UNEMPLOYABLE THIS MONTH TO GET $4,974.00

Five Canneries Are Only Work Relief Projects Now Operating.

AUSTIN, Tex.—Radically reduced allotments for the relief population of Texas are in prospect for the month of June, it has been announced by Adam R. Johnson, state relief administrator.

Federal authorities notified Johnson that the state will receive $2,500,000 for general relief, although application was made for more than $4,000,000. Budgets, therefore, were made up on the basis of a state caseload of 210,000. Although the caseload has dropped steadily since January 1, Washington officials have repeatedly expressed dissatisfaction with the number of families on relief in Texas.

"Accordingly, our per case grants will be reduced from $17 in May to about $10 in June," Johnson said, "and our total relief disbursement from $5,612,000 in May to $3,391,000 in June."

June funds will be spent by the counties for purposes described in the following budget: General relief, $2,125,342; hospitalization, $8,963; rural subsistence, $725,063; capital goods, $532,154.

To meet these obligations, the Texas Relief Commission will receive $2,500,000 from the federal government and $400,000 of state funds for general relief. Other grants for the special program of rural rehabilitation, student aid and emergency education are expected to be received from federal sources during the month.

Federal Expenses Are Below Budget

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Expenditures for the current year are running about a billion and a half dollars under estimates, figures showed today.

Variety of offenses will be investigated by the 91st court grand jury impaneled Monday morning—including murder—according to the charge made by Judge George L. Davenport.

Attention was called to grand jurors of violation of statutes concerning weights and measures. "At one time it was not regarded as a serious matter, but since people generally are so vitally interested in securing fair and honest weights and measures, I shall ask that you make a thorough investigation of such matters," grand jurors were told.

As to a sentiment of many dis-regarding existence of liquor laws, Judge Davenport said: "They seem to have lost sight of the fact that in Texas we still have a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, and so long as it remains the law of this state it should be respected and observed."

Buried, But Very Live, Is Neutrality Issue

The things that are getting most of Congress' attention these days are such up-to-the-minute measures as the holding company bill, the Wagner bill, the bonus, and the banking bill.

Buried 'way down underneath, however, is a proposal which might ultimately be of greater importance to the country than any of these.

This is the movement—led chiefly by Senators Gerald Nye and Bennett Clark—to recast American neutrality policies in such a way as to keep us from being drawn into the whirlpool of another European war.

These senators have introduced three resolutions to attain that end. Their resolutions would bar any kind of loans, public or private, to any foreign nation at war or any firm within that nation; would prohibit granting of passports to American citizens wishing to travel in war zones; and would provide that any shipment of munitions or contraband from these shores would be made strictly at the buyer's risk.

The idea back of all this, of course, is the eminently sensible one that the way to stay out of a fight is to stay entirely away from it. The innocent bystander might not get beamed with a brick so often, if he had the sense to refrain from standing on the sidelines and yelling encouragement to one of the combatants.

So far, this program has remained buried beneath the press of measures of more immediate concern. But European peace today is in a precarious state, and no one knows just when it may dissolve.

Once a European war breaks out, it would be infinitely more difficult to put such a program through than it is now. We ought to have action on the matter before this session of Congress ends.

To get such action, it may be necessary to squelch some of our high naval officials. Rodney Dutcher reported recently that the navy bigwigs are heartily against these proposals.

It is their notion that the navy can protect American commerce under any and all conditions, and they are lobbying earnestly to preserve the status quo—under which, in 1917, we got into a war we might well have stayed out of.

Someone should remind these gold-braided gentlemen that the function of military men in a republic is to obey orders and not to make policy. It is up to Congress and the president to decide what is to be done; for the army or navy to try to interfere with such decisions is militarism of the worst kind.

That aside, there seems to be no very good reason why this program should not be adopted. There is no question that the American people want to stay out of war. The Nye-Clark resolutions ought to do much to help them attain their wish.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—Mr. Roosevelt will run as a progressive candidate in 1936 and most liberals, including the bulk of the Senate progressives, will support him. Party lines will mean less than ever before.

