TWO PILOTS AND WOMAN ALSO KILLED

Only Two of Eleven Passengers Escape Serious Injuries. MACON, Mo., May 6.—Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, two air pilots and a woman passenger, believed to be Miss Jane Hillias, were killed today when a T. W. A. transport plane crashed while trying to make an emergency landing through fog and darkness...

SANTA FE, N. M., May 6.—Former Congressman Dennis Chavez, democrat, almost certainly will be appointed to succeed Senator Bronson Cutting as United States senator from New Mexico, it was believed here.

The casualty list included: Dead—Senator Bronson Cutting, republican, N. M.; Pilot Harvey Bolton, Kansas City; Co-pilot Kenneth Gresson, Kansas City; Miss Jane Hillias, Kansas City...

Seriously injured—Richard Wallace, Hollywood; Henry Sharp, Hollywood; Paul Wing, Hollywood; Mrs. William Kaplan, Hollywood; Mrs. Dora Metzger, Kansas City; Mrs. Metzger's child; Mrs. D. Mesker, Kansas City; William Kaplan, Hollywood...

The Hollywood group consisted of motion picture executives and technicians en route to Annapolis to prepare for making a picture. Senator Cutting was returning to Washington from the west.

Fog had kept the gigantic Douglas bi-motored transport plane in the air until its gasoline was exhausted. Pilot Bolton tried to find a hole in the clouds but there was none. After hours of search over Missouri he tried to land without being able to see what was below him.

Farmers, awakened by the noise, found the plane demolished. The pilots and the two passengers apparently met a quick death. Others were unconscious. Mrs. Metzger's baby apparently was the least hurt.

Relations With Japan Belie All War Talk

During the last three or four years, the average American came to recognize the word Japan as a synonym for trouble.

Japan was doing this, that, or the other thing in China and Manchuria; Japan was refusing to abide by the Washington treaty; Japan was fortifying mandated islands in the Pacific; some day Japan and the United States would get together and fight it all out.

That was the burden of most public references to Japan in this country. And since cultivation of an attitude like that is a necessary prelude to war, it all had a pretty ominous sound.

But of late the keynote seems to have changed. We are beginning to hear talk about co-operation instead of talk about rivalry. Someone seems to have remembered that Japan is one of our best customers in the matter of foreign trade, and that fixing to fight your best customer is about the poorest known way of promoting a trade revival.

The recent argument over Japanese exports of textiles lends point to this matter.

Japanese textile mills have been working overtime. They have sent finished goods into such traditionally English markets as India and China. They have sent them to South America, where both British and American mills have done business; of late they have even begun to send them into the United States itself.

This has led to protests, and the protests have led to a re-examination of our trade relations with the Mikado's empire.

Now the Japanese foreign office points out that, whatever the Japanese mills may do with their finished product, they at least buy most of their raw material from American producers.

During recent years, for instance, America has sold approximately $100,000,000 worth of raw cotton to Japan annually. These sales constitute the largest single item in America's agricultural export trade.

Last year the United States' sales of cotton to Japan outvalued the total of all Japanese exports to the United States.

In this connection it is worth remembering that Secretary of State Hull and Foreign Minister Hirota last year exchanged letters agreeing that there is no good cause for friction between the nations; and it is also noteworthy that the Japanese are anxious to conclude a new treaty with the United States working out a non-competitive basis for the foreign commerce of the two nations.

All this is worth remembering, for the simple reason that it points in the direction of peace instead of war. Our navy may feel justified in holding its maneuvers in the Pacific; these figures indicate that the danger of war is only superficial, and that underneath there are most solid and substantial reasons for keeping the two nations at peace.

Good roads mean so much to a community; they are worth every effort that is put forth to get them.

Common sense should point out to every citizen the importance and economy of buying at home.

Every city has many pessimists—little men with little minds who watch with envy the progressive men of their city.

