That reminds me...

Several years ago Henry Ford said, "I am convinced by my own experience and by that of others, that if there is any secret of success it lies in the ability to get another person's view and see things from his angle as well as your own. It makes no difference if a man employs ten men or ten thousand the success of his business will be in direct proportion to his understanding of human nature."

That issue is nothing less than the question, How far can the original American attitude toward the functions of the central government be preserved in the face of modern conditions?

The confusion of thought which resulted in erection of an NRA framework so completely unconstitutional that the court was unanimous in knocking it down comes straight from the fact that we tend to look on the federal government in a light entirely different from that in which its founders viewed it.

The men who founded the American government represented many schools of thought, but they were close to agreement one point: they distrusted a strong central government as an enemy of democracy.

Their first attempt to found a government left the several states almost independent. The articles of confederation were too loose. It took only a few years of experience to prove that a tighter union was necessary; but even when the existing constitution was framed, the framers took pains to limit the powers of the federal government, and to reserve all possible rights to the states.

Since then the whole structure of society has changed. In place of a predominantly agricultural nation, in which each community was largely self-sufficient, we got a tremendously complex industrial nation with commercial and financial ties that made every section dependent on all the others.

In the face of that change, there arose a feeling that many problems could be handled properly only by the national government. We long ago discovered, for instance that railroad regulation would fail if left to the states. We seem to be moving toward a similar attitude in regard to public utilities.

Now is the time for all citizens to put on their "Hustling Clothes" and go after everything in sight to develop new business for the home city.

Human nature has not altered. People buy in the cheapest market.

mained single. Mrs. Dakan, through her attorneys, filed suit for one-half of all the property in addition to the $100 per month she was getting under terms of the will.

The decision, regarded by attorneys as important in court annals, as handed down by the supreme court holds in substance that the property was not community property of Judge Dakan and his second wife, but was acquired long prior to their marriage and was the property of Judge Dakan's children by his first wife. There are no living children issuing from the

"The bulk of these shipments are destined for the Flint Hills of Kansas and Osage country of Oklahoma, where the cattle are pastured through the summer and marketed in the fall. Pasturage is leased at so much per head for the summer, the cost varying from season to season in accordance with supply and demand conditions. A recent report of the United States Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates states that lease prices range from 25 to 50 per cent higher than last year and are the highest since 1931. The percentage of pasture leased is substantially larger than for the past four years as well as the ten-year average from 1924-1933.

Forwardings of cattle to the Kansas Flint Hills totaled only 58,827 head and of calves 2,134 head, against 192,245 head of cattle and 9,012 head of calves during April, 1934. Shipments of cattle to the Osage country of Oklahoma totaled 35,337 and calves 4,429 head, against 45,873 head of cattle and 5,908 head of calves during April a year ago.

Transiency In Texas Declining

AUSTIN, Tex.—Transiency in Texas is on the decline. The trend has been downward since last July, when the all-time peak load of 33,511 cases representing 40,166 persons were handled at the Texas division points.

In April, the case load had decreased to 26,358 and the number of persons aided to 31,224.

Marshall B. Thompson, state transient director, attributes the decline to measures set up to make transients a more stable population. In order to handle the wandering population of the country, 10 divisions or depots have been established in Texas at Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont, Big Spring, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and College Station.

A branch of the Beaumont division has been established at Port Arthur and the Houston division has a branch office at Galveston. From these division points, transients are routed to the 18 work camps located near these centers. Two of these camps house transient families; others are for unattached men and boys. One so-called camp at Houston is an infirmary, where medical care is administered in cases of serious illness.

The A. and M. Division does not route men to camp but is so designated because approximately 200 transients have been attending school there since September, 1934, under an agreement whereby these students, in return for work

LOW LONG DISTANCE night RATES BEGIN AT 7 P.M.

Heretofore lowest rates on "station-to-station" calls were available at 8:30 p.m.