That, at least until further notice, is the lineup following a secret White House conference on a recent evening, at which the president and the stimon-pure progressive senators reached a much better understanding than they had had since about a year ago, when Roosevelt began trying to conciliate "big business."

The group included those two outstanding independents, Norris of Nebraska and LaFollette of Wisconsin, as well as such Democratic progressive leaders as Costigan of Colorado, Wheeler of Montana, and Bone of Washington.

The boys spoke right out in meeting. They agreed that the Roosevelt "must" program, along with the Wagner labor board bill, made a strong progressive program—if Roosevelt would go through with it.

They vigorously urged him to assert an aggressive leadership, reminding him how Theodore Roosevelt had kept his grip on the American people by a fighting policy—even when he was only fighting with Congress.

now subjecting his policies to incessant drum-fire. No doubt was left that the progressives were ready to go down the line for Roosevelt from now on if he would adopt a consistently liberal attitude.

THE fact is that Roosevelt didn't need to be sold on what the progressives told him. He had it pretty well figured out for himself. Ever since the U. S. Chamber of Commerce delivered its anti-New Deal broadside and was followed by the sharpshooters of Secretary Roper's Business Advisory Council, liberals have been emerging from the White House to whisper that Roosevelt—who thinks he has done more to preserve the capitalist system than anyone else ever did—was disgusted and convinced that it was impossible to placate those "high and mighty" forces.

LIBERALS, emerging from the dumps into which Roosevelt's "swing to the right" had cast them, are happy over the big business attack, which they feel gave him a strong push in their direction. One of their leaders describes that attack as "a gift from the gods."

Roosevelt has been disturbed by the falling off of his popular support and by the threat of a radical third party. Recent developments greatly reduce the seriousness of the third party threat, since a third party without either the Senate progressives and their following or strong labor support can't be much of a third party. But a third ticket headed by Huey Long is still a real possibility.

"Dusting the Covers of Texas History" For the Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

It was the old, old question argued by the two men. No one honestly knew whether Houston or Austin would be the better place for the seat of government of Texas. If one person said that corn was 30 cents cheaper in Austin, someone else discovered that corn was 75 cents at both cities. Since the capitol was located at Austin, it might just as well remain there without constant quarreling.

When the first rumblings of the Revolution were beginning to be heard in Texas in 1835, San Felipe de Austin was the meeting place for the government officials. Governor Smith called for a discussion of the possibility of Washington-en-the-Brazos, or other towns as a better meeting place. Matagorda and Velasco were suggested, but voted down at once.

"By some it is contended that the location should be at Washington-on-the-Brazos, this place is said to be in a thickly populated country, and most central to the inhabited parts of Texas," one of the spokesmen said. "It is known that the town is of very recent origin, having few, if any, suitable buildings or rooms for public business, and no printing establishment."

"Brazoria," said another, "has a good press and a suitable council house. It is located on the navigable waters of the Brazos... but the badness of the roads this time of year," he continued slowly, "are said to be a great disadvantage."

A vote was taken. "Ayes" far surpassed the "noes." "Then, gentlemen," said Mr. Barrett, "I resolve that an express be sent immediately to Washington to inform the citizens of the removal of the provisional government to that place; and also that the fact of its removal be communicated to the army and to all parts of Texas."

Governor Smith read the resolution and vetoed it. Washington had no printing press! There had been no legislative action defining the duties of agents abroad, and there were several other important reasons, Governor Smith said. An effort to pass the bill over his veto of four to eight. San Felipe de Austin would, therefore, remain the seat of government until 1836.

Centennial visitors from other states in 1936 will not know of the tribulations of the first government to locate the seat of government. They will see only our huge capitol, overlooking the Colorado and the hills to the west, as Lamar wanted it to be. The story of the location is fascinating, and an important link in the chain of events which have made our state what it is today.

Cotton Farmers Receiving First 1935 Payments

WASHINGTON. — First rental payment checks to farmers taking part in the 1935 cotton production adjustment program are moving out much faster than in 1934, the agricultural adjustment administration announced today.

The cotton checks are dated three days in advance of the day they are normally mailed from Washington. Through May 20, $19,999 checks representing payments totaling $10,925,495 had been prepared for mailing. As of the comparable date a year ago, only 117,109 checks totaling $4,739,857 had been prepared for mailing.

