Roosevelt Urges Entry Into World Court

ALLRED ASKS PROHIBITION REFERENDUM

By United Press
AUSTIN, Jan. 16.—Popular referendum on repeal of prohibition and old age pensions were asked by Governor James Allred today in his first message to the legislature.

He also asked stronger oil control without relinquishing the state's exclusive right to regulate production and issuance of the remaining $3,500,000 "bread bonds," most of which probably will be expended in caring for the state's unemployed.

Governor Allred personally delivered his message at a joint session of the house and senate, which convened at 2 p. m. He stressed oil regulation and adequate relief as immediate problems.

FOUR BANDITS ROB A BANK AT BUFFALO

By United Press
BUFFALO, Texas, Jan. 16.—Four bandits today robbed the Citizens State bank here of between $2,000 and $3,000 and escaped in an automobile.

The robbers waited at the bank until President Robert Burroughs came to work and forced him to admit them. Two remained on guard outside while the others made the president open the vault.

When bank employees and a number of customers entered the bank they were herded together in a small room and told to keep quiet.

Employees said the robbers went about their business calmly, taking an hour and a half to complete the job.

Film Folk Make a Match of It

A strikingly happy match is this one, which united Jocelyn Lee, film actress, and James L. Seymour in marriage at Hollywood. Only a few close friends witnessed the ceremony. Seymour, an associate film producer, is the second husband of Miss Lee, who divorced Luther Reed, a director, in 1931.

THREE KILLED AS CITIZENS CHASE BANDITS

By United Press
LENORE, Ill., Jan. 16.—Bank bandits and vigilantes fought a series of bloody gun battles in Illinois today.

Three men were killed and three were wounded. Three of the gang of four bandits were captured. No money was obtained.

The victims included a cashier of the bank, who was killed; the sheriff of Marshall county, shot and killed, and an unidentified bandit, who shot and killed himself with a machine gun to avoid capture.

One of the wounded men, a county supervisor, was in serious condition.

An attempt had been made a month ago to hold up the state bank here and suspicion was aroused when a stranger was seen repairing an automobile in the alley of the bank today.

Quietly the village posse was assembled and surrounded the bank, wounded and captured the suspect who was working on the car.

Inside they found three bandits waiting for the time locks on the vault to open. The posse charged and the bandits fled. Finding their car surrounded they rushed to a garage where they stole an automobile and kidnaped a repairman and another man.

The alarm was broadcast and a sheriff who attempted to intercept the bandits was killed and the bandits went on their way.

Officers throughout the central part of the state were joined by citizen vigilantes and closed in on the area from all sides, finally trapping them at a farm near McNab, Ill.

SOVEREIGNTY OF NATION TO STAY INTACT

Message Is Read To Joint Session of Two Houses Today.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—President Roosevelt today requested the senate to put the United States into the world court to make "international justice practicable and servicable."

In a special message the president threw the weight of his influence behind the world court movement, asking early ratification of the protocols for American adherence.

Noting both party platforms have advocated a voluntary international court, Mr. Roosevelt said this was an "obviously sound and thoroughly American policy."

"The sovereignty of the United States will in no way be diminished or jeopardized," he said.

"At this period in international relations when every act is of moment to the future of world peace, the United States has an opportunity, once more, to throw its weight into the scale in favor of peace."

Mr. Roosevelt's message, read to the senate by a clerk, gave impetus to the most determined movement in years to the American adherence to the court.

Eastland County Is Urged to Support Brazos River Plan

George Barber, secretary of the Mineral Wells Chamber of Commerce was a visitor in Eastland county today, meeting with business men and members of the chambers of commerce in Eastland, Ranger and Cisco, during their support on the Brazos River project.

At the meetings Mr. Barber outlined, briefly, the advantages to be derived from the $50,000,000 project, if the money can be secured from the federal government, and those who attended the meetings voted to have the chamber of commerce in each town support the movement to have business men write to Congressman Thomas L. Blanton and Senator Tom Connally trying their support if the bill is brought before the present session of congress.

Briefly he outlined steps to be taken by each county under three divisions. These were the appointment of a committee to supervise the program; letters by organizations and individuals to Senator Tom Connally and to their representatives—in this case Congressman Thomas L. Blanton; and individual letters to representatives of other states whom the writers may know, or to business concerns with whom they may have influence.