Now... beginning June 1... this reduced rate period has been advanced to 7 p.m., a more convenient hour at which to call. These low night rates are about 40% less than corresponding charges in the daytime.

There is no reduction on "person-to-person" calls. As formerly, rates for these are the same at all hours.

DEAREST DAUGHTER,

Thanks so much for sending that delightful little note, remembering my birthday. And please don't feel that its being so short made it any the less welcome.

Besides, I know what it is to have "shoppers headache"—to feel all worn out and dragged down, with your feet as heavy as lead from walking around all day.

But, my dear, why do you do it? I know you and Bob have something of a struggle to make ends meet. It won't always be that way, because I know Bob's a very ambitious young man—ambitious for you as well as for himself.

But take an old lady's advice, dear. Look for bargains—no matter how wealthy you become. But don't make an expedition of it. Make it a tour. You get a newspaper. Look for real bargains there, before you set out. Then you'll know where you're going, and you won't wear yourself out. I know, because I do it.

Give my best to Bob, and give Bob, Jr., a great big kiss from his grandma.

Lots of love, Mother

Summer Sweethearts

Michael Strykhurst, beautiful, love with Michael Heath, runs a riding school. His father is rich and her father, Bertine, is snobbish. Stryker, Katharine's friend, is a happy love affair and is a suicide by young Dr. . . .

Two detectives . . . Michael's address and . . . Michael sets off with . . . in her car. He tells . . . Katharine's friend, . . . happy love affair and is . . . suicide by young Dr. . . .

"We've . . . find a Michael Heath- . . . ed 26, born to Francis . . . rayton Heatheroe and his . . . riel, at Donegal in Ire-

"I've told you I'm he," Michael in some impatience and, it would seem, disgust. "What about it, young feller me lad?" The detective rolled the words on his tongue with un- tion, enjoying the flash of anger in his opponent's eyes. "You've come into money, and that's the straight of it. 'Tisn't often we get a job like this and get the back of yer hand for it, like. Mostly it's crooks we're after—we're a very well known firm, d'ye see?" He extended, between a rather soiled forefinger and thumb, a business card which Michael accepted with every evi- dence of distrust. "Malley & Gerhardt, detec- tives," he read aloud. "All right, Malley & Gerhardt, tell me about it."

"That's talking," approved the elder, motioning his partner to a seat. "They come to us in Oma- ha where we have our headquar- ters. They says, 'Find this young Heatheroe if ye can.'"

"Who's 'they'?" demanded Mi- chael impatiently.

"The English fellers. Two of them. 'Solicitors,' they call them- selves. Seems they'd been in Watson's Gully and nobody knew hair nor hide about where ye'd taken off to. Said ye'd picked up and beat it last year when yer partner made off with the mon- ey—"

"Oh, they did, did they?"

"We traced ye to Texas," con- tinued Mr. Malley, crossing one plump leg over the other and al- lowing the ashes of his cigar to sift carelessly all over the floor of the porch. "We lost it there for a while. Ye'd a job there for some months, saved yer money and were sober, they said—"

"All right, all right, now you've got me. Where do we go from here?" demanded Michael. "Not that I put much stock in this in- heritance yarn. It sounds fishy. Nobody," he added with a darkening face, "ever gave me a penny. It sounds like a pipe dream."

"It's no pipe dream if ye're the sole heir of Francis Albert Drayton Heatheroe," pronounced the detective with uncton. "He was the younger son of a lord. Put that in your pipe and smoke it! His older brother inherited the place—seems like they're partly English. They've 'hold- ings,' the solicitor fellers said, in England, too. Anyhow in June this older brother died. He was," said the detective, consulting a slip of paper he had fished from his wallet, "named Hilary Edward Heatheroe, Lord Carden—"

Something flashed across Mi- chael's face, hitherto dark and unresponsive.

