Light
house Keeper
Is Still Massing As earchers Seek Him

Boats searched the bay for the body of the keeper, H. O. Welch, who was missing from Half Moon reef Dec. 13 when the relief at arrived.

He had tended his light and set an entry in the lighthouse log: "Lamp lighted at 6 p. m. All is well."

He prepared for the night by moving his watch, money and other effects and placing them on a table in his quarters. He then went to his bed and turned down the cover.

What became of him from then is a mystery. All the oil was assumed from the beacon light and the wick was burned away.

HOUSTON, Dec. 27.—Henry Johnston, 41, Dayton hotel and restaurant operator, died in a hospital today from gunshot wounds received when he resisted a holdup man.

Johnston was seated in his car when his wife made a business call about 7 o'clock last night. A robber came out of the dark and pointed a pistol at him.

"Drive down the street," the man said. Johnston refused.

"All right, hand over your money." Instead, Johnston grappled with the gunman and the gunman shot. The bullet rained downward and stopped in the hip. The man fled.

Anti-War Profit Legislation Might Ease Bonus Demand

With both President Roosevelt and the United States Senate moving energetically to put a crimp in the manner private citizens make money out of war, this government is at least finding an intelligent way of meeting the ex-service man's demand for a bonus.

The bonus has been fought over in Congress ever since the war. Time after time presidents and secretaries of the treasury have mentioned all sorts of good reasons why the bonus should not, could not, or would not be paid; but all this palaver has had very little effect.

Away off in the background, seldom mentioned by anyone, but never for a moment forgotten by the ex-service men who wanted the bonus, loomed the vast bulk of industrial war profits.

It was all very well to tell the former soldier that by demanding a bonus he put his patriotism on a cash basis; all very well to say that it was unfair to the rest of the country to give a man a prior claim on the federal treasury simply because he had been drafted into the army; the veteran had only to think of those war profits to feel completely justified in his attitude.

Meditate on some of those war profit figures briefly. We had, for instance, 181 individuals receiving net incomes of $1,000,000 a year or more. We had industrial concerns netting profits which ranged all the way up to 362 per cent on their invested capital.

We had a long list of companies making 50, 70 and 100 per cent profits in one single war year.

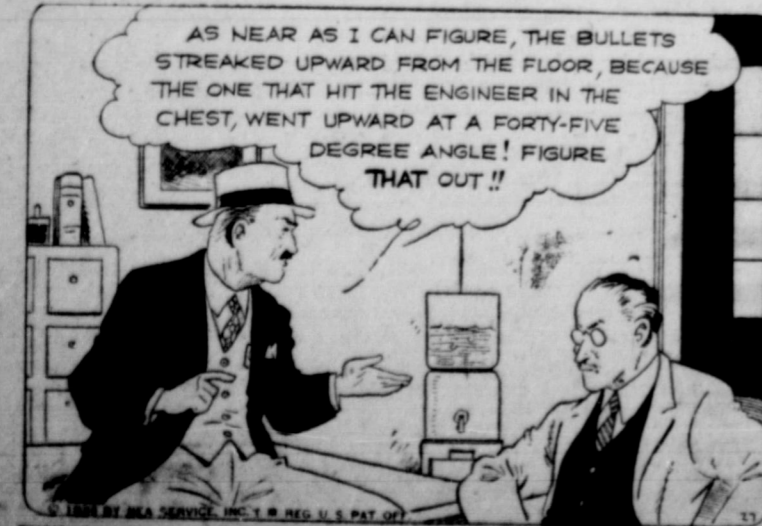

If those things have been sticking in the war veteran's craw all these years it is no wonder; nor is it extraordinary that he is unimpressed by the accusation that he is being mercenary in asking a thousand or so in cash for himself.

In strict logic, the bonus demand may be unjustified; built up against this background, it is the most natural thing in the world.