To that was added the idea that the letters might be followed up with petitions signed by those who probably would not take the time to write the letters.

Mr. Barber outlined the project as one directly in line with the policies of President Roosevelt, and one which would be presented for adoption as a self liquidating plan. He pointed to it as a power producing undertaking but not a power distributing enterprise.

It is a vast PWA plan with the idea of giving employment and along the Brazos river watershed. To be properly presented to those in charge he said each county should organize around a key city, developing the vast production area and tentative locations made for dams subject to the approval of the engineers.

While 12 major dam sites are being pointed to, he said those were tentative and might be changed after an engineering survey.

Counties wanting minor dams should make applications to the state engineering department, which would first pass upon the feasibility of the proposal and then make a survey to determine its practicability.

POSSIBILITY OF RULING ON GOLD ACTION IS CAUSING UNEASINESS IN MARKETS

Editor's Note: The gold cases in the supreme court have centered attention on this litigation which threatens the administration's monetary and fiscal program. This is the first of a series of three dispatches seeking to simplify the complicated situation.

BY JOHN A. REICHMANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Tumbling stock and commodity prices foreshadow speculative reaction to the possibility of the supreme court declaring unconstitutional the gold action of the Roosevelt administration.

Presumably the rumblings were a foretaste of what would happen if the court acts against the monetary program, as exemplified in the cases involved, without precautionary action by the government.

Five cases involving the gold program have been argued before the court. In three of them the plaintiffs contend that their railroad gold clause bonds must be paid in gold or the currency equivalent, $1.69 to the dollar. In another they charge fourth 4 1/2 Liberty bonds called last spring should be paid the same way. The fourth suit charges similar payments should be made on gold certificates turned in under the antihoarding order.

The government claims that none of these claims can be upheld because they interfere with congress' power to regulate the currency.

For a clear picture of the situation before the court it is necessary to understand what the government has been trying to do since that March day in 1933 when President Roosevelt declared the bank holiday.

Prior to that date raids on the dollar had tended to reduce the government's supply of gold. It was flowing abroad and at home hoarders were gathering in gold and certificates under the free gold policy which had been maintained by the United States long after other nations had abandoned it.

Foreign nations for the most part had given up the free gold standard and ceased the use of gold coin. Instead bullion reserves were maintained as backing for currency. This is just what the United States sought to do.

The obvious advantage of this system was to maintain a stable currency. It also permitted the government to maintain the value of the dollar on foreign exchange on a parity with the currency of other nations. Raids on the dol-

Another Expert Says Handwriting Was Hauptmann's

By United Press
FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 16. Albert Osborn, son of a previous witness today was the seventh government expert to charge the writing of the Lindbergh ransom note against Bruno Hauptmann, accused of the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

Osborn, a 49-year-old replica of his distinguished father, added the weight of his handwriting knowledge to six previous experts and declared, at the start of his testimony, his conviction the hand that wrote the ransom notes also wrote Hauptmann's application for an automobile license.

Like the previous witness, the younger Osborn testified to his belief that the ransom notes were in disguised handwriting and that the specimens of the prisoner's handwriting, taken after his arrest, also were in part disguise.

H. L. HART AN APPLICANT FOR MAVERICK HEAD

Coach H. L. Hart, former all-conference Daniel Baker end, and assistant Maverick coach this past season, is regarded as a likely choice to succeed "Red" Petty, who recently resigned as head Maverick mentor, it was learned Wednesday.

Hart's work with the 1934 Maverick line coupled with his record as head coach at Nacogdoches, Texas, and Maryville, De Ridder, and Lake Charles, La., have won for him a reputation as a capable mentor.

Confronted with little material for a line, he so juggled the players from position to position and produced by the end of the season a line that could hold against the strongest offense in the Oil Belt.

In Evans Mitchell, Hart uncovered one of the fiercest and most savage like tackles that Maverick fans have looked upon. Under his tutelage Sam Butler and D. C. Frost received recognition in the district.

Before coming to Eastland Hart compiled a record in Nacogdoches and three Louisiana towns. During his regime as head mentor his teams won 34 games while losing only eight and tying three.

