That reminds me...

Better Homes Week is scheduled to hold the limelight beginning Sunday, April 29. Throughout the week special programs will be given for the occasion by the womens clubs and church organizations.

As banking is a most necessary part of all business life and Eastland doesn't happen to have one at this particular writing, it simply means that one of the cogs in the wheels of progress is entirely out, and until it is fixed up we can expect nothing more than added expenses and decided lull in financial circles.

Four months of the year have already faded away. Time is flying fast. While recovery of business is indicated in many large industrial centers it is slow in the remote sections.

CARNEGIE HERO AWARDS MADE TO 24 PEOPLE

PITTSBURGH, April 27.—The dramatic rescue of a two-year-old girl by a motorman who climbed to the front of his rapidly approaching electric car and lifted her from its path was recognized late today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. Rescuers of a man who perched all night in a tree surrounded by flood waters from the Guadalupe river and a laboratory worker who fell 155 feet into a volcanic cave also were among the 24 persons awarded bronze medals. William G. Lang, 52, Sandusky, O., motorman, was honored for his rescue of Leila J. Smith, 22 months, after the child wandered to the tracks on which his electric car was approaching. When Lang clinging to the bumper and fender of the car, grasped the child, the car was running about 25 miles an hour and continued for 180 feet before it was stopped by the conductor. Howell M. Priour, 18, who was trapped in a tree top at Kerrville, Texas, by a sudden rush of water when a dam of Guadalupe river broke, was rescued the following day by H. Cooper Fletcher, 20, Kerrville. Fletcher swam 350 feet to Priour after repeated efforts to reach him failed. The two, after the water receded, swam to land, with Fletcher assisting Priour at times. Millard F. Scherer, 40, highway patrolman, and Bertie Morris, 25, police secretary, both of El Paso, Texas, rescued Berlyn Brixner, 21, a laboratory assistant, after the latter's plunge down the canyon. The two were lowered by ropes down the walls of the vent of the volcano studded with sharp projections and believed infested with snakes, to the ledge where Brixner haled. The ledge was filled with holes of unknown depth and Brixner was embedded in his shoulders in dust. Morris attached a rope to Brixner and after the two were drawn to the surface returned and aided in similar rescue of Scherer. Of the 24 who received medals seven were from Ohio, six from Pennsylvania, four each from New York and Texas, and one each from Massachusetts, New Jersey and California. Fletcher, 20, laborer (912 Jefferson street), Kerrville, Texas, was awarded a bronze medal for saving Priour, 18, school boy, from drowning, Kerrville, July 2, 1932. While swimming across a narrow body of water, which was part of the flooded Guadalupe river, Priour on the afternoon before the day of the act was overtaken by a rush of deep water from a broken dam and was carried to a tree at the normal bank; and he climbed to a point six feet above the water. The water was 24 feet deep at the tree, and sparsely scattered logs and other debris drifted in a current of three miles an hour. Priour, who wore no clothing (Continued on page 2)

FAMILY WAITS FOR WORD FROM KIDNAP BAND

TUCSON, Ariz., April 28.—The distracted family of June Robles, 6, today awaited further instructions from her kidnapers for payment of $10,000 for ransom. A night long vigil on the front porch of the Robles home, after a telephone call was received last night from the child's captors, was unproductive. Searchers suspended operations in and near Tucson in the hope that contact would be made with the child's father or her grandfather.

Dillinger Plans to Kidnap Governor

COLUMBUS, O., April 28.—Information about an alleged plot to kidnap Governor George White, and his daughter, Mary, involving John Dillinger, has been received by the governor, his secretary, William Moore, revealed today. The governor, Moore said, placed little credence in the information. Moore said the governor was informed that some members of the Dillinger gang are in Columbus now, preparing to carry out the plot. The governor declined to reveal the source of his information. Moore said no unusual precautions will be taken to guard the governor.