"Ah, ye've heard that name be- fore, I'll be bound," murmured Mr. Malley triumphantly. He was finding this client an extreme- ly irritating subject. What he expected he could not have said, but something like enthusiasm, at least. It wasn't every day in the week, he told himself, that you walked up to a feller and told him he had come into a castle and a title and God knew what-all. Not that it meant much on this side of the pond; titles were going bog- ging, from all he'd heard. Still it was something. Funny this kid couldn't seem to get the idea.

"I have heard it before," Mi- chael said slowly. "There was a crest—on a scrap of paper in my father's collar box. I remember asking about it when I was a kid. My father said, I remember, that the Cardens had always had it, since the War of the Roses or something."

"He died—when?" queried Mr. Gerhardt who had been silent up to this very moment. Michael stared at him, consideringly.

"When I was 10. My mother a year later. I was raised—I grew up, I mean—on the place."

"Well, that's the story," finished Mr. Malley with relish. "Now we can turn ye over to Mister James William Downrigg of London, Eng- land, and collect ours. It's been a long drag, Tom," he told his part- ner, "but we always get our man." Gerhardt nodded. They both eyed Michael curiously.

Malley rose with some ceremony. "Well, we'll get in touch with Downrigg tonight. He's at the Waldorf. Don't go away, young feller—"

Michael grinned. "I won't pal. Thanks for the trouble."

"That's the stuff," Malley's great paw came out and whacked the tweed-covered shoulder re- soundingly. "Sure, it wouldn't be natural if ye didn't get a kick out of it. And the papers will have it tomorrow, I'll be bound. Or the next day anyway. Ye'll have reporters on yer doorstep."

A shadow crossed the young man's face.

"Ye don't like the notion much?"

"Not reporters—no. A nuisance."

"Well, well, it's all in the day's work," averred Mr. Malley com- fortably. "If they should happen to ask—and they will, no doubt about it—mention our names. Malley & Gerhardt, Second National Bank Building, Omaha, Nebraska. We always get our man."

Presently they left in a cab or- dered over Michael's telephone. The young man watched them stow their plump, satisfied selves away in it. There was a puzzled look, almost a disturbed one, on his sunburned face.

Then Michael went into the shabby living room where riding crops and week-old newspapers mingled with pipes and dust and disorder over which Clarence, Tips' father, never seemed to gain control.

Michael stared at the room with some distaste as he jiggled the telephone receiver. He was trying to fit into it the picture of Katharine with her smooth, fair head, her exquisite skin, her delicate shoes and frocks and the scent that always clung about her. It was fantastic . . . the afternoon's hap- penings themselves were sheer fan- tasy . . .

"Innickock 0021? May I speak to Miss Strykhurst, please?"

He grinned to himself. That wasn't, really, her name. But only he and a shabby minister and a woman with floured hands were aware of it.

Katharine—Lady Carden. Lady Katharine of Donegal Castle. Would she like that? Oh, it was a pipe-dream, a bubble that would present burst . . .

Her cool voice on the telephone. A voice soft and sure and real like herself.

"Darling, this is me."

She had to be careful—he knew that. "Yes," she said. "Yes."

"It's all right," Michael told her, speaking low. "It's perfectly all right. They were detectives, but they had good news for me. Can't tell you now."

"Michael, I'm frightened of what we've done. Her voice came hurriedly, almost broken. "I must see you. Oh, I can't talk now. Someone's coming . . ."

He had to ring off then. Had to be content with that. Perhaps she would call him later.

He was going out into the stable yard, hands in pockets, brooding over the strange day he had just lived through, when Sally came rushing up to him.

"Michael, precious!" she cried. "Daddy says there's just no use your saying you can't get away. He's got a man to put in charge. We can leave for South America any moment."

He stared at her. He had for- gotten her completely.

But Sally would not allow her- self to be so easily forgotten. She was a force to be reckoned with—and soon.