Hart has tutored several nationally famous football luminaries. Among the stars were Bill Bankers, "The Blond Blizzard," and Don Zimmerman, both all-American at Tulane university. Hart had the two stars on his team at Lake Charles, La. Bur Bagger, former all-Southwest conference back at S. M. U.; Buck Frizzell, Centenary tackle, and Charles Baker, present S. M. U. lineman, are among his former players.

Coach Hart was elected Maverick mentor in 1923 but declined the position. He has attended coaching schools instructed by Knute Rockne, late Notre Dame coach; Howard Jones, U. S. C. coach, and Pop Warner, Temple university coach.

Besides Hart as a likely applicant there are two or three more. It is unlikely that selection will be made before Feb. 4, the Eastland school board's next meet date, unless a special meet is called.

AGENTS KILL OUTLAW AND HIS MOTHER

By United Press
OCKLAWANA, Fla., Jan. 16.—Federal agents and county officers today killed Fred Barker, notorious outlaw, and his elderly mother in a long-drawn machine gun battle at a farmhouse here. There were no other casualties.

Barker was suspected of complicity in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy St. Paul, Minn., brewer. Ten department of justice agents raided the house about 6:45 a. m.

"We are department of justice men. Come on out," one of the officers shouted.

Shooting started from the house. The officers returned the fire from behind cover. Machine guns were used on both sides.

The shooting died down only flare up intermittently. After an hour's quiet shortly after noon, federal agents began closing in on the house and filled it with tear gas.

When the officers crashed they found Barker and his mother dead. Department of justice said Mrs. Barker had a machine gun clutched in her hands.

Chicago Shows It Can Rid Itself of Crime

Think back a little. Chicago hasn't been in the news with spectacular crime for some time, has it? Remember a few years back when there were St. Valentine's Day massacres, and flower shop killings, and Al Capones, and the roar of shotguns through the streets in bloody beer wars? Yet the racket killings and spectacular crime of the last two or three years seem to have been elsewhere, if you think back a little.

Chicago declares that's true. It contends that its battle against organized crime has achieved so much success that Chicago now is rated as "one of the safest of cities in which to live, work, and do business."

In other words, he believes Chicago has become a place professional criminals want to avoid, rather than a sort of green pasture for their activities.

Whether these reports are over-optimistic, only time and a careful investigation could tell. But the fact is plain that much progress has been made. How was it done? First of all, there was the Crime Commission, made up of men who were interested enough in the fair name of their city to give their time and effort to doing something about it. Without such men, no city can get far in the fight on organized crime.

Chief Justice Prystalski, roused by a particularly vicious escape from a Chicago courtroom by an armed prisoner, called judges back from fishing trips and ordered them to go to work. Bargaining with criminals to plead guilty in exchange for short sentences was stopped.

The 199-year penalty was devised to prevent parole of murders (a prisoner must serve one-third of his sentence before becoming eligible for parole). Repeal took away much of the "big money" from beer racketeers, making them far less influential in "fixing" cases against them. Speedy justice squelched the kidnaping racket.

