Fugitive Abandons Child in Chase

WOODS, FOSTER LOSE UNKNOWN AFTER CHASE

Officers Seeking Desperate Man in Wood Near Kokomo.

Virge Foster and Loss Woods, deputy, this morning were forced to abandon a half-hour chase at high speed of a man whom they sought after a call had been received from Gorman his car had crashed into another and the man was thought intoxicated.

While driving into a sand bank about 14 miles southeast of Eastland near the farm home of Pope Holliday, the unknown man was forced to take to the brush.

In the car was found a half-pint of whiskey. J. B. Draper, captain of the Highway Patrol at Abilene and two patrolmen from the same city, who were in Eastland this morning with Patrolmen Morgan Myers and Ernest Daniels, with county officers at noon attempted to corner the unknown. Shotguns, rifles and pistols were taken by the group in quest of the man, thought to be desperate.

Virge Foster received the call from a Gorman oil man who stated that a driver in a Chevrolet coupe had struck his automobile and reckless driving of the person would likely injure a small occupant of the automobile.

At Kokomo the man turned in several directions at various times before his escape.

Cheekup by Draper with Austin officials about the license revealed plates were stolen at Priddy, Texas last summer. Serials on the plates were 747-220.

The motor number, 395,630, was thought to have been changed from an original.

Loss Woods described the elusive driver as one of medium height wearing a gray suit.

THREE ALIBIS PRESENTED FOR HAUPTMANN

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 31. Bruno Hauptmann's alibis for the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder stood at three today, against seven prosecution witnesses, who have identified him with the crime.

The Bronx German witnesses have been: 1. Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, his wife, who said he called for her at the bakery where she worked on the evening of March 1, 1932.

Attorney General David Wilentz fought to break down the alibis. He achieved his greatest success with Carlstrom, who contradicted himself on two parts of his story and was forced to admit he had been acquainted with Anna Hauptmann—and one of his "girl friends"—was an intimate of hers.

Civilization May Lead To A Simpler Life

Benjamin Franklin has been called "the first civilized American"; nevertheless, wise old man that he was, he was never entirely sold on the idea that the civilized man is really happier than the untaught savage.

All this comes to light in the discovery of marginal comments by Franklin in an old book owned by the Library of Congress. This book, published in 1770, undertook to review the happiness which civilization brings, and Franklin scribbled his dissent on the edge of one of the pages.

"The difference," he wrote, "is not so great as may be imagined. Happiness is more generally and equally diffused among savages than in our civilized societies. No European who has once tasted savage life can afterwards bear to live in our societies.

"The care and labor of providing for artificial and fashionable wants the sight of so many rich wallowing in superfluous plenty, whereby so many are kept poor and distressed by want; the insolence of office, the snares and plagues of law, the restraints of custom, all contribute to disgust them with what we call civil society."

If Franklin found the leisurely pastoral society of his day uncomfortably complex and contradictory, one wonders what he would have thought of life in the America of 1935. Probably he would have yelled for a new sheet of paper and sat down to make a new list of the ways in which the savage has it all over the civilized man.

For savages, after all, do not get themselves into the kind of tangle where people go shoeless because there are too many shoes, breadless because there is too much wheat, and moneyless because there is too much hard cash in the land.

Nor, getting themselves into difficulties, do they seek to remedy shortages of essentials by cutting down the available supplies of food, clothing, and other necessities.

In lesser matters, too, the savage has the bulge on us. He does not have to read about Hauptmann trials; he does not have to listen to crooners, nor does he kill 35,000 people a year in the process of moving from one place to another, as we do.

He does not have the infidelities and imbecilities of a Hollywood to support, nor must he listen to senators explaining that his country will go to the dogs if it joins the World Court.