Post Cards Found After Many Years

By United Press

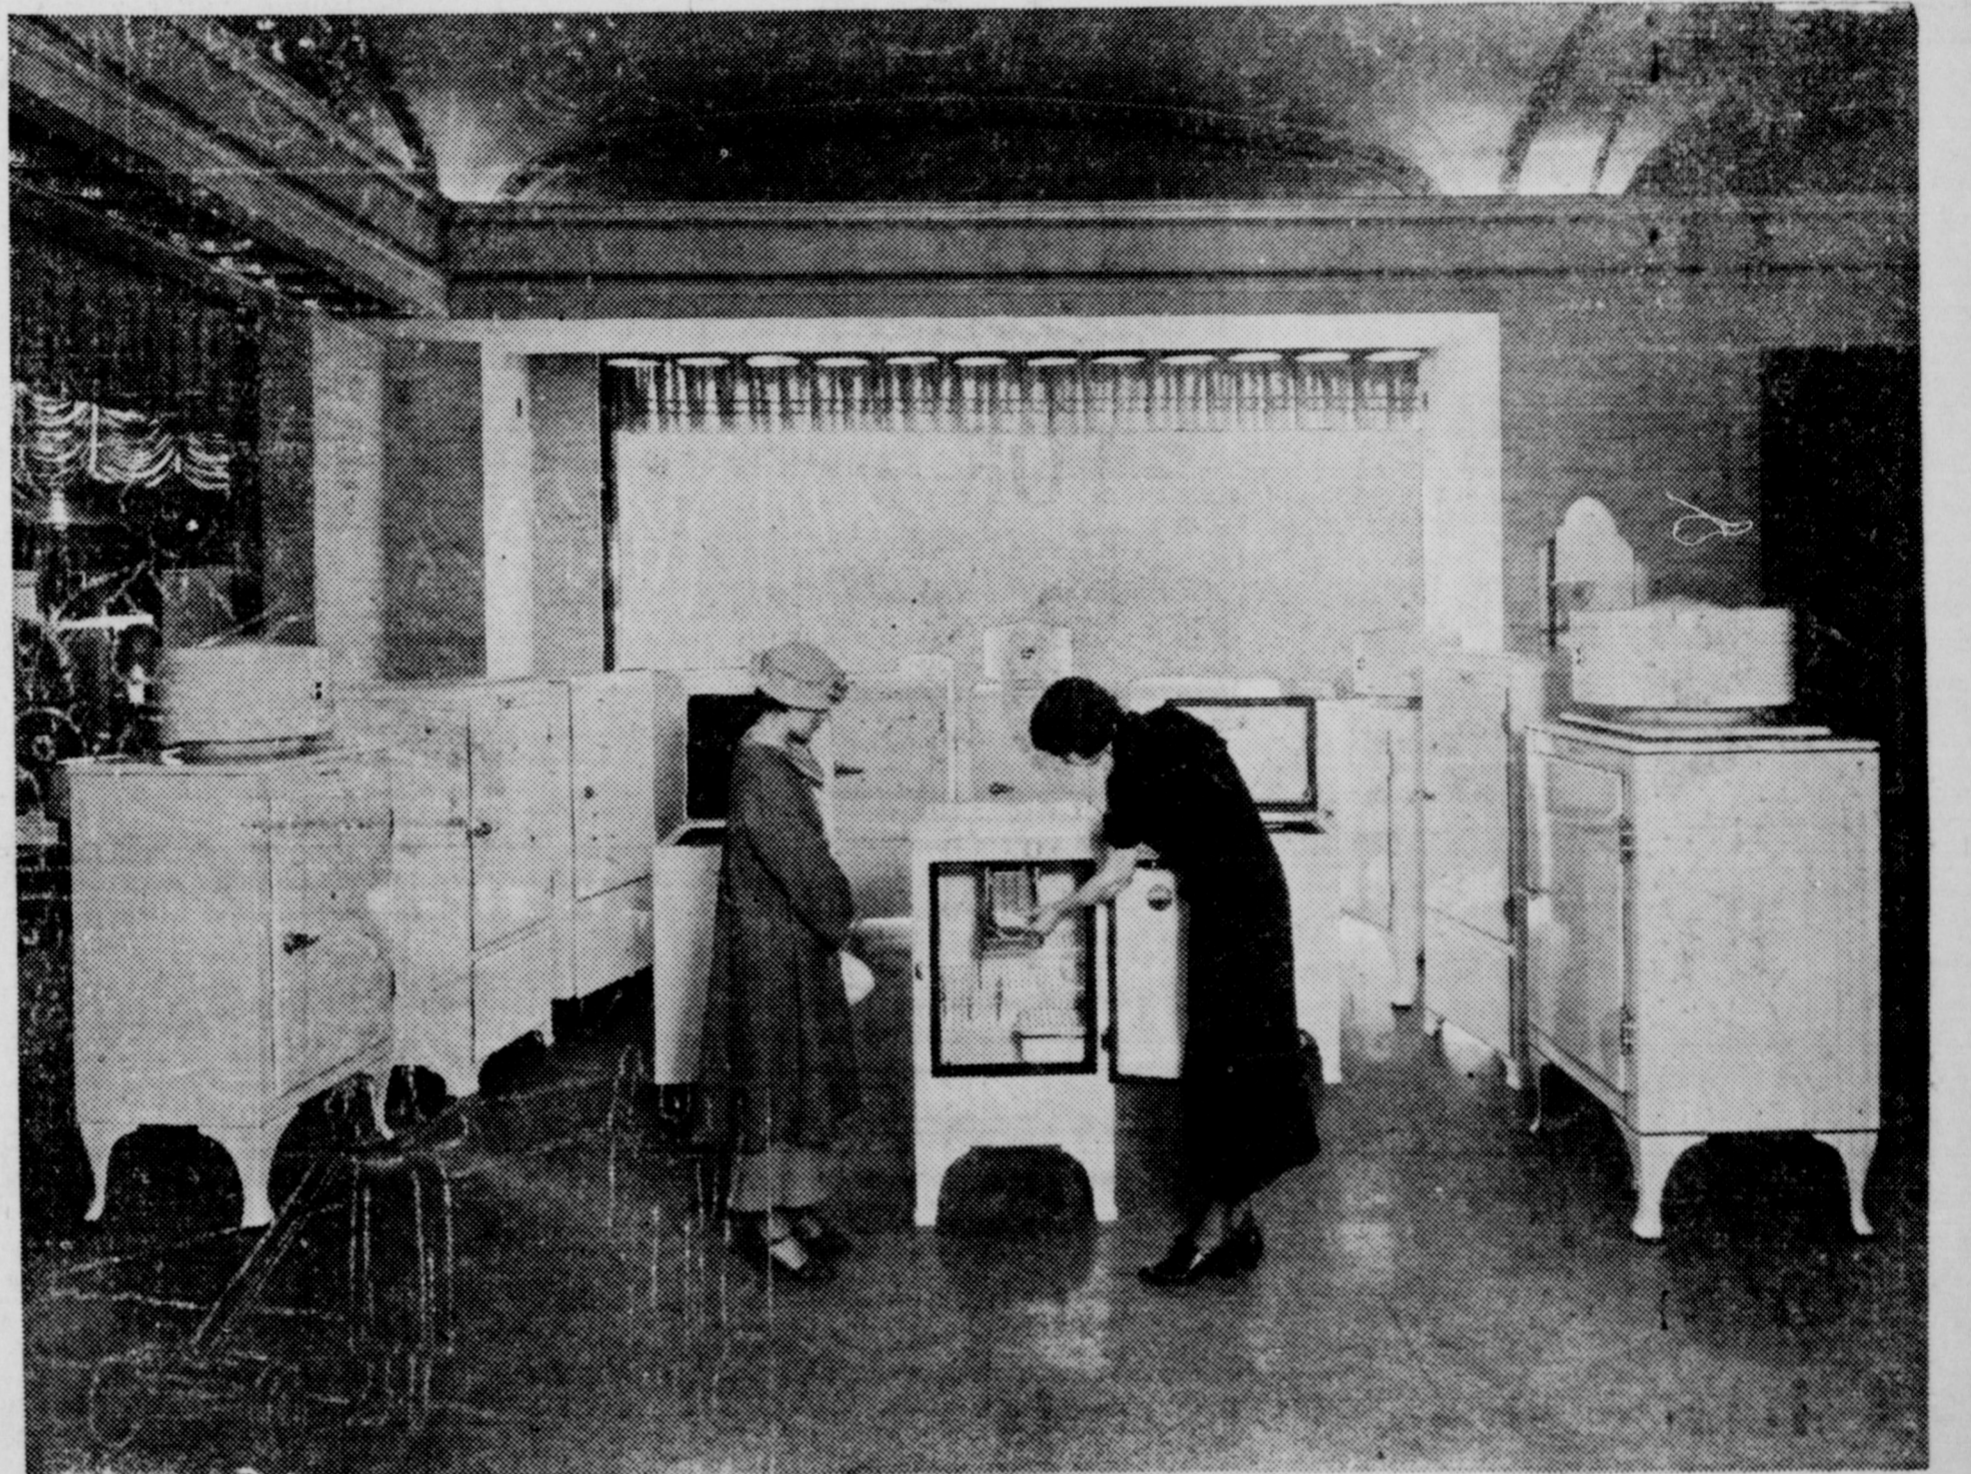

M'ALLEN, Texas.—Two postal cards, mailed to Private George Myers, stationed with New York troops in McAllen in 1916, came to light here this week at the McAllen postoffice.