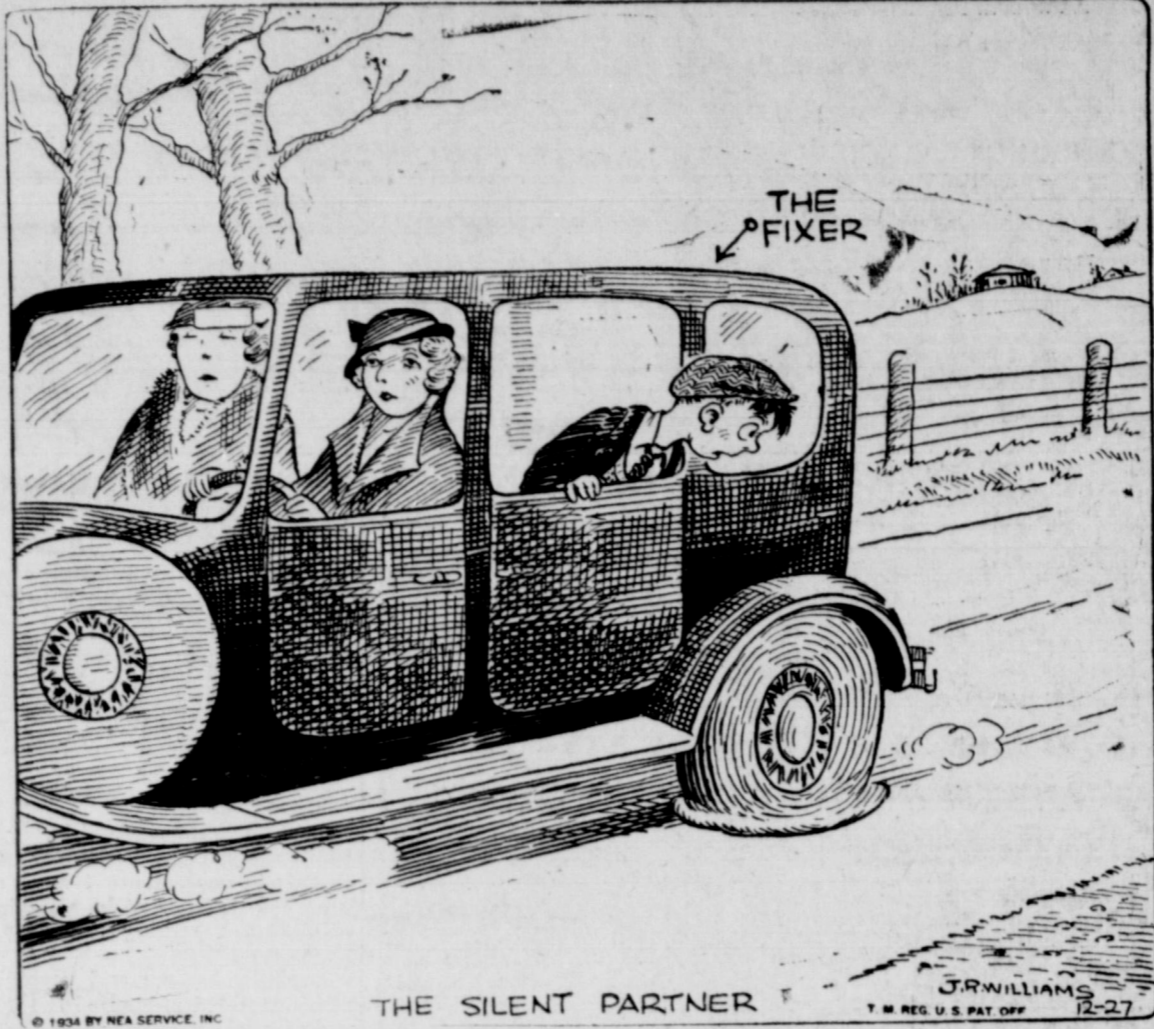

It has taken us a long, long time to realize that there is shocking injustice in drafting a man to face death and wounds, while permitting the stay-at-home to make money beyond the dreams of avarice.

Not until we have written into law an ironclad system

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

"OUT OUR WAY" — By Williams

for eliminating such grotesque war profits shall we be in a position to say "No" to the bonus-seeker without getting a horse laugh in return.

The people of this country are the ones who will keep it ahead in the March of Progress—not our politicians.

The political business is the biggest business in America today.

Six Out of Ten Students In Law Grades For Ages

AUSTIN, Dec. 26.—Six out of every 10 Texas school children are in lower grades than their ages would justify, according to a report by Dr. Fred C. Ayer, professor of educational administration at the University of Texas.

"Part of this conspicuously large amount of over-ages is due to the former practice of large numbers of pupils entering school at seven instead of at six years of age," Dr. Ayer said. Large foreign population in El Paso and San Antonio and late entrance in rural schools were other factors that caused over-age pupils.

Data was gathered from the six elementary ages and included nearly 600,000 pupils. Five per cent of those studied were in a higher grade than their age would justify. Normal age for first graders is six years, second graders, seven years, etc. More rapid progress is made, the survey showed, in cities having more than 5,000 population.