Is the answer, then, that we must give the country back to the Indians forthwith, and woo the simple life while squatting placidly under a tree? Not at all. We simply

Income Tax In A Nutshell

WHO MUST FILE RETURNS Returns are required of every single person who for the year 1934 had a gross income of $5,000 or more or a net income of $1,000 or more and of every husband and wife living together who for the year 1934 had an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more or an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more. Widowers, widows, divorcees, and married persons separated by mutual consent are classified as single persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families. Husband and wife living together may make separate returns of the income of each, or their income may be included in a single joint return. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax. Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, joint or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may after the due date of the return file an amended return or returns on a different basis for that year.

ALLEY OOP

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lou Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

Steve Meyers, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Later that evening Gale goes skating on the river, goes through the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father, now dead built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car but when he returns she is gone.

Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never be an artist and eager to go to work in the mill. Vicky Thatcher, daughter of Robert Thatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Brian sees Gale in the mill and recognizes her. Next evening when she comes from work she finds Brian waiting. He asks if he can walk home with her.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XIII

Brian Westmore was waiting for his answer.

Gale knew everyone was watching them. A stream of men and women was pouring from the mill and Gale could feel their eyes on her. She could imagine what they were saying, too. Her cheeks flushed.

And Brian Westmore stood there waiting.

She said, "I—I'm sorry but—" and then she saw Steve, not a dozen yards ahead. He had turned and was looking back at her. "There's someone waiting for me!" Gale went on quickly. She raised her head, met Brian Westmore's eyes directly.

"Oh, I see. Well, good-night—" His smile was just as friendly as he moved away. Gale noticed how well he carried himself. He was almost as big as Steve, only straighter. And Josie was right about it; he certainly was good-looking.

There was still color in Gale's cheeks as she hurried ahead to meet Steve. "I wondered if you waited," she began. "I didn't see you—"

"No, I guess you didn't." Steve was moving beside her now but there was something queer about his voice. Gale glanced at him side-wise. She said, "I suppose you heard about Connie Bauman fainting this afternoon?"

"Yes, I heard about it." "Something was definitely wrong. Steve didn't look at her. His voice was flat, almost cold. They walked in silence for a few moments and then he turned abruptly. "Well," he said, "aren't you going to tell me about it?"

"About what?" "About how you happen to be so friendly with Brian Westmore?" "Steve?"

"Well, you are, aren't you? I saw you talking to him, smiling at him. You must be on pretty good terms. I didn't know you were so well acquainted."

Gale stopped. "You've no right to say things like that," she began. Steve interrupted before she could continue.

"Oh, haven't I? I suppose it's nothing when the son of the owner of the mill hangs around the employees' entrance, waiting for one of the girls! I suppose you think everyone in the mill isn't talking about you! Well, they are. About you and Brian Westmore. Everybody saw you together. Did he ask for a date tonight?"

"Steve Meyers! If you're trying to be insulting you're certainly succeeding."

"I notice you haven't answered any of my questions."

"And what's more I don't intend to. Since when have I been obliged to account to you for the people I speak to. I'll talk to Brian Westmore or anyone else as often as I want to!"

"So you did make a date with him? You're going out with him?" "You can't talk to me like that!" Gale's face was white now. "You've no right to say such things!"

Steve's voice was level, dangerously level. "You seem to be forgetting," he said, "that I asked you a question a few days ago. An important question. You promised me an answer and I've been waiting for it—"

"Then you can have it right now. I'm not going to marry you—ever! I—I thought I would once, but I've changed my mind. You've changed it for me—right now. I'm not going to marry a man who didn't love me and you don't or you wouldn't say the things you are saying. I didn't know you could be so unjust and cruel and hateful!"

"And I didn't know you were the kind of girl to fall for a rich guy with a line—a guy who doesn't think you're any better than the dirt under his feet!"

With blazing eyes the girl faced him. "Will you please leave me," she said. "I don't care to hear the things you're saying and I don't want to be seen with you. Not ever again. I wouldn't have believed you could talk the way you have if I hadn't heard it with my own ears. Now I've heard it and I hope you'll leave."

"I certainly will, if you feel that way."