"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND" ATHLETES SAY

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke all you want—that's what athletes say about Camels. Gene Sarazen says: "Playing as much as I do—I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'—never upset my nerves." Other athletes back him up... "I smoke all the Camels I want, and keep in top condition," says Mel Ott, slugger of the New York Giants... Georgia Coleman, Olympic diver, says: "Camels don't cut down on my 'wind'..." Bill Miller, oarsman; Jim Lancaster, N.Y.U.'s 1934 basketball captain; John Skillman, pro squash racquets champion—hundreds of sports stars smoke Camels regularly and report that Camels never get their "wind" or nerves. What this mildness means to you!...It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Athletes have made this discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild, they can smoke all they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.

SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

Camels COSTLIER TOBACCO!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCO than any other popular brand. (Signed) R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY, Winston-Salem, N. C.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY—Millicent Graves, secretary to George Drimgold, finds her employer in his office dead. Jarvis Happ, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunette, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets Mrs. Happ; Happ's son, Norman; his stepson, Robert Caise; Happ's partner, Dick Gentry; Vera Duchene, Mrs. Happ's maid. In Happ's home Millicent sees the mysterious woman in black ermine whom she believes has some connection with Drimgold's death. The chauffeur is found dead. Later Happ is kidnapped. Millicent and Norman learn the car driven by the woman in ermine belongs to Phyllis Faulconer. They go to her apartment. Norman enters first. When he does not return Millicent follows. The place is in wild disorder and Norman is not in sight. A policeman arrives. Millicent escapes. She goes to the nearby garage where Detective Buchanan accuses her of being Phyllis Faulconer. He calls a tenant of the apartment building to identify her. It proves to be the policeman Millicent saw in Phyllis Faulconer's rooms.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XLVI

Detective Buchanan asked, "Is this the jane?"

Johansen's eyes, which had riveted themselves on Millicent, said, "You bet that's the jane. She ran like a deer when I fell for the line she handed me. You sure showed brains in putting the bracelets on her. She's got the smoothest line of any crook I've tackled in a year."

"Is that Phyllis Faulconer?" Buchanan asked.

"You bet that's Phyllis Faulconer. She was in the apartment and she admitted to me she was there when the fighting was going on. I telephoned headquarters when she made a break."

"Yes," Buchanan said, "I telephoned in and they told me you'd reported trouble in that apartment so I figured you'd better come around to make positive identification."

"She was handing you a line?" Buchanan asked.

"I'll say she was handing me a line."

Millicent sat speechless. There was nothing she could say. She was trapped in the web of her own incriminating statements to Johansen, her equally incriminating flight.

A siren sounded outside the door.

"Well," Buchanan remarked, shaking ashes from his cigar, "that will be the wagon from headquarters. Come on, sister. Here we go."

The siren grew louder. Tires screamed on the turn and then a red roadster skidded into the garage and slid to a stop.

Sergeant Mahoney jumped from the car, banged open the door of the office, looked at Buchanan, then at Millicent.

"Unsnap those handcuffs," he said.

Buchanan's face turned a dull red. "Listen, Sergeant, she's a killer and she's desperate. She's Phyllis Faulconer, all right. I trapped her when she came to the car."

"Unsnap the handcuffs," Sergeant Mahoney said. "I don't like to see her handcuffed in the first place, and in the second place I don't think she's Phyllis Faulconer."

"She's the Faulconer woman all right," Johansen said. "I came on her in the apartment."

Sergeant Mahoney flashed Millicent a quick, questioning glance.

"No," she said, "I'm not Phyllis Faulconer. I was looking for Phyllis Faulconer. Norman Happ went to her apartment and disappeared. There had been a fight and I tried to trail him. This man pounded on the door of the apartment and complained of the noise. I didn't know who he was. I wanted to get away. I didn't tell him I was Phyllis Faulconer, but he assumed I was the one who rented the apartment. I just tried to stall him along, and when I found out he was an officer and was going to investigate, I ran away."

Buchanan thrust the note he had taken from Millicent's purse into Sergeant Mahoney's hand.

"Read that," he said.

Sergeant Mahoney read the note through. His face showed distinct surprise.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. Buchanan smirked. "So you see, Sergeant, I know what I'm going."

Sergeant Mahoney said, in crisp, authoritative tones, "Very good, Buchanan. You're to be commended upon your zeal. Take off the handcuffs."