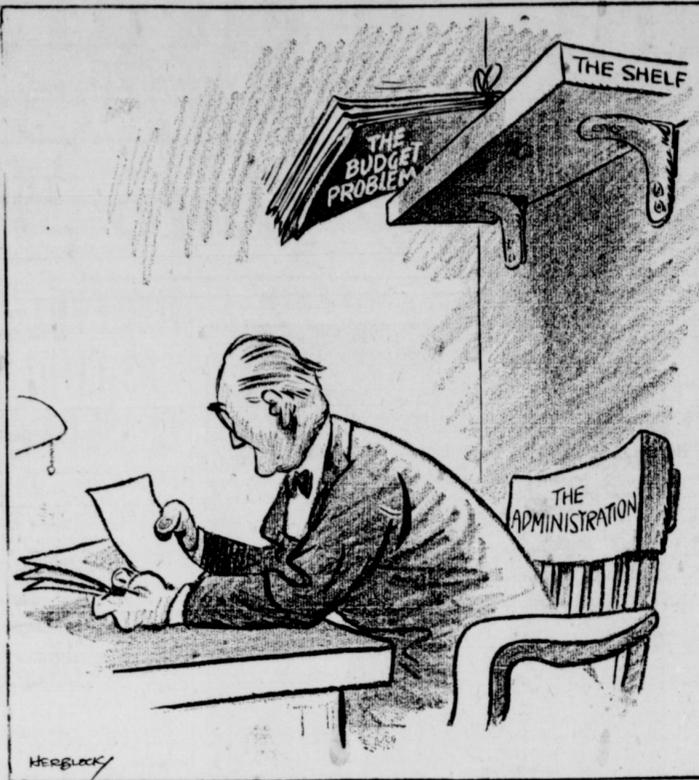

Prosecutors and judges attacked piled-up dockets. Last October there were 1145 cases. A week ago, 375. Nearly half the crime cases now come to trial within 30 days.

Chicago seems to be pointing the way. No other city had a worse crime problem. If Chicago can make this sort of progress, so can any city.

Forecloses On Seymour Light System

Judge W. M. Taylor in strict court recently rendered judgment for the Corporation of Chicago against the City of Seymour for its lien upon the light plant and distribution system.

In its amended petition it purchased notes payable to the Fairbanks, Co., who built the plant and asked it be given judgment.

The original and amended petition Seymour in 1928 contracted to buy the light plant for $1,111,526 and that the Dec. 15, 1929, signed notes amount plus $15,749 representing additional equipment not included in the original agreement, a total of $1,127,275. The total was payable in 72 notes for $15,000 monthly, plus 6 percent interest.

Seymour was unable to make regular schedule of payments. In 1930, the Fairbanks, & Co. entered into an agreement with the city, refinancing the plant and accumulated indebtedness to be paid $500 monthly the year, $900 monthly the second, $1,000 monthly the third, and monthly thereafter.

The petition states only $2,933 had been paid during 1930 on the contract and up to last month only $14,100.

The City of Seymour plant purchased in accordance with and provisions of Articles 8 Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas, and that the City expressly provided that the City of Seymour never have the right to pay the debt of the obligation funds raised or to be raised in any other manner.

The City of Seymour contract provided that the City "hereby grants and agrees to grant to any person or persons the municipal light or system under sale or foreclosure of the liens securing payment of the said plant or system purchased for a term of 20 years, commencing on the date of such purchase."

CHAPTER XLVIII

It was just a year later. Mrs. Kendall, Millicent and Carol were waiting at Ann's home waiting for Ann to come back from the hospital. Ann and Peter and their three weeks' old son.

"Here they are now," Carol said from the window.

And here they were. Ann being lifted by two stalwart attendants. A nurse in crisp white following Peter, carrying his first-born carefully, marching proudly.

Soon they were all crowding about Ann's bed.

"Hello everybody," Ann said. "It was sweet of you to be here for Peter. This is his homecoming."

Millicent said "You couldn't have kept us away. Look at this youngster. Peter! He's holding hands already." A tiny hand had curled around her finger.

"What a man, what a man!" mocked Carol. But her eyes were soft.

Peter was sitting by Ann's bed, his eyes never leaving her for very long. The last three weeks had been hard on Peter. Everyone talked about how splendidly Ann had gotten along. But it had been a period of fearful suspense for Peter.

Ann had known how scared Peter was. "I'm going to be all right, darling," she had whispered as Peter stood, watching anxiously while she was being lifted to the stretcher.

In the ambulance later she had said, "I'll be up in another week. And soon after that we'll drive out to Kendallwood and show off young Peter."

Then a slight shadow had crossed her face. Everybody in Kendallwood wanting to see the baby—except the owner of Kendallwood.

Millicent had long since become reconciled to Peter's marriage. Had even grown fond of Ann. But during the 12 months Peter's grandfather stubbornly refused to see "the girl who had hopped up and married Peter and hopped away from him almost as quickly," as he phrased it.

Ann couldn't be perfectly happy with Peter's grandfather feeling as he did.

"He doesn't feel any way at all," Peter told her. "It's that darned hard head of his. He always has hated to acknowledge he's been wrong."

At first, confident that his grandfather would relent, Peter had visited him regularly, as before. But, as the months went by and his vehement protests against his grandfather's treatment of Ann left the old man unmoved, Peter's attitude changed.

