MANY ARE BOUND DOWN BY A VICIOUS SYSTEM

One of the hardest things to do, in trying to assess the rights and wrongs of a tangled social order, is to apportion the blame properly between individuals and the system under which they live.

It is hard to stay indignant at an abstraction. We like to personalize our antagonisms. A human target is the first thing our anger requires.

If things are going badly, it is much easier to take it out on John Jones or Bill Smith than it is to center our wrath on society as a whole.

You get an illustration of this in a paragraph in a recent issue of "Advance," the national weekly of the Congregational and Christian churches.

In this magazine a correspondent suggests that the church too often fails to make its criticism of current ills specific. Why, he asks, should not the church put aside its fine statements of general principles and come out, for instance, in open denunciation of a vestryman who hires girls in his factory for $10 a week?

And the editor of the magazine suggests that this question is not quite as simple as it looks.

"There are circumstances," he remarks, "where the employer and the manufacturer are the victims of a competitive system quite as much as the worker."

"It is one thing to demand that Mr. X, a vestryman, should pay his employees a living wage. It is another thing to enable him to do so against the competition of unscrupulous employers who have no ideals, either decently pagan or Christian, in their business enterprises."

Now this point, it seems to us, is worth emphasizing.

It is too easy to forget that under any competitive system all players are bound by the general rules of the game. These rules, the pressure of competition being what it is, frequently lead to bad conditions.

Our respected vestryman may indeed pay his employees less than a living wage—but all too often his sole alternative is to go out of business altogether, in which case his employees would get no wages whatever.

In such case it is worse than useless to get vexed at Mr. X. If we are going to insist that even the humblest worker is entitled to a living wage, our proper point of attack is the system which makes low wages necessary—not the individual through whom the system must operate.

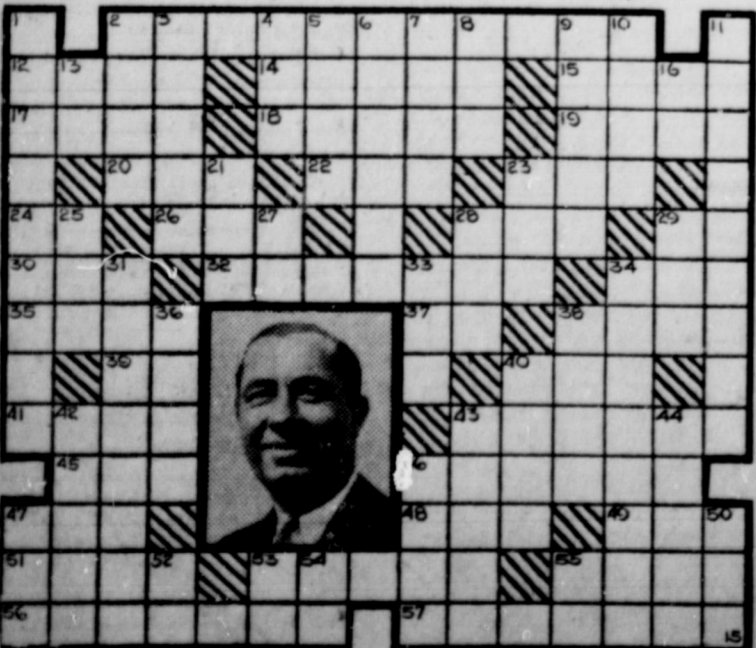

Every corporation requires an annual or semi-annual audit of its books and sends a copy to its stockholders. Every well managed city should have an audit of its books at least once a year and publish it in local newspapers so the citizens may know the condition of their city.

The man who knocks his own home city is a pest. He should either become a home town booster or be boosted out.

Some men wear long suffering faces all the time.

Breckenridge School Girl Gets Big Thrill

By United Press
BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Oct. 15.—Betty June Hickey, fifth grade student, has had the thrill of a lifetime—riding to school in a big limousine with the famous screen star, Mary Pickford. And it came about in the most surprising and unusual manner.

Betty June was walking to school one day when a large automobile stopped beside her. Despite the forewarnings of her father, Deputy Sheriff Ray Hickey, the girl could not resist the temptation to get into the shining car.

"I don't suppose you know what I am," said a beautiful lady beside whom Betty June sat.

"Well, you look like Mary Pickford," Betty June replied.

"Well, I am," the screen star told the bewildered but fascinated school girl. Miss Pickford was en route to the Pacific coast by automobile.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY
When DAN BLEEKER junior publisher of The Blade, learns that CHARLES MORDEN, police reporter, has been mysteriously killed, he determines to employ SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder.

Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent, who had threatened to sue the Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS, was an impostor. MRS. CATHAY assures Bleeker her husband will drop the charges if The Blade publishes a retraction, and this is done.

A day later Morden is found dead. Shortly afterward comes news that Cathay is dead—possibly of poison.

Bleeker tells Griff that in Morden's last report he said he had important information involving a woman but did not mention her name.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X
BLEEKER looked across at Griff. "Well," he said, "you've got quite a reputation for getting results. I'm not going to worry about methods; those are up to you. What you want us to do is to try to find Mary Briggs—which we're already doing—and on the disappearance cases involving some woman who has disappeared within the last 48 hours."