There was that in his voice which brooked no argument. Buchanan unlocked the handcuffs.

"Come with me," Sergeant Mahoney said to Millicent.

The garage attendant appeared in the doorway. "Was you interested in the owner of that sedan, or just in the person who was coming to look it over?" he asked of Detective Buchanan.

"Never your mind what I'm interested in," Buchanan asserted belligerently. "You keep your place and do what you're told."

"Okay," the attendant said in a bored voice. "I just thought I'd let you know that while you was sitting up here smoking the Faulconer woman came in and got her car."

"What!" Buchanan exclaimed, jumping to his feet. "What the devil do you mean by not letting me know?"

"I didn't know it myself," the attendant said, "until I saw her going out the door. She must have worked the elevator herself. It was the Faulconer sedan all right."

Sergeant Mahoney looked accusingly at Buchanan. "Why sit in the office and smoke, Detective?" he asked.

"I wanted to be near the telephone."

"So I see."

Buchanan advanced threateningly toward the garage man. "I've a notion to run you in," he said, "for not letting me know."

"Baloney," the man said. "I did what you told me to. You didn't confide in me none. You wanted me to keep my place and I'm keeping in it."

Sergeant Mahoney said to Buchanan, "Get on her trail. Telephone headquarters. Have all radio cars notified to be on the watch. We want that woman."

To Millicent he said, "Come with me."

He took her from the office, escorted her to his car, turned around in the garage, drove out to the street, swung around the corner, pulled the car in to the curb, shut off the motor, turned to her with a peculiar expression on his face.

"So," he said slowly, "you're the Murder Girl."

She knew she could not deceive him further. "Yes," she said, "I'm the Murder Girl."

"And Bob Caise knows it?"

"Yes."

Sergeant Mahoney's voice was not unkindly. "You know," he said, "you're entitled to have a lawyer represent you. You don't need to say anything. Perhaps silence would be best for you, but I'd like to have you tell me about it."

"From the beginning?" she inquired.

"From the beginning," he told her. "Do you want to do it?"

She faced him unflinchingly. "Sergeant," she said, "I'm going to tell you everything."

His hand reached out and closed upon the back of hers. "Good girl," he said. "If I can give you a break I'll do it."

She started talking in a low monotone, told him everything, sparing no detail, beginning with the time Drimgold had told her he was going to dictate a confession, and including her first meeting with the woman in the black ermine coat, about the murder, and her sudden panic. She even told him about encountering Jarvis C. Happ in the building.

Sergeant Mahoney waited until she had finished. Then he asked a few questions, bringing out parts of her story which he desired to have made more clear.

"Norman went to that apartment?" Sergeant Mahoney asked.

"Yes."

"Do you love him very much, Millicent?"

"I love him more than I love life."

"Suppose I should tell you that he is in great danger? Would you be willing to do anything you could to help?"

"Anything," she said.

"I want to bait a trap," he told her. "Will you help me?"

"How can I help you?"

His eyes stared steadily into hers. "You," he said, "are to be the bait. I want you to go to that apartment house. I want you to get into that apartment and start asking questions."

"But," she pointed out, "the apartment is vacant now. No one is there and they won't come back after the police have been there."

"But," he told her, "Norman didn't leave that apartment house. They could hardly have carried him out and he wouldn't have left voluntarily without having joined you in the cab."

"Then you think he's somewhere in the apartment house?"

"I'm virtually certain of it."

"And you believe my story?"

He nodded solemnly. "Yes," he said. "I'm going to have my men go around to the hotel and pick up the suitcase and your notebook with Drimgold's confession as he had dictated it."

"What are you going to do?"

"Well," he said, "I'm going to be in charge of the squad of men who will surround that apartment

CAMEL MILDNESS BASIS OF NEW CAMPAIGN HERE

The mildness of Camels is the theme of the new cigarette advertising campaign of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, which features the announcement that Camels are "so mild you can smoke all you want." It is supported by statements from a representative group of athletic stars and champions in various strenuous sports who smoke Camels and have found that "they don't get your wind."