"It's exactly the way I feel." Their eyes met and held. Steve said, in a voice suddenly lower pitched, "You're sure you mean that?"

"Every word of it!" He hesitated an instant. Then he said, "All right—I'm going," and turned and walked back toward the mill.

Gale went on rapidly, her head held high. She was angry at Steve and angry at herself because she knew some of the things Steve had said were true. People would talk about her conversation with Brian Westmore. The girls would be sure to ask questions. She must think of something to tell them.

Two of the O'Connor children were playing in the yard as Gale passed—a little girl and a boy—a few years younger. Gale was a favorite with the children because sometimes she told them stories. They saw her now and came running.

"Hello, Gale!" "Come 'n play with us—" She shook her head. "I'm sorry, honey. I can't tonight." "Aw, please!" "No, I have work to do."

The little girl caught her arm. "Why, you're crying!" she said, startled. "There are tears in your eyes. Did someone hurt you?"

Gale shook her head, forcing a smile. "No," she said, "I'm not crying, Katie. It's just that I've—got a cold. Oh, dear, I'm going to sneeze!"

She dried her eyes with the handkerchief. "I'd love to play with you," she went on, "but I have dozens of things to do. Some other time, though—"

They walked with her, chattering, until they reached the Henderson house. Dusk had fallen but there was no light in the house. Gale let herself in and called, "Father!"

"Yes."

He was sitting in his favorite chair before window looking out on the street. "I saw you coming," he said. "Who were the children with you?"

"Two of the little O'Connors." "Tim O'Connor's youngsters?"

"Yes." Gale was putting away her hat and coat. She said, "It's so dark in here, Father, you can't see anything. You ought to have a light."

"I like it better this way," he told her. "Cold out, isn't it?"

"Yes, pretty cold."

"There must be quite a wind. I noticed the way the trees are bending." He paused and then went on, "Steve didn't walk home with you?"

"No."

"Steve's a good boy, Gale. A fine boy." He paused as though there were something more he wanted to say but evidently changed his mind.

Later, over the evening meal, Gale thought her father looked tired but he denied it. He'd been feeling unusually well all day, he said. Put on his coat at noon and took a few steps outdoors to get a breath of air. He'd passed the time of day with Old Den Geddis from across the street.

Tom Henderson's big frame was stooped and his clothes hung about him loosely. There were little pouches beneath his eyes and his cheeks had an unhealthy tinge. Gale, facing him, thought it was really shocking how he had changed in two years.

"How about a game of cribbage tonight?" Tom Henderson asked his son.

"I'll take you on," Phil told him. Gale, clearing the table and heating dish water, was pleased. She was glad to have Phil at home, glad to hear Phil's explanation of a mishap with a box of tools. Well, that was better than for their father to know the truth.

She heard the cribbage players keeping score as she hung away the damp tea towels and put the dish pan on its hook. Neither her father or Phil looked up as she slipped from the room.

She went into her bedroom and closed the door. There was no moon tonight, but Gale went to the window and pressed her face against the pane. The darkness was comforting. A big star, hanging just over the roof tops, blinked at her. Millions of miles away, that star was. Millions and billions of miles away—

The star shimmered enticingly and suddenly its hard light seemed cruel. Cruel and unjust as Steve had been. How could Steve have said the things he had to her—Steve who had told her he loved her, Steve on whom she had always counted?

Hot tears fell on Gale's cheek and she brushed them aside. She stared out at the star and the black sky. She was angry at Steve—but that wasn't why she was crying.

Gale thought, "I wonder why Brian Westmore wanted to walk home with me. I wish—"

She wouldn't permit herself to finish the sentence.

5c DAILY PAY By United Press

OTTAWA, Ont.—Convicts will be paid five cents a day for work done in Canada prisons if they behave themselves, it is announced here. The money will be handed to them on release.

PHILADELPHIA—James Joseph Dykes is shifting the accomplished Al Simmons from left to center field to complete a straight-through-the-center combination that should be exceptionally skillful when the Chicago White Sox take the field this spring.