"Correct," said Griff. "The first thing to do is to locate the girl. And in the meantime I will see the doctor in Riverview who thinks it's a poison case and will also interview Mrs. Cathay."

Bleeker showed some surprise. "I thought you wanted us to make all the contacts," he said.

"No," Griff told him. "I want you to get the facts. I'm a criminologist, not a detective. I don't go out and gather facts but I want to contact the principals. I want to watch them talk."

Bleeker smiled and said, "You mean listen to them talk?"

"No," Griff replied. "I want to watch them talk. I've found out you can learn more about a person's character by watching his lips when he talks than in any other way."

Bleeker looked thoughtful, slowly nodded his head.

Griff scribbled a number on a sheet of paper which he tore from his notebook. "That," he said, handing the paper to Bleeker, "is the private, unlisted telephone number which is assigned to you for the life of this case. Give that number only to the men who are in your closest confidence. Don't ever try to call me on any other telephone. When this case is over that number will be changed."

Bleeker folded the paper thoughtfully.

"There's something I'd like to ask you about."

"What is it?"

"Around 10 o'clock on Monday night—the night our newspaper pulled its boner by mistaking the impostor for Cathay—a detective by the name of Shillingby was ordered a man by the name of Decker who was apparently the only eyewitness to that murder. He told his story to the police officer who first appeared on the scene and promised that he would be available whenever he was needed as a witness. There was a lot of confusion. Decker took advantage of it and disappeared. Later on you telephoned the police that Decker had come to you."

Decker under cover, not because I thought it was necessary but simply because he was nervous, because that was what he wanted and because he was willing to pay for my services in covering him up."

"Would you," asked Bleeker, "say that those were the facts?"

"No, I wouldn't make any such statement. I am simply asking you what your position would be if it should turn out those were the facts."

"Then I'd appreciate it very much if you'd let The Blade discover Decker when it's time for him to put in his appearance."

Griff dropped his legs to the floor, pushed his tall frame up from the chair, stood six feet of lean, hard efficiency. The bathrobe flared open enough to show his silk lounging suit as he strode to the door and placed his hand on the knob.

"Perhaps," he said in a tone of finality which left no doubt that the interview was over, "that might be arranged."

He bowed and held open the door.

DR. P. C. COOPER was fat, cherubic, steely-eyed and thoughtful. He surveyed his visitor appreciatively, studied Griff's card.

"Criminologist," he said, musingly.

Griff nodded.

"You're investigating some particular case?" Cooper asked.

"The death of Mr. Frank B. Cathay. He died yesterday afternoon, I believe."

"That is correct. May I ask just what is the nature of your interest in the case, Mr. Griff?"

"I am investigating it."

"You said that before."

"I am seeking information."

"For whom?"

Griff smiled and shook his head. Dr. Cooper's eyes became more thoughtful.

"I can tell you," said Sidney Griff, "what I want to find out, and that's all."

"And I," Dr. Cooper said, "can tell you nothing."

"Even in the interests of justice. Doctor, you cannot discuss a case."

"When I have been employed to treat a person," Dr. Cooper said, "I can tell no one what I have discovered in connection with my treatment, save the properly constituted authorities, and only then when I am subpoenaed as a witness, and even under those circumstances I would not be free to divulge any matters of professional confidence. That is, any communications which were made to me by my patient."

GRUFF watched the man narrowly, his eyes level-lidded in thoughtful concentration, and focused upon Dr. Cooper's mouth.

"Only Doctor, matters which were necessarily communicated to you in connection with the diagnosis and treatment. Isn't that correct?"

"That is technically correct. Such matters as were communicated to me by my patient, for the purpose of assisting me in making a diagnosis, or giving treatment. But you will understand my own judgment upon those matters is final. In other words, the law allows my own conscience to be the sole judge of what is and what is not a professional confidence."

"The usual trick is removed from your lips by the surviving representatives of the dead man," asked Griff.

"I believe not. It is a personal and privileged communication."

Griff extended his hand, and after a moment's doubtful delay, Dr. Cooper took it.

"I am," said Griff, "very pleased to have made your acquaintance and very grateful for the information you have given me."

Dr. Cooper's eyes widened in surprise. "But I have given you none," he said.

Griff's smile was one of calm amusement.

"Oh, yes you have, Doctor. You've told me, not in so many words, but in between the lines, so to speak, a very important fact."

"What fact?" Dr. Cooper demanded tentatively.

"That competent legal counsel has seen fit to see to it you were properly and forcefully coached upon the law of privileged communications made by a patient to a physician. Good morning, Doctor."

And the criminologist left a slightly confused, very much annoyed doctor staring at him.

(To Be Continued)

In the next installment Sidney Griff has an interview with Charles Staben, the lawyer.