Pioneer Woman of This Section Dead

"Aunt Rose" Weeks, pioneer Stephens and Eastland county woman and wife of "Uncle Cicero" Weeks, died at her home Friday morning at an early hour and was buried Saturday at 4 o'clock at the Cook cemetery, 4 miles east of Cheaney. She was the mother of 19 children, seven of whom are still living and were present at the funeral. The children are: Frank, Willis and Dick Weeks and Mrs. Maud Dean, Mrs. Sophie Freeman, Mrs. Jenny Kimbrough and Mrs. Etta Britton, and her husband, who survives. Six children have preceded her to the grave. Up until the time of her sickness, "Aunt Rose," as she was known by her numerous friends, was a favorite in the community and was loved for her quaint sayings and philosophy. The couple celebrated their fiftieth anniversary not very long ago. Rev. Nicols of the Church of Christ preached the funeral, which was at the home.

Reserve Officers Planning Social Function In Ranger

Plans are under way by the Oil Belt Chapter, Reserve Officers Association, for their first annual get-acquainted party in the form of a dinner-dance to be held in the Colonial ball room of the Gholson Hotel in Ranger on the evening of Friday, May 11th. Arrangements under the direction of Capt. Wayne C. Hickey of Ranger, Majors R. A. Larner of Eastland and J. S. Pearce of Cisco call for a banquet at the beginning of the program and a well arranged and informal dance following. Dr. W. J. Danforth of Fort Worth, prominent after dinner speaker, who is very active in the ranks of reserve officers, district governor of Lions International, will be the speaker of the evening. Spicy and wholesome entertainment features will also have a prominent part on the program. After the banquet, entertainment in the form of dancing, bridge and other games will be provided to serve the individual tastes of the guests. According to the program committee, nothing will be left undone to make this a most pleasant and worthwhile affair. for all reserve and former officers of the United States army, navy and Marine corps and their ladies, and also friends of the reserve officers who are residing in the Oil Belt.

TEXAS FARMERS ARE SUPPLYING THEIR OWN TABLES

Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham is the associate editor of the extension service news of the A. & M. college. She has been prominent in all political and farm movements in recent years. She has been a leader in the activities of her native state. Mrs. Cunningham has reports showing that last year 59,087 families in 11 Texas counties directly assisted with home demonstration work through organizations sponsored by county and home demonstration agents and carried educational information through demonstrations to 128,972 other families not in the work. A magnificent showing, to say the least. More than 16,118,331 containers of food were canned by these 59,087 families. They also reported dried cured and stored foods aggregating 16,926,254 pounds had been put away for home consumption or the market. Value of these foods has been placed at more than $5,000,000 by economists of the extension service.

Now "inability of Texas farm families to buy containers for canned products" is reflected in the figures showing the tremendous increases in the amount of dried and cured food products on which the extension service obtained definite report for 1933. Thousands of Texas farmers are "feeding themselves." They are canning their way out. They are going back to the days of their fathers and their grandfathers who created a marvelous commonwealth with their own hands without federal relief or state financial aid.

Competition between cities spurs them on to civic achievement.

Many cities are in a position to move ahead. All they need is for a lot of citizens to give the live ones a chance.

Every live citizen should be a good sport, come out of their shells, boost hard for the home city and make the dead ones do the same.

The whaling industry will never regain its former glory. This is a matter for sincere regret. With its passing goes a race of men who did not know the meaning of the word "fear."

The water rose within three feet of Priour and it was feared he might fall from exhaustion or that the tree would be washed away. Other trees near it were uprooted. In the morning men on the opposite bank made several attempts by swimming and by use of a raft and a boat to reach Priour, but they were unsuccessful. Fletcher, who had watched these attempts, enter the water from the bank opposite to that upon which Priour was marooned; swam 350 feet at an angle to the current; and slowly swimming with great difficulty and effort from tree to tree reached Priour in an hour and a half. Fletcher carried a can of food and a first aid supplies tied to his back and an open knife in his teeth. He feared that the string with which the can was tied might catch on drift. The water had receded to a depth of 12 feet. Fletcher gave coffee and food to Priour, who was dazed. Two hours later, the water then being eight feet deep at the tree, Priour and Fletcher started to swim to wadeable water. Alternately swimming and resting by holding to bushes, they swam 175 feet to wadeable water, Fletcher giving Priour aid at times. A bronze medal was awarded to Joseph C. Taylor, 21, salesman, 210 North Alamo street, San Antonio, Texas, who saved Virgil A. Griffin, 13, and Clifford Griffin, 16, and attempted to save Aden G. Griffin, 57, laborer, from drowning at Wichita, Kan., July 20, 1933. While wading in the Little Arkansas river, Virgil got into dis-opportunity to look at her host. He was tall and very erect. His snow white hair curled slightly and touched the collar of the dressing gown that clung to his gaunt figure. "Did Madeline come?" the old man asked as Bill sprinted up the three steps to his side. "Here she is," Bill beckoned to Donna who was just behind him. "Grandfather," she whispered huskily. "Grandfather." Grooping garbled hands reached for her; old arms enfolding her. "Maddie, my little Maddie." The girl pressed her face against his shoulder, hoping he would not notice how fast her heart was beating. "I've wanted you for such a long time and now I can't even see you." "I know," she choked, tears in her throat. "Bill told me—you are blind. Oh, I'm so sorry, so sorry!" "That's all right, Maddie," he answered, patting her curls with trembling affectionate fingers. "I'm old and affliction doesn't matter so much to an old feller. Only I've missed you and wanted you. But there, there! We're not going to be sad for the little time you are here. There must be a heap you've got to tell me and a heap more I want to know. Come inside. Mrs. Planter laid out some supper for you."