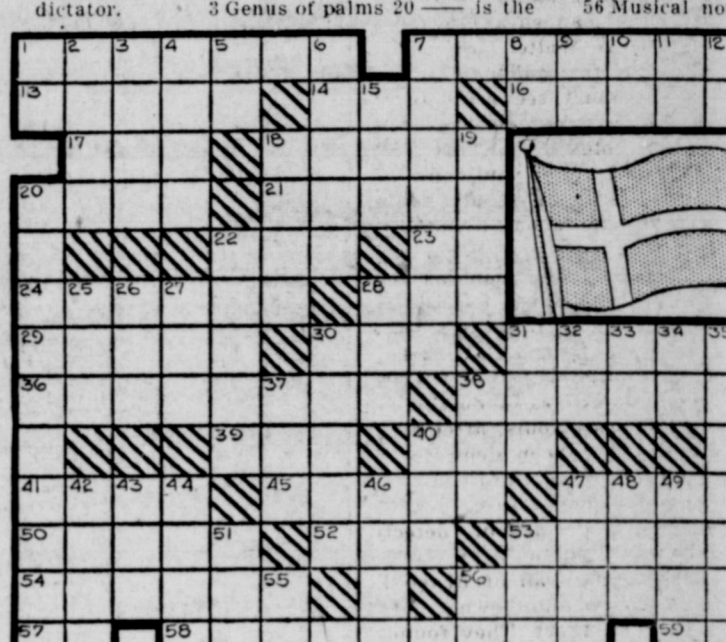

"It becomes more and more evident," said Dr. Ayer, "that the first grade is both a proving and a dumping ground. Teachers discover those capable of going on successfully with the conventional second grade work. Others, about one-third, are retained in the first grade and the weakest of these are likely to remain there more or less indefinitely. Once in the second grade, chances of going ahead are fairly stable."

Lovable

BEGIN HERE TODAY ANN HOLMSTEDT, twenty and 20, breaks her engagement to TONY MICKLE, commercial artist, because of his drinking and general irresponsibility. The same day PETER KENDALL, healthy and prominent, learns how VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancée, has deceived him and tells her everything is over between them. Ann and Peter, both heart-sick and disillusioned, meet and discuss their mutual unhappiness. When Peter asks Ann to marry him she agrees. They go to Florida and spend several weeks happily. Then Peter is called home because of business. All of the Kendall family, except Peter's sister, MILLENT, wish Ann to go with Peter. At a week-end party Ann is thrown from a horse. Although her injuries are not serious Peter is deeply alarmed. A few days later, when Ann is convalescing, Valeria comes to see her. Valeria tells Ann that Peter's grandfather has cut him off in his will because of his marriage and intimates that Peter regrets the marriage. Believing her love for Peter is hopeless, Ann runs away. They go on WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI "YOUR office is calling, sir," the maid said timidly from the door. "Something important, they said." Peter smiled grimly. "Something important?" Susan, I'm shutting this place up for a while. I'll give you and Evans and Rose each a month's salary in advance. "Yes, sir." "Tell Evans to pack two large bags and send them to the club for me." In the kitchen the three servants conversed in low tones. "It was like he had gone crazy," Susan said. "He stood there looking down at the letter, his hand shaking so he could hardly hold it and his face as white as that flour." "Would you have believed it?" Rose shook her head. "I didn't know when she was well of Mr. Peter so handsome and rich and doing on her so." Peter was wondering where Ann had gone. To Sarah's? To her former home in Greenfield? Then came the thought plunging him into torment. She had gone to Tony's. The idea was like a thousand devils destroying him. If he didn't put it aside it would drive him mad. He must get away from this place where Ann had been, where he had been building up hope after hope, where his love had grown until nothing else seemed worth while in life. Haggard, wild-eyed, he caught the elevator. Evans had brought his car to the front. He got in, took the wheel and drove away from town. A half hour later he drove up in front of the home he had purchased as a surprise for Ann. He had let the nurse into the secret and she had said Ann would be strong enough today to drive out. He had pictured Ann's excited eyes, her rapturous exclamations. Perhaps after a while, he would sell the place. But not now. Not for a long while. He wondered if the time would ever come when he would be willing for anyone else to own Ann's home. He had planned it, even to the smallest details, with the thought of her happiness and comfort. He had pictured the soft, imported rugs here, beautiful draperies, the furniture, things she had chosen. He went out, shutting the door, turning the key on his broken dream. MRS. KENDALL had said to MILLENT, "This family has had en-

"BREAK" IN LINDBERGH CASE CAME AFTER THIRTY MONTHS OF WORK BY DETECTIVES

Editor's Note: The "break" in the Lindbergh case, anticipated quietly for months by the diligent detectives whose life work had become a solution of the crime, came in the middle of September, 1934, 30 months after Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., had been stole from his crib in Hopewell. The story of the arrest is told in the following dispatch, ninth in the series by Sidney E. Whipple.