The acquisition of Luke Sewell gives the Pale Hose a seasoned catcher.

Luke Appling and Jack Hayes, both of whom were out for the greater part of the 1934 campaign with injuries, rate near the top as a keystone combination.

No club gets anywhere without a polished straight-through-the-center defense. A vast percentage of chances are handled just to either side of a line running from the catcher to the center fielder.

Like most major league managers, Dykes does not reside in the city where he operates during the summer. To see the manager of the Chicago Americans, you have to visit Philadelphia, where the personable Jimmy conducts a bowling and billiard academy.

Tired old eyes last season saw the White Sox as the worst club in the history of either big wheel, but Dykes is positive his athletes won't finish in the basement in 1935, despite the fact that there isn't any too many changes in personnel.

Washington, Simmons, and Radcliffe

VERNON WASHINGTON, second best hitter in the American Association, supplants Simmons in left field, with Radcliffe, a former Athletic up again from Louisville, in right. Dykes now lists Mule Haas as an extra hand, together with Hafey, a nephew of the bespectacled and respected Chick, who is being brought on from the Pacific Coast League, and Jocko Conlon.

Dykes dispels all doubt in regard to Simmons remaining with the White Sox, and will be disappointed if the Pole doesn't have one of his finest years. Radcliffe played enough in 1934 to convince his commanding officer that he is capable of making good on the big time.

Would Settle for Four Good Ones

AS in the cases of practically every other outfit, pitching is the Chicago entry's most perplexing problem. Dykes will look over a dozen or more deceivers, alleged and otherwise, and gladly would settle for four good ones. What manager wouldn't?

Dykes speaks first of Kennedy, a young man who turned in three splendidly pitched games during the tag end of last season. Kennedy, another Athletic castoff, was obtained from Oklahoma City.

Les Tietje is considered the star of the staff, and Dykes hopes to have the benefit of what speed and spinning is left in the once cunning sleeves of Meat Earnshaw, Ted Lyons and Sad Sam Jones.

Dykes to Employ Cochrane Psychology

AFTER a club has been in a rut for any length of time, and gets into the losing habit, it is a tough job to convince the players that they really can win," said Dykes.

"It usually is with the addition of a competent hustler here and there that the athletes finally come out of the doldrums and begin to win. An aggregation like that frequently is hard to stop, as were the Detroit Tigers when Mickey Cochrane started lashing them last season.

"I hope to convince my men that they are as capable as any other group in the league. It may take several years, but I feel that I can do it, and am confident that I have the nucleus of a club that is headed for the first division."

ing the present competitive bidding system, but with the provisions that they report in detail to congress.

7. That government regulation of private flying be "simplified as far as possible and kept to a minimum compatible with public safety."

The commission reported that the present American Air Trans the present American air transportation system leads the world but that many lines are facing financial difficulties, jeopardizing their continued operation.

Added powers, the report said, must be given the Interstate Commerce commission under present air mail laws to take emergency steps to insure continued maintenance of air mail lines pending enactment of the new permanent federal policy.

Speaking of near development of trans-oceanic flying, the report said, "America should participate in such services with both flying boats and rigid airships."

"Flying boat service should be developed along the same lines as domestic air transport, with direct financial aid as necessary allocated to the operation by the proposed air commerce commission.

"Airship service would be provided through construction by the government of a large airship and suitable base with provisions made for its subsequent lease to a qualified commercial operator."

The new air commerce commission, the report said, should have full power to issue operation certificates to air transport companies, control rates, schedules, service conditions, subsidies, and supervise financial structures and relationships of companies.

The commission would foster also development of additional airports and purchase helium gas from the government for private rigid airships.

The commission said that it felt grave concern over the "apparent lack of adequate facilities for coordination between the army and the navy."

The commission asserted that criticism, however, of alleged inefficiency of the army, while flying the air mail last year, was "exaggerated in all respects" and most of it "unjustified."