This new campaign of advertising is now appearing regularly in this paper. It is expected that Camel's consistent policy of newspaper advertising will be continued.

In the first advertisement Gene Sarazen, famous golf champion, pictured both smoking a Camel and in action, is quoted: "Traveling

Maybe Gassaway Will Toss This at Huey

A cowboy of renown, it appears as if Rep. Percy L. Gassaway of Oklahoma may be ruminating over taking up bullfighting as a serious occupation. But it's a capital joke that the southwestern member keeps the bull on hand to weight down a copy of "Every Man a King," literary masterpiece of Huey Long, with whom Gassaway has a feud, ridiculing the Kingfish's share the wealth idea.

DESDEMONA Fish Really BITE at Boulder Dam

It's a perilous spot these fishermen are in! Fish leaping at them from all directions, seizing their hooks, storming the boat! What a thrill for the hardened angler! It looks almost too ferocious to be authentic, but here 'tis, showing Jim Cashman, pioneer Las Vegas, bite in the new Boulder Dam lake. You'll notice that the lake is filling up rapidly, back of the huge barrier in the Colorado river.

These present were invited downstairs where the long tables had been beautifully decorated with bowls and vases of roses and also a rose as a favor at each place. Refreshments of fresh strawberry shortcake with whipped cream and coffee were served by the hostesses, Meses. I. N. Williams, R. J. Krapp, W. C. Bedford and J. H. Rushing Sr. Mrs. Hugh Roe and her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Goswick and Mrs. Bailey Stark visited at Olden and Ranger Tuesday.

Lotief Says Too Many Bills Up in The Legislature

(Editor's Note: Legislative letter from Cecil A. Lotief to the people of the 107th district.) Up to this good hour there has been something like 1,500 bills introduced in both houses and most of them are of no importance to the people of this state, and up to now there have been something like 200 resolutions introduced. Most of these bills have been introduced by some of the corporation lawyers in order to prevent some useful legislation from passing. The most important bills we have had before us, in my judgment, are the sulphur tax bill by Mr. Spears from San Antonio, the intangible assets bill by Mr. Tenneyson and myself and the income tax bill by Mr. Bradbury and myself. These bills would be of benefit to the state had we been able to enact them into the law. Of course the sulphur companies and other special interests are maintaining strong lobbyists in Austin, and they are spending plenty of money to see that these measures are killed. They realize that these measures will pass the house of representatives if they are given a direct vote; therefore, they are using all dilatory tactics possible in order to keep these measures from coming before the house and senate for consideration. The special interests can always find members of the legislature who are willing to work in their behalf and some members were elected by the special interests in order to serve them in the legislature. Of course I prescribe to the old Biblical saying that no man can serve two masters at the same time. On yesterday we voted down house joint resolution by Mr. Wilson Fox of Williamson county, calling for submission of one house. In other words to abolish the senate and maintain the house. This resolution was voted down by a vote of 60 to 66. I was one of the 60

Quality cucumber pickles have their beginnings at planting time according to Mrs. Lee Foley who, together with 10 other demonstrators in Bee county, has set out to serve her family table with the best. A special pickling variety of cucumbers has been planted; pure food regulations in regard to sanitation, handling, packing and labeling are being studied and will be observed; and samples of the pickles will be submitted to extension home industries specialists for approval.

After the 10 families have been supplied with quality pickles any surplus that is left over will be sold. Working with these 10 demonstrators every home demonstration club woman in Bee county has a goal of at least two gallons of cucumbers. Dallas county women are at it too. Mrs. L. E. Orton, pickle demonstrator for the Irving Home Demonstration club, has as her aim bringing at least 50 gallons of cucumbers to be worked up later into good pickles.

Mrs. Orton and the other club women who are working with her are being mindful that not only the right variety of cucumber is important, but that soil preparation and cultivation will have a lot to do with the yield. So, loamy land, well fertilized each year with barn yard manure, is in demand with these gardeners. Also they have it in mind that the roots of cucumbers lie close to the surface and if they are disturbed in cultivation knotty, crooked cucumbers will be the result. Any hoeing that is to be done is due to be gentle.