By SIDNEY E. WHIPPLE
United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1934, United Press)
On the morning of Sept. 15, 1934, a blue Dodge sedan was driven up to a gas pump in a Manhattan filling station. The man at the wheel handed a $10 gold certificate to Walter Lyle, in payment for five gallons of gasoline. "You don't see many of these any more," Lyle remarked, fingering the note.

"No, I guess you don't," said the customer. "I've only got a few left myself—about a hundred of them."
Lyle gave the man his change and mechanically, in accordance with Jimmy Finn's instructions wrote the figures "AU-12-41" on the back of the $10 certificate.
Detectives in Pursuit
Within six hours, after the certificate had been deposited in a branch of the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Company, three coordinated groups of detectives, federal, state and city, were hotly pursuing the trail of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, owner of car license 4U-13-41. They found him as he was emerging from the driveway of his modest home in the far Bronx, and they trailed him assiduously for five days before laying on his shoulder the hand of arrest.

Unconscious of the shadow, Bruno Hauptmann went about the city, visiting the haunts in which it was his custom to sit for hours, over a heidel of beer.
On the morning of Sept. 18, he drove the blue sedan out of his garage as usual. But as he passed into a roadway, a police car edged him to the curb. Seven men, headed by Acting Lieutenant James Finn, leaped toward his automobile and covered him with automatics.

"You're wanted at headquarters," said Finn. But it was not to headquarters, but to the old "bastille," now an automobile license police bureau, that the protesting prisoner was taken. For three days they grilled him—and never once succeeded in breaking down his stolid composure.
Ransom Bill in Pocket
On his person, when he was arrested, Hauptmann had another of the Lindbergh ransom bills, a $20 certificate. He professed, for a time, not to know where it came from.
Then detectives began a stick-by-stick and stone-by-stone demolition of the little garage in East 222nd Street, the Bronx, which they knew had been constructed by his own hands. Their pickaxes broke through the flooring and penetrated a mine. From sacks and wrappings tumbled thousands of yellow-backed gold certificates. Another hoard, cunningly concealed in window casings, added to the pile. They counted $13,750, and every bill of the lot bore a number that checked with the serials of the ransom

Col. Lindbergh had paid to regain the son who never came back alive. In the leveling of the garage the officers came upon another cache even more painstakingly hidden from prying eyes. The hoarder had sunk five small borings into a plank, and each of the holes contained a roll of bills. The plank had been fixed into position with its smooth side outward, presenting an innocent appearance until it was tapped. The detectives added $840 to their pile of recovered money.

Identified by Taxi Driver
Joseph Perrone, taxicab driver who had once carried a ransom note to Jafsie at the behest of a man who approached him in the darkness of a Bronx street, was bidden to headquarters. He walked up to the prisoner, standing with a group of detectives, and putting his hand on Hauptmann's shoulder, said, "this is the man."
Jafsie himself, hailed from his lecture room, was not so positive. "He doesn't look exactly like the man to whom I gave the $50,000," he said. "This man appears much heavier."
Col. Lindbergh, disguised in dark-rimmed glasses and a large cap, listened attentively to the prisoner's voice as he responded to the questions of the authorities.

"It is the same voice I heard calling, 'hey, doctor, over here doctor,'" he said.
Wife Interviewed
The detectives "interviewed" Anna Schoeffler Hauptmann, the suspect's wife. How did her husband get all this money? How was he able to live without working?
"He has always been thrifty. He made good wages. He saved a lot. And he won money playing the stock market," Mrs. Hauptmann explained.
Investigation of his brokerage accounts showed Hauptmann had lost $7,000 in less than two years. "Well, I'll tell you," said Hauptmann. "I got it from a friend of mine named Isidore Fisch—a man who used to work with me in the fur business. He owed me money, about $7,500. So last winter he took a trip to Germany, and when he left, he asked me to take care of some of his belongings. In the lot was a shoe box. I didn't know what was in it, but I put it in the bed-room closet. Later I discovered—I guess it was three or four weeks ago—that it contained money. And knowing that he owed me money, I helped myself to it. I've spent two or three hundred dollars of it."