GREATNESS MARKS SCREEN SWEETHEARTS' REUNION IN COMEDY-ROMANCE

Reunited for the first time since their initial co-starring venture made "State Fair" memorable, Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres will be seen again as the gay young sweethearts of "Servants' Entrance" when this newest of important Fox picture opens today at the Lyric theatre.
Unlike anything in which they have appeared before, the story of "Servants' Entrance" will afford spectators the opportunity to laugh at the troubles as they thrill to the romance of the madcap lovers whose young lives it depicts. For while "State Fair" bordered on the heavy drama in spots, "Servants' Entrance" is mostly in the romantic-comedy class.
In their newest roles Janet portrays a merry million-heiress of an automobile manufacturer who goes from riches to poverty, and back again, while Lew is a chauffeur who goes from poverty to riches. Starting from opposite rungs of the social ladder, they meet at the bottom. The climb upward is fraught with humorous and fascinating adventures.

Janet's descent to poverty is motivated by a desire to become a useful woman—to learn to cook, sew, bake a cake and take care of babies. So she disappears through the front door of her own palatial home, and makes her way to the servants' entrance of another, masquerading as a maid. It is thus that she meets Lew, a chauffeur with an inventive turn of mind whose passion is a new type of motorboat. To win his love, and to make him capitalize his invention without revealing her identity, become Janet's amusing problems.

The story was adapted for the screen by Samson Raphaelson from the famous story by Sigrid Boo (pronounced Bow), and was directed by Frank Lloyd, who won the last Academy Award for his marvelous handling of "Cavalcade." As in the case of "Cavalcade," incidentally, "Servants' Entrance" was produced under the personal supervision of Winfield Sheehan.
"Servants' Entrance" also boasts the most imposing array of stars, stellar and featured players ever assembled for a Fox production.
In addition to Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, the cast includes Ned Sparks, Walter Connolly, Louise Dresser, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Astrid Allwyn, Siegfried Rumann, John Qualen and many others.

WRECK FRIES 108,000 EGGS
By United Press
LISBON, O.—It took a heavy rain to wash away the last remnants of 108,000 fried eggs which were scattered over the highway near here when a truck trailer, carrying 300 cases of eggs, caught fire. They were en route from Kansas City to Pittsburgh.

OLD FRIENDS
Sylvia Sidney, starring in Paramount's "Behold My Wife," and Vina Delmer, author, have been friends since before Miss Sidney starred on the stage in "Bad Girl."

BASEBALL PLAYER
George Raft, featured in Paramount's "Limehouse Nights," was mascot of the New York Yankees and later played professional baseball.

WANTED SON TO WIN GAME
BRIDGEPORT, O.—When Mrs. Evan Peterson came out of the anesthetic after an operation in Martins Ferry, O., city hospital, her first words to her husband were: "Tell Bill to win the game with Wellsville for me." Bill, her son, is quarterback for the high school team.

SWAPS GUIDING FOR ANYTHING

By United Press
NAMPA, Idaho.—C. O. "Jack" Wilson, guide to big game hunters, apparently is anxious to secure customers. He guaranteed "a good shot at big game, or money refunded." And adds, "hay, grain, poultry, livestock or farm produce taken in exchange for your trip."

U. M. W. FOUNDER DEAD
ATHENS, O.—Michael P. Collins, 83, who aided in organization of the United Mine Workers of America, is dead. He formerly served as a federal mine inspector.

NAP GIVEN COLLEGIANS
By United Press
DELAWARE, O.—Sleeping collegians have a break at Ohio Wesleyan University this year. The intolerable "7:45" class has been eliminated. The first scheduled classes will meet at 8:10 now, the administration has announced.

FOOTBALL FAN AT 96
By United Press
NEW LONDON, O.—Though 96, Wilbur Robinson is an enthusiastic football fan. Rarely does he miss a home high school game, keeps posted on the bigger college games and studies their records, through the newspapers.

VIOLETS DEFY FALL
PIERPONT, O.—While Dorothy Angell found violets in blossom in a woods near her home, her brother in a nearby field found further evidence of a peculiar reversal of season. Wild strawberries were ripe there.

SILENT FUNERAL SERVICES
NORWOOD, Mass.—All-silent funeral services were held for Michael Janakozas, deaf mute. The deceased's wife, the pastor, Rev. Stanley Light, who conducted services, and the six pallbearers also were deaf mutes. Services were conducted in sign language.

WATER BOY
Bing Crosby admits the first job he ever had was totting water from a spring at a lake resort. He also cut wood, and received his room and $2 a week salary.

Starting boys in military training at the age of 8, as Mussolini is doing, is a good idea, since wooden guns have come into use not just to play with.

A Pledge For Patriotic Texans

A hundred years of freedom and progress is to be celebrated in 1936. Our progress as a State has been phenomenal. It is a source of pride to the Nation. Texans, true and unafraid, pledge themselves to the unparalleled success of their State's hundredth anniversary.

"Men of thought, be up and stirring." Put this purpose before you. Let every Texan burn the Centennial pledge into his heart:

Pledge
I will think—talk—write . . . Texas Centennial in 1936! This is to be my celebration. In its achievement I may give free play to my patriotic love for Texas' heroic past; my confidence in its glories that are to be . . .