In praising the military pilots, the commission asserted that the criticism was "essentially similar to campaigns in other great air-craft producing countries."

Future military aircraft development, the commission said, should be aimed to increase energy through promotion of Diesel engines and military engines of 1,200 horsepower or more.

Iowa Youth Boasts Of An Extra Rib

Physicians at the University of Iowa hospital here removed two extra ribs from Charles Roberts, 18, Dr. S. R. Freund, noted Vienna surgeon who is at the university hospital for special case study, superintended the delicate operation.

The case was one of the utmost rarity, according to physicians. Two ribs grew from the sides of the seventh cervical vertebra, one vertebra above the first dorsal where the ribs generally begin.

The two additional ribs grew under the collar bone and came into contact with the main nerves of the arm, causing intense pain.

AUSTIN.—Music, according to Greek Professor H. F. Leon at the University of Texas, worked wonders among the ancient sons of Troy. One Spartan senator used bands to put voters in the proper mood before asking the people to approve his bill. To teach students to respect law, Athenian schoolmasters had them sing in class, Dr. Leon said. Music was even considered a cure for lumbago and certain forms of insanity.

Mrs. Aubrey Cornelius Honored
Mrs. T. C. Wynn of Big Spring, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Williams, entertained with a delightful three-table contract affair Tuesday afternoon at Connellee hotel in the private clubroom, honoring the recent bride, Mrs. Aubrey Cornelius, nee Josephine Martin.

This popular young woman is being feted by her many friends and this event was an especially attractive one, with the playing appointments in heart shaped design, and the lovely white and silver wrappings of the bridal shower of gifts in delicate touch with the entertainment.

High score favor in game, a handsome linen luncheon set, was awarded Mrs. Buddy Brothers, who graciously presented it to the bride.

Mrs. Cornelius was requested to hand some one a garment that hung in a small panelled space, and found instead the array of bridal gifts, which included luncheon sets, linens, towels, bric-a-brac, and silver.

At 5 o'clock refreshments were served of lemon chiffon pastry and coffee to Mmes. Jack Ammer, Roy Birmingham, W. S. Barnett, Neal Day, Tom Harris, Buddy Brothers, Charges Fells, Frank Hightower, John F. Collins, Miss Elizabeth Day, the honoree, Mrs. Aubrey Cornelius, and Mrs. T. C. Wynn, hostess.

Parent-Teacher Association South Ward School
Members of the Parent-Teacher association of South Ward school met Tuesday afternoon in the cafeteria, with the president, Mrs. J. Frank Sparks, in charge of program.

Mrs. Lillian Smith, secretary program, presented the minutes, which were approved.

The program opened with the reading, "My Natal Day," given by Bruce Pipkin. The poem was the background for a reading, "Abraham Lincoln," presented by Jerry Railey.

Miss Pamill presented a paper on "Play at School," in which proper exercise under suitable supervision was the theme.

A discussion of the plans for the observance of Founder's Day and the silver tea to be held in celebration of the founder of the national organization and honoring past presidents of the South Ward F. T. A. were directed by Mrs. Sparks. The tea will be held on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 26.

The session closed with a talk by Mrs. Sparks on the good things we can do, and the help we can be one to the other.

Rummage Sale Personal Workers
The rummage sale to be sponsored by the Martha Dorcas class of the Methodist church for the purpose of helping to retire the church indebtedness will open its doors to the public Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock for two days of activity, closing Saturday night, as late as the last shopper attends.

Plans have been made by the general chairman, Mrs. F. A. Jones, and Mrs. W. A. Martin, her co-chairman, in the naming and directing of workers who will collect the contributions for the sale, in their various assigned sections.