Jafsie's Name
While Hauptmann was telling his story, the detectives searching every square inch of his Bronx flat came upon a panel on which were penciled the address and telephone number of Dr. John Condon—Jafsie.
"I don't know who wrote there or why," said Hauptmann. "Perhaps Fisch did it."
"And where," the officers asked, "might this Isidor Fisch be at the present time?"
Unfortunately, Isidor Fisch died in Germany of tuberculosis, in the Spring of 1934.

Exposes Weakness Of Canal Defense

Nelson Rounsevell, publisher of the Panama American, is carrying his campaign for adequate defenses to the United States. In New York he charged that even now 20 men ready to sacrifice their lives, could inflict damage that would tie up the canal for months.

New Oklahoma Governor Is For His Own New Deal

PONCA CITY, Ok.—One of the nation's "New Deal" governors is patterning his steps as nearly as possible after President Roosevelt—and making no excuses.
He is E. W. Marland, governor-elect of Oklahoma, former oil baron who saw his $150,000,000 fortune melt away before he plunged into politics, first as a congressman.

Marland preached himself into the governorship over a field of 14 strong opponents, using only "the new deal" as his text.

Politics a Game
To him, he frequently said politics was a game of "follow the leader," and the only leader was Franklin Roosevelt. Since his election, Marland's $2,500,000 baronial mansion here—one of the finest and most richly appointed structures in the Southwest—has been a beehive of activity.
The state's fortunes are being remoulded in its walnut-paneled offices.
In one office, a "trust trust" of state leaders is at work on taxation and revenue problems—the task of taxing all classes and industries fairly and equitably.
Marland's "Jim Farley"
In another office, Howard B. Drake, a young loan broker who directed Marland's campaign as his first political venture, receives job-offers, formulates policies, and consults with his chief. He is the "Jim Farley" of the Marland administration.

Other committees are at work getting industries established in Oklahoma, in plumbing the needs of state institutions, in studying possible renovation and modernization of the state's educational system, in looking after the state's future highway program, and in studying penal reform systems, juvenile delinquency and social reform.

Studies Social Program
Marland has summoned attorneys, farmers, professors—the butcher, baker and candlestick maker—to help him with a wide program of social reform such as the state has never before seen.

Gov. W. H. Murray's radical policies, which elevated him to the chief executive office four years ago, almost seem reactionary compared to Marland's "new deal."
Flood control, land utilization, court reform, establishment of a state police system, clemency reforms, and a host of other propositions are on the new deal agenda.
Many of Marland's advisors are decidedly liberal, others "old line" Democrats. He consults all of them, listens and makes his own decisions. He has called in the Murray-appointed state official and elected officers to get a first-hand picture of governmental conditions. His "brain trust" is working over a multitude of reforms.

Zoo Aviary Is Foremost In U. S.

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO.—The aviary at the San Antonio zoo is believed to be one of the foremost in the nation. Recent additions have brought the total number of birds on exhibition up to 1,100.
The latest addition was a collection of 30 birds, many of them rare species, donated by David E. Humes of Eagle Pass.
Some of the birds given to the zoo include several hybrid and California quail, a Brazilian crested cardinal; several silver bill finches, a chucker partridge, several masked love birds, a paradise wydhah, a magpie finch, and several St. Helena waxbills.

No. 14299 Treasury Department OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3, 1934. Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that Eastland National Bank, in the City of Eastland, in the County of Eastland and State of Texas, has complied with all the provisions of the statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking;

Now therefore I, J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that Eastland National Bank, in the City of Eastland in the County of Eastland and State of Texas is authorized to commence the business of banking as provided in Section 5169 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

In testimony whereof witness my hand and seal of office this 3rd day of November, 1934. (seal) J. F. T. O'CONNOR, Comptroller of the Currency.

THIS IS SO DUCKY!

All the ducks that flock from the frozen north to the sunny south aren't chance victims of the barrage of shotguns that greet them en route. A vast number of them survive the bombardment of 12-gauges to reach the Everglades in Florida, and come under the uncanny power of John Cowleson, a Miami naturalist. Here he is making friends with an assortment of wild fowl.

BOTH MALE AND FEMALE PIGEONS FURNISH "PIGEON MILK" FOR THEIR YOUNG.