In some unexplained manner, the two cards, bearing 1916 post- marks from the Brooklyn post- office, were found in the day's mail Monday by Mail Clerk Merle Woods.

A 50-foot poster, showing an au- toist carrying a crippled child, has been erected in New York as a warning to reckless drivers. It ought to do some good for about a week, when a car will undoubt- edly crash into it.

"HEARD THE NEWS! THE REGULAR PRICE OF CALUMET BAKING POWDER IS NOW ONLY 25¢ A POUND!"

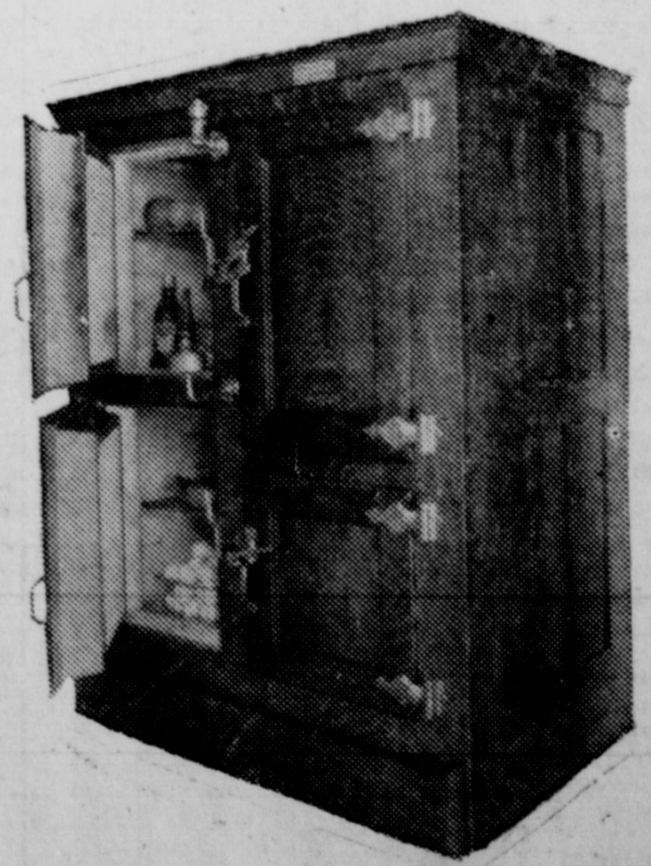

AND THE NEW CAN IS SO EASY TO OPEN!