"Our experience in conducting the cotton program is paying dividends in the form of smoother and faster operations and better results generally," Cully A. Cobb, director of the division of cotton, said. "Cotton farmers are better acquainted with the provisions of the contract and other details. Consequently we are able to save much time in the field and in Washington."

The rental payment on each of the acres rented under the program is 3 1/2 cents per pound on the average yield of lint cotton per acre, with a maximum rental of $18 an acre. In 1934, with the rental payment at the same rate, the average rental payment per acre under contract was $6.12 an acre. The rental payment is made in two installments, one of which is going out now. The second installment will be paid in the fall after compliance with the contract is proven. A parity payment of 1 1/4 cents a pound will be made on the farm allotment for each farm under contract. The farm allotment is approximately 40 per cent of the adjusted average production. The rental and parity payments for the entire 1935 cotton program are expected to total approximately $125,000,000.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
 NEA SERVICE STAFF WRITER

"GOING to play golf this afternoon," sings your husband over the telephone—and you're both glad and sorry—glad for him to have fun—sorry because you know from now on until fall dinner will have to be at all kinds of odd hours.

Take a tip from a golf-widow and try casserole-cooked foods and oven dishes as well as chilled and molded foods on the family in this emergency. Soups, either hot or cold, too—hot ones can be kept in the double boiler over hot water and jellied ones in the ice-box. Molded salads and desserts, in fact any refrigerator concoctions are easy to serve at a minute's notice and keep indefinitely.

Method Preserves Flavor
 Certain vegetables may be cooked in various ways without danger of losing their flavor on long standing. For instance, delicately flavoured vegetables are good baked.

Casserole combinations are best baked in a slow oven and then kept hot in a pan of hot water. This preserves all the moisture and heat without over-cooking and drying. Part of the dish may be served whenever wanted and the remainder returned to the hot water bath without harm.

Meal That'll Keep
 Speaking of delayed meals the other night I had a good one: crown of lamb with potatoes roasted in the same casserole, baked asparagus and strawberry mousse. While the lamb is roasting, place cubes of bread and cubes of salt pork on alternate bones and cover the center of the crown with heavy oiled paper. Put in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for thirty minutes. Reduce heat to moderate oven (350 degrees F.) and allow an hour longer.

Add pared and salted potatoes when heat is reduced.

Wash and scale asparagus and arrange in a covered baking dish. For one pound of asparagus use 4 tablespoons butter and 4 tablespoons water. Add butter and water to asparagus, season with salt and pepper, cover closely and bake forty-five minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Keep dish covered and place in a pan of hot water to keep hot.

Strawberry Mousse
 Two cups whipping cream, 1 quart strawberries, 1-1/2 cups sugar, 2 teaspoons granulated gelatin, 2 tablespoons cold water, 4 tablespoons boiling water, few grains salt.

Wash and hull berries. Crush and sprinkle with sugar. Let stand one hour and rub through a fine sieve. Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes and dissolve in boiling water. Add to berries. Chill until syrupy. Beat with a rotary beater until light and fold in cream whipped until firm. Fill individual molds with mixture and place in freezing trays of mechanical refrigerator. Freeze until firm. Garnish with whole berries to serve.

Use only one level teaspoonful to a cup of flour for most recipes.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

The chemistry of the sun and the stars is almost as familiar as that of the earth. Curiously enough, helium was discovered in the sun before it was found here on earth. It derives its name from that fact.

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—If last June, after Max Baer had finished moping up the canvas with Primo Carnera, anyone had prophesied that James J. Braddock would be the new champion's first opponent, the individual would have been rushed to an asylum and placed in a strait jacket.

Braddock appeared in an obscure preliminary with Corn Griffin that night. Once a light-heavyweight champion challenger, the Jersey Irishman had dropped to the status of a ham-and-egger.

Yet here he was Braddock up in the Catskills training for a crack at Baer in the Sunken Garden of Queens on June 13.

And they're building up quite a case for him, too.