CANADA HAS AN AREA 81,534 SQUARE MILES LARGER THAN THAT OF THE UNITED STATES, YET ITS POPULATION IS NO MORE THAN THAT OF NEW YORK CITY AND ITS 50-MILE COMMUTING TERRITORY.

THE monument erected to the pack-mules of White Pass carried the following inscription: "In memory of us three thousand pack-mules that laid our bones on these awful hills during the gold rush of 1897-98. We now thank those listening souls that heard our groans across this stretch of years. We waited, but not in vain."

IN 1900... BAUENDAH, A GERMAN LIEUTENANT, ATTEMPTED TO BUILD AN OVERHEAD RAILWAY FROM SPITZBERGEN TO THE NORTH POLE! THE CARS WERE TO BE SUSPENDED FROM A WIRE STRUNG ON POLES. SEVERAL MILES OF POLES ACTUALLY WERE ERECTED.

ONLY THE MALE VAPORER MOTHS HAVE WINGS!

SMOKELESS POWDER IS 'SMOKELESS,' NOT BECAUSE IT HAS NO SMOKE, BUT BECAUSE IT LEAVES NO SOLID RESIDUE.

ALTHOUGH the distance from Spitzbergen to the North Pole is about 800 miles, Lieutenant Bauendahl believed that it was possible to travel over the icy wastes by a suspension railway. After his first plan failed, he tried to reach the pole on a raft.

Religious Situation In Mexico Dangerous

By United Press
EL PASO, Dec. 26.—The religious situation in Mexico is "too dangerous a subject to talk about," Thomas D. Bowman, American consul general in Mexico City, said here on an inspection tour of border consulates. "Mexico is quiet and there is little danger of trouble," he said. Forms for authentication of Mexican divorces, attacked recently, will be continued, he said.

STIRRING COURTROOM DRAMA TO SHOW HERE

Out of the tense drama of the courtroom, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios have brought the powerful story of "Evelyn Prentice," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, which opens today at the Lyric Theatre.

The picture marks the third appearance of Powell and Miss Loy as a co-starring team and is the industry's response to the public's demand for a reappearance of the popular pair who made screen history in "Manhattan Melodrama" and "The Thin Man."

"Evelyn Prentice" presents Powell as a noted criminal attorney with a lovely and dutiful wife who, through a momentary indiscretion, becomes involved in a scandalous murder case.

The wife, portrayed by Miss Loy, sees another woman brought to trial for a crime that, she, herself, believes she has committed. She and the "other woman" both win vindication, through the legal genius of the great criminal attorney, in one of the most spectacular courtroom climaxes to reach the motion picture screen.

The picture also heralds the return to directorial ranks of William K. Howard, who took an extended vacation in Europe following his work on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical triumph, "The Cat and the Fiddle."

Una Merkel appears as Miss Loy's wise-cracking and faithful friend, Ann Drexel, and others in the supporting cast are Henry Wadsworth, Isabel Jewell, Harvey Stephens, Rosalind Russell, Edward Brophy, Cora Sue Collins and Jessie Ralph.

A Hollywood designer says high laced shoes are coming back. And, with longer skirts, women again will have to depend on their faces to attract the men.

Hire Her? Sure!

A lucky beauty is Dolores Casey, above. She wasn't looking for a movie job when she posed for a New York commercial photographer, but a sharp-eyed film talent scout saw the picture, liked it, and rushed around to sign her up. So now she's in Hollywood, ready for her career.

Know Your Groceries

DID you know that the speed with which a bread dough rises depends to a great extent upon the kind of flour that is used?

Did you know that the way coffee is roasted is as important in producing fine uniform flavor as careful blending?

Did you know that some shortenings can impart a delicious delicate flavor to the foods in which they are used?

As a matter of fact there is some very important information to be had regarding the groceries you use day after day. It is information that will guide you in improving the taste-appeal of the food you prepare. And by using this information in buying groceries, you will realize that there's genuine, tangible economy in paying for quality.

The storekeeper hasn't the time to tell you about the different characteristics of staples such as flour, sugar, spices, and butter. Or cereals. Or Coffee. Or beverages. But you can find these facts yourself—right in your newspaper—in the advertisements.

Take time to read these advertisements. They are written in an interesting manner and the important technical points are clearly portrayed. What's more, the facts are easy to remember and when you go to market you will be able to buy with authority—get the most for your money—enjoy the utmost at your table.