He was becoming bitter. Ann could see. She couldn't hear it—Peter feeling that way toward his grandfather, his face darkening when his grandfather's name was mentioned.

When the new home was being built Peter had gone out to bring his grandfather to see it—but had come back alone.

On the day the baby was born Peter had come out again for his grandfather.

"Ann named him Peter—for both of us," he said. "She says she hopes there'll be a Peter Kendall for every generation."

"Very interesting," said the old man drily. "No, Peter, I won't go back with you. I'm an old man now—too old to change my mind."

"Very well, sir," Peter had answered. And had left without an other word.

Peter had not asked his grandfather to come today. There had been an ominous set to his jaw when Ann mentioned it.

"I'll be darned if I will," he bent down swiftly to kiss her, and she smiled at him. When she smiled her brown eyes lighted as though a little flame were burning within her heart. Such a warm, human, understanding smile. If it had been anyone but Ann his grandfather had hurt. It would not be so hard to forgive him.

Mrs. Kendall was holding the baby. Her usually smooth hair was slightly disheveled, her face was flushed. She looked almost motherly, Ann thought.

"It doesn't take me long to get my hand in with children," Mrs. Kendall was saying proudly to Millicent. "I think I'll come over tomorrow morning and see how that nurse bathes him. I've forgotten more than these new-fashioned nurses will ever know about babies."

"Come on, Mother, before you undo all the good work that has been done training this infant," Millicent said. "It's time Ann was getting a little rest."

Kendallwood when I put you out."

"I think I'll take a jump over to Kendallwood when I put you out," Millicent told her mother, on the way home.

"It won't do any good," Mrs. Kendall said. "Your grandfather is terribly hard-headed." She added complacently. "When I realized Peter and Ann were so much in love I became reconciled to their marriage. And I must say she's a very sweet girl."

Millicent found her grandfather alone, sitting before the fire. She thought he looked tired, older. But there was fire in his glance when she said, "Ann's back from the hospital."

"Ridiculous, ever going there," he growled. "All this business of hospitals, clinics, nurses, diets for a baby. Civilization's gone soft, my dear."

"He's a nice baby," Millicent said, petting the wrinkled head. "Wouldn't you like to see him? He's a perfect Kendall!"

"No, I've said I wouldn't go, and I won't."

"He's exactly like you."

"Humph. Stuff and nonsense." "He's got the same kind of chin. I'll bet my hat he'll be a stubborn youngster."

ANN had wakened from a long sleep. She heard voices and steps on the stairs.

The door opened and Peter stood there, grinning happily. Beside him stood an elderly man with gray hair and fierce gray eyes under shaggy brows. The fierce eyes softened as they traveled from Ann's lovely, wistful face to the small, white bed close by.

"Grandfather Kendall!" Ann said a little breathlessly. "I'm so glad you've come."

The old man came over to the bed and stood for a moment, staring down at Ann, taking the hand she held out to him. Suddenly he stooped and kissed her forehead.

"Peter," he said, sternly. "Why didn't you tell me you had a wife like this? You young id—"

Peter saw there were tears in his grandfather's eyes. The old man wiped them away surreptitiously with his handkerchief.

"You wouldn't have believed me if I had told you she was an angel."

"I might have thought you were slightly exaggerating." The old man's eyes were twinkling. "Ann, I've been an old fool—"

"We were silly not to come out and kidnap you." Ann's shining eyes met his. "Now that you're here, we're going to keep you. We've had your room waiting a long time."

"I sort of thought of that myself. I brought a satchel with a few things—"

"Good old scout!" said Peter. "We'll put you in the south wing where your great-grandson's hymn to the morning won't disturb your slumbers. There, listen to him. Won't you?"

The small head, covered by golden down, stirred against the white pillow.

Peter the Third had opened his eyes. His tiny fists began beating the air. There was a lusty, indignant wall.

"Got a temper, eh? Well, he wouldn't be a Kendall without it. Well, son, come to your great-granddad."

He stooped, lifted the baby into his arms and sat down with him, rocking back and forward in the big chair.

