial adornment practiced by the beautiful women of antiquity, from study of portraits of the grandes-dames of the Renaissance centuries, and in the case of living women from personal acquaintance.

These 10 women, several of whose faces may be said to have shaped world history, are:

- 1. Poppaea Sabina, the black-haired, violet-eyed mistress, and later second wife, of Nero, owed her satiny skin to a daily bath in the milk of asses.
2. Cleopatra, the raven-haired dusky, sloc-eyed Egyptian companion of both Julius Caesar and Mark Anthony, expert in the seductive use of facial pigments, perfumed oils and hennaed fingertips.
3. Ninon de l'Enclos, the 17th-century leader of fashions in France, who sometimes covered her blonde hair with perukes, but whose dexterous use of cosmetics held her celebrated lovers beside her until she reached 90.
4. Mme Dubarry, fair-haired adventures and mistress of Louis XV, whose ingenious make-ups did not, however, save her from the guillotine.
5. Mme. Recamier, languorous grande-dame of French political society in the 18th century, whose portraits reveal her dark hair and facial coloring.
6. The titian-haired Elizabeth, queen of England, is included in Mme. Rubinstein's list, because