Braddock says he will scale 196 pounds for Baer, which is heavier than he ever has been. The way he has filled out to his present weight of 210 pounds is remarkable.

Braddock has an unusual explanation of his physical build-up.

"I'd seen too many hungry days for the three years preceding my fight with Art Laskey to permit me to fill out properly," says Braddock. "Fights were few and far between and purses not so good. Work on the docks, which I turned to when the ring didn't seem to want me any more, wasn't always steady."

"With a wife and two little mouths to feed, and then a third, the mere thought of them maybe having to go hungry if I lack didn't break for me soon made me so sick with anxiety that I could hardly eat at times, even when it was there for me."

Manager True Pal
"It was terrible for me, willing to work hard at anything, but having to go on relief. It hurts even yet to think of what I went through some of those days—that, in spite of the fact I was supposed to be fighting in a stable controlled by a so-called racketeer.

"If this were true, do you think my manager, Joe Gould, and I would have had to go in want the way we did?"

"Many's the day when Joe split his last dollar with me, and what he went through the world never will know. We were both too proud to let the world know of our hard luck, though we had been generous with our money when we had plenty. Both of us learned a thing, or two about fair weather friends."

A number of famous old managers pick Braddock to beat Baer, including Billy McCarney, Dan McKeelick, and Joe Woodman.

They advance various reasons, but the biggest thing in Braddock's favor is a mighty fine straight right-hand punch.

Word to the Wise
I CAN'T conceive of Braddock hitting Baer, even if the latter isn't as sharp as he might be, but there's no getting away from the fact that the Californian is going to face a desperate and dead man heavyweight.

It will pay Baer to shorten up his punches, for Braddock punches straight and true, and the Butterfly Butcher Boy is advised to quit clowning and to keep his chin pulled in.

Braddock takes a punch well and can fight all night.

A victory for the rejuvenated steeveder would be one of the most dramatic stories in the history of the ring.

Ancl Hoffman, manager of Baer, maneuvered until he landed the Braddock match. He seeks to complete his contract with Madison Square Garden and to box Max Schmeling under other promotion.

He more or less picked Braddock as a sucker. Schmeling made the same mistake in taking on Baer, when he could have had the much less formidable Jack Sharkey and another crack at the crown.

Trapped in Torch Death Plot

'FOLIES BERGERE' IS NOW AT THE LYRIC

The most famous of the world's musical extravaganzas is brought to the screen for the first time in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Folies Bergere," starring Maurice Chevalier and coming to the Lyric Theatre for two days opening today.

More than $1,000,000 was spent in creating the sensational effects for this 20th Century kaleidoscope of musical thrills, in which the singing star plays his first dual role. Chevalier is seen not only as Charlier, charming, singing, straw-hatted star of the Folies Bergere, but as the amorous, bemused, he-monocled French Baron whom Charlier impersonates in his act, as well.

The scenes of the original Folies Bergere, so familiar to visitors to gay Paris,—the auditorium of the famous music hall, the Folies bar and all the rest of the colorful settings, have been reproduced in this magnified screen adaptation.

Merle Oberon makes her Hollywood debut as the seductively beautiful wife of the Baron, while Ann Sothern is cast as Mimi, the jealous partner and sweetheart of Charlier.

Things begin to happen when Charlier is called in to impersonate the Baron in life as well as in the Folies, and a hilarious climax is reached when the Baron returns unexpectedly and tests his beautiful wife's fidelity by pretending to be merely Charlier's impersonation of himself.

Several sensational stage numbers, featuring a hundred beautiful dancing girls were staged by Dave

Gould, noted for the Caricco Number in "Flying Down to Rio" and the Continental Number in "The Gay Divorcee."

The lavish musical effects cost $30,000 a minute a film and are said to be the most thrilling ever flashed on a screen. All are staged in the manner of which the Folies Bergere is internationally famous.

Chevalier sings five songs, especially written by Jack Stern and Jack Meskill and the team of Lane and Adamson who wrote "Stormy Weather." He also sings a chorus of "Valentina," with which he first broke into fame in the original Folies Bergere as well as on Broadway.

Roy Del Ruth directed "Folies Bergere" for release through United Artists.