There Is An Electric Refrigerator for Every Purse and Purpose

NO MATTER how large or how small the home, there's an electric refrigerator that will fit exactly. For the tiny apartment, the new "Lift-Top" models are ideal. For other homes, conventional front-door models range from 3 cubic feet on up to 12, 14 or 18 cubic feet—the latter large enough for the most pretentious mansion.

Prices, too, vary from far less than $100 for the smaller models on up in proportion to the size of the refrigerator. All in all, there is a size ideally suited to any situation. Before you decide on any kind of a new refrigerator, be sure to look over all makes and models of electrics—you'll find one just the right size at a price fitted to your purse.

Sixteen Years of Service

TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY

This electric refrigerator has an admirable service record—16 years of dependable, economical operation in the home of F. H. Barnes, 2912 5th Avenue, Fort Worth. A new fan belt or two and periodical oiling of the motor has been the extent of service required. Your refrigerator worries are over when you buy an electric refrigerator.

Since this is canning time, it is the ideal time to discover the labor- and money-saving efficiency of the 1935 gas ranges.

These new gas ranges offer the utmost in flexibility—from full flame for rapid boiling in jelly-making, to a very low flame (or simmer burner) for proper cooking of preserves and jams. For oven canning, oven heat controls assure just the right temperature . . . improved insulation makes possible more cooking on the same amount of gas and helps to keep kitchen cool.

This month your gas company is featuring special displays of these new ranges and offering them on the easiest kind of terms. See them and learn how you can modernize that kitchen for little money.

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT
John 16:7-11; Romans 8:10-17, 26, 27

Traditionally pictured is the upper room in Jerusalem as a great stately hall with high ceiling and beautiful arches. It is a fitting description for the picture of "The Last Supper."

Jesus with his disciples were gathered here to feast, to observe the Passover. How tense and solemn the atmosphere must have been as the tragic shadow of the cross lengthened across them while Jesus spoke words which would instruct and comfort them when He was gone. He explained to them that it was necessary for him to go away that the comforter might come and dwell in their hearts. This comforter, the Holy Spirit, would direct them in their work, teach them and above all would help them to look back over the events of his life with them and open their understanding by bringing all things to their remembrance.

Later when the cross had been endured and the resurrection had been fulfilled, now their hearts must have ached that they so little had understood and comforted Christ in his last hours.

Paul wrote to the Romans from Corinth in A. D., 57, in detail the work of the Holy Spirit. From this study we can picture in contrast, one born of the spirit, and one who walks alone.

The man who does not know Christ has only the things of the world to fill his heart and life. Though he be upright and moral his heart is empty except for a yearning he does not understand. He is a debtor to the flesh. Appetite and lust leads him stumbling along with no one to comfort or help his infirmity.

"For if ye live after the flesh ye must die." Spiritual death is separation from God and far worse than physical death.

But how different the man born of the Spirit. He is upright and happy with the peace Jesus gave: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

He is not a bond servant to fear that saps the life of any where it gains entrance. But he can look up as a child and say my Father and receive a blessing.

"The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

The Spirit helps him in his weakness, "for we know not how to pray as we ought." What a comfort to know that words, so weak and sometimes jumbled, if the heart be in tune with the Master's and a great need felt, are taken and presented in an acceptable way at the throne of mercy.

The man born of the Spirit can find true liberty and power growing daily to new heights of understanding in Christ Jesus.

The banner of Christ would be floating over all the land in every place if Christian people born of the Spirit would in their struggle for liberty, power and happiness stop and vision Christ again as he explains the work of the Holy Spirit, the third person in the Trinity—God, the Father; God, the Son; God, the Holy Spirit.

The Holy Spirit has been in the do that and do that accurately, and there is nothing more important than accuracy. Then, find something additional word doing."