in books Donna had read of just such a room—quiet, homely in artistic, containing something between the four walls that she had longed for all her life. There were rocking chairs with face squares on their backs, a "whatnot" in the corner with china bric-a-brac on its shelves, a reading lamp beside a stand holding a huge family Bible. On the big center table a vase of purple and white lilies stood and beneath a picture of a girl with long, fair, curling hair and wide, questioning eyes. Madeline, of course. "It doesn't look much like you now," Bill said. THE old man's faltering steps led him to the chair beside the Bible. "Maybe you don't hold with prayer now Maddie," he said. "I want to thank God that He sent you to me before the call came." "Oh Grandfather!" she cried. She dropped on her knees beside him feeling suddenly that this was her home, this old man, whose feet touched the precipice of death, was her relative. "Oh Grandfather!" In the midst of the simple prayer a door opened and the housekeeper Mrs. Planter, came into the room. Instantly the spell vanished. Donna felt the antagonism of the woman. Though Mrs. Planter's thin lips parted in a smile, though she extended her hand in cordial greeting, her pale eyes between white lashes informed Donna she was not welcome. "I reckon you find your grandpa changed a lot," she said. "He's been falling fast this past year. And you've changed too. Yes, you've changed. I wouldn't have known you." "Five years make changes in every one," Donna answered bravely. "You oughta be in bed, Amos."

trapped Mrs. Planter. "Mebbe young folks can miss their rest and not feel it, but you'll be sick tomorrow if you stay up any longer." Gradually Grandfather rose. "Emmie is right. You eat your supper, Maddie and go to bed so's you can get up bright and early. Bill will show you your room." He kissed her forehead and then permitted the housekeeper to lead him out of the room. There was a taut silence when Bill and Donna found themselves alone once more. Then he coughed and crossed to the door. "I'll put the car away," he said abruptly. "Impulsively she exclaimed, "How sweet he is!" "He's always been the salt of the earth," Bill answered coldly. "How you could have picked up and run away is more than I've ever been able to fathom. It puzzles me more since I've met you." Bill looked at her and the steady gaze of his candid gray eyes said more than words. Then he left the room. Five minutes later when he returned she was sitting at the table but she had not touched the food. "I'll show you to your room," he said.

OVER a bowl of chili con carne Madeline winked at Con David, who had no thoughts for her partner nor her aged relative. Con's handsome face held no answering smile. Already he regretted the invitation prompted by his jealousy. Madeline might be as pretty and attractive as Donna but she bored him. "Snap out of it, Con," she said. "It's not very complimentary to have you sitting there so gloomy. You ought to know anyway that you don't stand ace high with Donna."

"How do you know I don't?" "She's told me. She wouldn't marry a performer no matter how much she loved him." "She'll marry me." Madeline laughed sharply. "Says you! No, she won't. She's crazy for a home and children. It wouldn't surprise me if she and Bill Siddall made a go of it." "You said he was her cousin. Cousins can't marry." Madeline's eyes half-closed. "Don't believe everything you're told, Con. I had to protect her, didn't I?" He sprang to his feet. "Then she didn't go to her grandfather's?" "Of course not." Sudden fear that she had implied too much made Madeline add, "For heaven's sake, don't spread it! You know Kenfrore and if he found out about it he might fire us both."