Peter the Third's face relaxed, his tiny fists uncurled, his blue eyes stared up at the old man. He was the picture of perfect serenity.

"Yes, he's exactly like me," his great-grandfather said. "The world's fine when he's having his way."

PETER the Third was sleeping again. Peter the First had retired to the big livable room across the hall.

Peter the Second had returned, after a long, comradely talk with his grandfather, and now was sitting not far from Ann, reading. There was a look of unutterable happiness and contentment on his face.

Ann was lying in bed, eyes wide, too happy for sleep.

They were all together in this lovely home that she and Peter had built. Life was wonderful. Nothing was quite so wonderful as life!

"Ann," Peter said.

When Peter spoke her name, her heart always beat a little faster.

"There is a moon tonight like the one the wise men saw," Peter said. "A crescent moon. And close to it a bright, clear star."

"Let's see."

He lifted her in his arms, threw a robe about her, and carried her to the window where she could see the dark arc of the sky, the shining slender crescent and the big, bright star.

Ann was thinking of the baby that lay in a manger so many hundreds of years before. Of her own baby, sleeping in his white, small bed.

"A little child shall lead them," she whispered, her face pressed against Peter's shoulder.

His lips found hers. "Three make a world," said Peter.

"Four," corrected Ann happily. "Don't forget we've adopted grandfather."

THE END.

THE "Laxative Question"

UNDER the doctor's care, or in the hospital, you would get a liquid laxative. And the liquid form is what you would use at home, if you knew what a doctor knows!

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less.

Once you have experienced this comfort, you will never return to any form of help that can't be regulated to suit the need.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even with children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. You'll like its taste, and like its action. It's pleasant to take, and won't sicken you like a violent cathartic.

So, try Syrup Pepsin. Take regulated doses until Nature restores regularity. Those who have made the "liquid test" know why most doctors favor a liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Get a bottle today.

BE CAREFUL

If any laxative makes you thirsty, affects your appetite, seems to burn, or requires larger doses than when you first began its use—change to a liquid laxative!

Advertisements are a guide to value

Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it all means something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel saws, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch... knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The product that is advertised is worthy of your confidence.

Merchandise must be good or it could not be consistently advertised. Buy advertised goods

Student Group Not In Favor of War
By United Press
AUSTIN.—Social science students, members of the University of Texas Nordic club, unanimously oppose bearing arms for the United States in a war of invasion.
"We of the Nordic club would not bear arms for the United States in the invasion of the borders of another country," members answered a questionnaire recently. "We cannot conceive of a situation arising in which it would be to our interests to invade another country."
Wars of protection would be fought by Nordic club members, that is, if wealth and resources were conscripted on a socialistic basis. The United States, they believed, could stay out of war if the government effectively controlled the munitions business and adopted a policy of capital conscription during wartime.

ALL women at some period of their lives need a strengthening tonic like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The young woman who suffers from monthly pains, the expectant mother who has nausea and other disagreeable symptoms, or the middle-aged woman who experiences "heat flashes" should try this Prescription. Finally she used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and gained weight and had no further trouble."

C. M. Bender, one of Eastland's outstanding rental agents for residences is enthusiastic for the future of Eastland. He stated that last year there were more than fifty residences under his control vacant in Eastland. Not so this year. While there are still several vacant they are gradually filling up. One of the major things that Mr. Bender does for the workmen and other interests of Eastland is the volume of money he has jurisdiction over by representing the loan companies that he has been scattering around Eastland during the past few months. He has kept workmen busy repairing houses through the past hard months and several thousand dollars have been spent in the cash registers of the business interests as a result. He has several houses now undergoing repairs inside and out. That's the kind of interest it takes to make a good city, and Mr. Bender's interests along this line never wavers.

Sixty-five years of married life is an interesting event, and to have the sweetness and inspirational atmosphere of such an experience still to pay honor to is the greatest thing of all. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pipkin of Canyon City, are isleing their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Pipkin, this week. This veteran couple are evidently not old yet in spite of their past eighty years of living through the trials and tribulations of the nation's progress. The fireside in the Pipkin home is more beautiful than ever, with the advantage of having Mother and Dad looking proudly on their wonderful son, and his estimable family, and they in turn paying honorable reverence to their wonderful parents.