Team women will be out all day Friday in the interest of the rummage sale, and these are Mrs. L. A. Cook, chairman, and assistants, Mmes. Fred Michael and W. E. Coleman; Mrs. H. C. Davis, chairman, and Mmes. J. L. Roper and A. W. Williamson; Mrs. W. B. Harris, chairman, Mmes. W. Van Geem and C. H. McBee; Mrs. E. N. Grisham, and assistant, Mrs. Howard Brock; Mrs. Roy Stokes, and assistant, Mrs. C. J. Germany; Mrs. J. Atchley will have a territory to herself, also Mrs. Frank Robertson and Mrs. Milton Newman; Mrs. W. A. Hart, and assistant, Mrs. June Kimble; Mrs. M. B. Griffin, and assistant, Mrs. Noble Harkrider; Mrs. J. F. Davis, and assistant, Mrs. B. O. Harrell; Mrs. R. S. Harris, and assistant, Mrs. Fred Hale; Mrs. J. C. Creamer, and Mrs. Dee High; Mrs. George Cross will canvass States Oil camp; Mrs. V. O. Wyatt will have Olden as territory, and Mrs. B. M. Collie and Mrs. W. P. Leslie, Hillcrest.

The telephone committee, any one of whom may be notified of bundles to be collected if not contacted by the team workers, and also will notify those hard to reach, requesting contributions for the rummage sale, includes, Mmes. W. A. Martin, W. E. Coleman, W. P. Leslie, J. P. Hearn, W. A. Keith, B. L. Fields, C. C. Ligon, Virge Foster, Frank Robertson, E. C. Satterwhite, and Miss Ila Mae Coleman.

The general chairman announces articles needed are men's, women's, children's and infants' clothes, shoes, sweaters, hats, coats, and household articles.

Among many things contributed so far are an ice box in good condition, good gas stoves, a large quantity of fresh embroidery flosses, a variety of playing cards, and many sets of card tables.

Requests Citizenship Classes Be Organized in Eastland
Mrs. George Bean of Ozona, district chairman, International Relations of Texas Federation Women's Clubs, has sent the presidents of the Eastland clubs an earnest request that classes in world citizenship be organized.

This class is now forming in all the club towns of the Sixth district. The subject is "The private manufacture of arms and ammunition; how has it promoted war and what can we do about it?"

It is stated that the study is useful and informative and Mrs. Bean states she has interesting program suggestions, for programs on international relations.

Ladies' Auxiliary Church of God
Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Church of God spent Monday and Tuesday at the home of Mrs. E. F. Ganow. A portion of the two days were spent in quilting. Mrs. H. A. Perry furnished chicken dinner Tuesday for the workers.

Present, Mmes. E. A. Parsons, E. W. Barnett, C. T. Ford, S. A. Harrell, G. W. Minn, W. P. Weatherall, Bessie Kirby, H. A. Perry, E. F. Ganow, D. E. Williamson and Miss Beatrice Daniels.

The next meeting of the group will be held at the home of Mrs. E. A. Parson. The members will devote part of their session on repair of articles for the Easter bazaar.

Anson Visitor
Miss Irlene Smith of Anson is a house guest of Miss Lavelle Hendrick, South Daugherty street.

Eastland Personals
Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Jones, Mrs. J. E. Harkrider and children, accompanied by Earl Braley, motorized to Breckenridge Tuesday to visit Leo and Elwood Chesley, who are en route to Tyler to attend school until spring, when they will be with their mother, Mrs. F. A. Jones.

Mrs. Milton Lawrence is reported ill at her home.

ISLAND FOX PARADISE
BEAUFORT, N. C.—Harker's Island, off the North Carolina coast, reportedly has an overabundance of red foxes. Several years ago, the report stated, a pair of the foxes was loosed on the island. Now their progeny has become Enemy No. 1 for islanders who raise chickens and ducks.

Weatherman Is Aid to Yosemite

By United Press
YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif.—The weatherman is doing his best to make 1935 an outstanding year in the battle against depression.

Recent storms, which brought total seasonal snowfall to 24 1/2 inches in Yosemite valley, attracted throngs of winter sports enthusiasts into the valley, foremost of California's all-year mountain playgrounds.

Above 7,500 feet, four feet of hard-packed snow beckoned to skiers and tobogganers.