"Listen, Con!" she said tensely when they were on the street. "You misunderstood me. You've got to give me your word to keep this under your hat, but Donna isn't my sister and the man she went to visit is my grandfather, not her. She did go out to the farm and—"

"I don't give a hang what she did or where she went!" the trainer answered morosely. "There's going to be a show-down Monday. She'll either marry me then or—"

Scherer and Morris alone offered to descend. Their duties were Texas. With their left legs rope loops attached to the end of a wire cable and fastened to the cable by webbing around the waists, they were slowly lowered by the other men. They carried flashlights. With their legs arms they waded themselves away from sharp angles and turns as they reached a sloping shelf, but 15 feet long 75 feet below the surface. Scherer then freed himself of the cable and remained on the shelf to relay signals to the surface; and Morris, who also was awarded a bronze medal, was slowly lowered to a ledge 155 feet below the surface, where he found Brixner embedded upright to his shoulders in pulverized rock. Meanwhile Scherer found a stable footing on the sloping shelf and he held momentarily to it slowly moving cable and to heavy signal line that extended from Morris to the surface. Morris tied Brixner to the cable and they were hoisted. After the passed the shelf, a dislodged rock struck Scherer, causing him almost to lose his balance. No longer having the support of the cable and the line, Scherer was terrified lest he fall off the ledge; as he sat down with his back pressed against the wall. After Morris and Brixner were pulled out, Morris was lowered to the shelf and found Scherer hysterical from fright. He tied Scherer to the cable and the two were drawn out. Both collapsed momentarily. Brixner sustained a fracture of the ankle and other injuries, but recovered in a month.

Holding Virgil, Taylor swam a stroke or two to Clifford and shoved him toward the bank. He again swam to Clifford and gave him a push, and Clifford then swam to wadeable water. Taylor also swam to wadeable water, and Virgil waded to the bank. In the meantime Aden Griffin got into midstream. Although tired, Taylor swam 25 feet to Griffin, who vainly tried to grasp him. Taylor repeatedly swam a stroke or two to Griffin and pushed him toward the bank. He then became dazed and sank. Griffin also sank. Taylor rose, drifted helplessly for 40 feet in a current, and then got hold of a rope that was thrown to him by a man in wadeable water. He was drawn to wadeable water and was carried to the bank. He then was unconscious, but was revived. Griffin was drowned. A bronze medal was awarded Scherer. Brixner fell down a vent of an extinct volcano of the East Portillo mountains to a ledge 150 feet below the surface, sustaining injuries that rendered him unconscious. Holes of unknown depth dropped from the ledge. The lava walls of the vent sloped down precipitously in irregular directions and were studded with sharp projections. Presence of snakes was feared. Of many men at the surface.

Better Homes Program Tonight
Rev. E. R. Stanford, pastor of the Methodist church, has arranged a Better Homes program for this evening's service in Methodist church, to which the public is cordially invited.
Music will be furnished by junior high school glee club, directed by Miss Wilma Beard, and addresses will be made by members of the Civic League and Thursday Afternoon club, all representing the Better Homes committee.
The league and the Thursday Afternoon club will be special guests.

Stork Shower Honors Mrs. Robert Webb
Mrs. H. L. Harris and Mrs. Earl Thorne entertained Thursday afternoon with a pretty stork shower for the six weeks old adopted daughter of Mrs. Robert Webb, honoree of affair.
Lovely decorations in roses and honeysuckle formed a fragrant background for the entertainment, developed in pink and green motif.
The many gifts were uniquely presented. A negro mammy appeared, hanging the articles on a silken clothes line, and Mrs. Webb was invited to "gather in the laundry."

Interesting games were diversions, enjoyed by Meses. East, Lon Horn, Raymond Webb, Homer Williams, S. M. Fowler, Gerald Crossley, H. E. Lawrence, Claud Crossley, J. B. Bishop, Ray Falls, Lee Bishop, Victor Cornelius, C. Hunt, Monte Rowe, Edith Fields, Jack Clayt, Homer Norton, James Harkrider, Griffin, Seale, Earl Dick, the honoree, whom the hostesses served a dainty salad on lettuce, wafers, minted tea with lemon, at close of afternoon.