LLANO—Poultry demonstrators in Llano county showed an average flock production of approximately 19 eggs per hen for February, thus exceeding the state average by four eggs per hen, according to D. D. Steele, county agricultural agent. The flock of R. Fishbeck led the contest in production with an average of 26 eggs per hen. His flock of single comb white leghorns have made a consistent record throughout the year. The flock of 90 single comb white leghorns belonging to Robert Boxell was second in production with 21 eggs per hen. His profit for the month was more than 20 cents per bird.

HEBBRONVILLE—Home tanned leather is finding a new use, or rather an old one, in Jim Hogg county where young Wilbur Whitman of Hebbroville is tanning leather to make his own saddle, according to G. W. Brown, county agricultural agent. Young Whitman has fashioned a solid wooden tree out of a large elm and has covered it with raw-hide. As soon as his leather is tanned, he will cover the tree.

COOPER—A profit of $5.75 was cleared in one week on whole milk from three Jersey cows by Eldon Stewart, Delta county 4-H club boy, according to W. H. Jones, county agricultural agent. In addition to the dairy demonstration, young Stewart has two acres of corn and three acres of hedges as demonstrations this year.

ON TEXAS FARMS (Continued)

This is his fourth year as a 4-H club member. HOUSTON—Harris county 4-H club girls report having planted 3,735 feet of leafy vegetables; 4,485 feet of starchy vegetables; 2,810 feet of other vegetables; and 660 feet of tomatoes, according to Miss Maudie Holt, assistant home demonstration agent. Bettie Stalarow, garden demonstrator for the Mt. Houston club, has planted onions, Irish potatoes, strawberries, turnips, carrots, beets, pinto beans, baby limas, butter beans, black wax beans, and corn. She has also set stakes for the tomatoes.

LIBERTY—A clothes closet five and one-half by four and one-third feet has been built for a cash expenditure of 69 cents, by Mrs. George Curtis of Liberty county, according to the report of Miss Nettie Smith, home demonstration agent. Mrs. Curtis says that she and her husband planned for some sort of storage space, but at first it seemed that about all they had to start with was a door. By placing the closet in one corner of the room, two walls served as two sides of the closet. A 2x4 piece of timber was found which was used for a brace at the corner. Then a few strips of old boards were nailed on and two layers of heavy cardboard tacked on the outside and one layer on the inside. The money spent was for 1x6 lumber for the base board and door facing, and for nails. After the closet was built it was papered inside and out to match the paper in the room.

RECKLESS HAS EVERYTHING—IT'S HARLOW'S BEST! The musical treat of 1935 has come to the screen in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical extravaganza, "Reckless," which opened at the Lyric Theatre. Of first importance, the picture introduces Jean Harlow and William Powell as co-stars for the first time. The glamorous platinum star is seen as Mona Leslie, a dazzling Broadway dancer who rises to great social and professional height, only to be plunged into the depths of scandal and disgrace by the mad act of her millionaire play-boy friend. Powell is seen as Ned Riley, the jovial sports promoter who walks side by side with Mona through her triumphs and tragedies and finally emerges as "best man." Franchot Tone ably handles the role of Bob Harrison, the millionaire husband and other deserving of honorable mention are Ray Robson as Granny; Rosalind Russell, as Jo Mercer; Henry Stephenson, as the elder Harrison; Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton as Powell's companions and little Mickey Rooney. Producer David O. Selznick and Director Victor Fleming have crowded everything that goes toward making a bang-up entertaining picture in "Reckless." These include four snappy song hits, presented in colorful surroundings and hordes of beautiful girls, dazzling settings and with several sensational names participating in them. As the musical numbers unfold, we see such ace entertainers as Carl Randall, sensational dancing star who appears as Miss Harlow's dancing partner; Allan Jones, recent singing star of "Bit Sweet"; Nina Mae McKinney, colored blues singer who, understand, raced from London Hollywood to sing in the "Reckless" theme number; and bearded Man Mountain Dean, giant hill-billy wrestler. "Reckless" is a musical picture well worth seeing.