Alexander Graham Bell comes in "A man must pick for himself for success. He must not be swayed by the pet ambition of his mother or the fond wish of his father. From his own enthusiasms, and above all from his own enthusiasms, he must get the motive and inspiration which is to start him on his way to a successful life." John D. Rockefeller approaches, "The underlying essential element of success in business affairs is to follow the established laws of high class dealing. Keep to broad and sure lines, and study them to be certain that they are correct ones. Study diligently your capital requirements, and fortify yourself fully to cover possible setbacks, because you can absolutely count on meeting set-backs. The man who starts out simply with the idea of getting rich won't succeed—you must have a larger ambition."

All the above statements were made during prosperity. Today as a result of a sweeping nationwide depression millions are on government relief. The responsibility for the distribution lies with the government not the men who happen to be placed in charge of it to do the bidding of the government. Before those who are on relief or have been taken off resort to personal interference or violence against local relief administrators and their co-workers they should think twice—then they will realize that the local administration is only carrying out orders and has no personal feeling against any human being off or on relief. Many demonstrations of this kind have been made in other cities. It is hoped that our local situation can receive cooperation for the efficient manner in which they have been handling relief.

Church of Christ Meet Opens With Big Attendance

The opening service of the Gospel meeting being conducted at the Church of Christ was well attended. Evangelist John H. Banister, in charge, brought a most interesting lesson to us from the parable of the sower. In his comparison he brought out these outstanding thoughts: "First, the seed that fell by the wayside; this represents men that hear God's word but obey it, but soon go back into the world because their hearts are filled with too much foreign substances, which keep the word from taking much root; thirdly, the seed that fell among the thorns; this represents men that hear God's word and obey it, but soon drift back into the world because the cares and riches and pleasures of this world overcome the word and choke it out; fourth and last, the seed that fell in good ground; this represents men that hear God's word and obey it, and keep God's word in them, letting it rule their lives, therefore bringing forth much fruit and at last being saved."

Expect Singers From Cisco, Mineral Wells At Church's Revival

The revival meeting at the Church of the Nazarene is well under way. The morning services are very inspirational. Thursday morning the evangelist spoke on "The Good Fight of Faith." "Life is a fight from the cradle to the grave. We must fight in the temporal side of life. We find the fight must follow on even in the Christian life. Must fight for time for Bible reading, prayer and for meditation. But this is a fight of faith. We cannot see all that is being fits of the business. The highly developed competitive system gave ruinously low prices at one time and unwarrantably high prices at another time. When low prices prevailed labor was cruelly hurt; when high prices prevailed the public paid the bills." Let's hear from George M. Reynolds, "I believe decisiveness is the most vital element in life, whether it is business, in politics or every day social affairs. The man who knows what he wants to do is almost certain to be a winner."

Staid old John Wannamaker says this, "Again, in all work, as in knowledge there is unlimited room for expansion and advancement. The business pyramid will find no circumscribing dome above which it cannot lift its capstone. But the breadth of field occupied as a foundation and the number of competent workers at the first level will determine the attitude of the pinnacle." Earl Babst makes this comment, "If I wanted to give advice that anyone could use I would say 'be thorough.'" As Josh Billings says, "Its better not to know so many things than to know so many things that ain't so."

Typhoid Vaccine Is Now Recommended

AUSTIN, Tex.—Now is the time according to Dr. Charles D. Reece, director, Bureau of Communicable Diseases, to be vaccinated against typhoid fever, a disease that has cost the lives of more than 2,000 Texans in the past four years.

Typhoid fever has been eliminated in our army and navy through vaccination. The typhoid vaccine is not a serum. This preventive treatment of typhoid fever consists of three small hypodermic "shots" given every 5 to 7 days until three injections are given. Such a treatment protects you from taking the typhoid fever for two to three years.

Consult your family physician today in regards to typhoid prevention. Invest in typhoid against this often fatal disease. This form of protection insures you and your family against possible long confinement, great economic loss, and perhaps death.

You may be so unfortunate as to drink contaminated milk, water, or other food containing the typhoid bacilli and contract the disease this year. In selecting a place for a vacation choose one where you know that the water and milk supply is pure. Be sure that the