El Portal and other valley checking stations reported 999 auto permits were issued during the holiday period from Dec. 20 to Jan. 1, a gain of 11 per cent over the number issued during the same period last year.

More than 5,000 visitors flocked to the valley for holiday ice and snow sports. Of this number, more than 2,500 drove to the new ski fields, less than an hour's drive from the valley floor, made accessible by completion of part of the new Glacier Point road.

Early this month, precipitation of 17.21 inches, a figure far above normal and almost six inches above the 1934 mark, had been recorded here.

Old Babe Is Still Ruler of a Herd

By United Press
WASHINGTON.—Everything has been quiet in the elephant house at the Washington zoo since Old Babe made Peaches behave.

Old Babe is a veteran circus trouper who was a queen of the picket line before Barnum flourished. She recently went into retirement here.

Zoo officials found themselves in a quandary when they tackled the problem of how to keep Old Babe from being lonely after her 50 years as boss of an elephant herd.

The only available companion for the queen was Peaches, a husky 18-year-old "bad actor" from the wilds of the Malay Archipelago. Peaches was a natural-born bully, who outweighed Babe by several hundred pounds and knew no master.

Officials realized, however, that Old Babe had placated more than 100 unruly upstarts in her time and that she had quieted mad stampedes when accidents or riots occurred. They decided to put her in with Peaches.

Dr. William Mann, zoo director, has described what took place when the elephants met. He said, "The young bully started at Old Babe, head down, to ram her into the wall and show her who was boss."

"Old Babe took one light slap at the upstart with her trunk, a light practiced slap that loosened a tusk and gave the youngster pause."

"Then Old Babe trumpeted a soft command, a rumble which issued from deep within her body. It was elephant talk, and it told the youngster something she understood at once."

"Perhaps Old Babe is of jungle royalty—I don't know. You'll have to ask her newest subject. I've watched them for several months now, and I know that Old Babe still rules."

Texas Shipments Of Livestock Show Decided Increase

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—The usual seasonal decline in Texas livestock shipments occurred in December, but the total was still far in excess of that of a year ago, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

"Combined shipments of the four classes of livestock—cattle, calves, hogs and sheep—totalled 4,365 cars to the Fort Worth stock yards and interstate points, an increase of 56 per cent over December 1933, the Bureau's report said. The increase was confined mainly to cattle, of which shipments totaled 3,154 cars, an increase of 141 per cent over the previous December.

"This was the sixth consecutive month in which cattle shipments greatly exceeded those of the comparable period the year previous and marked the culmination of the Government's emergency cattle buying program. Shipments of cattle continued unusually large in the Plains country, the Trans-Pecos, and the Edwards Plateau.

Shipments of sheep also exceeded those of a year ago in the High Plains and Trans-Pecos country, but were less than one-fourth as

Senators Can Not "Play Hooky" and Get By With It

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Texas senators no longer can "play hooky" from committee meetings and get away with it.

"At all regular or stated meetings of the senate committees, the chairman shall call the roll of the members and cause to be made a record of those present and the absentees, together with the excuses, if any, of such absentees. This record of committee attendance shall be printed in the Senate Journal."

So reads one of the most drastic rules the Senate has adopted for itself in many years.

The "folks back home" hereafter may easily ascertain whether their senators are working or gaily dancing in a night club.

The rule against hooky didn't stop merely with publicity.

"If any member of a committee is absent for three consecutive meetings, unexcused by a majority vote of the committee, this fact shall be reported in writing to the senate by the chairman of the committee, whereupon said member shall stand suspended as a member of such committee unless excused by a two-thirds vote of the senate, and the president shall proceed to fill the vacancy. A record of such suspension shall be printed in the Journal," the rules provide.

Huge Cacti Get a Special Greenhouse

By United Press
SAN MARINO, Calif.—Two giant cacti from Arizona, received for the 15-acre cactus garden in the grounds of the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, are the subject of an unique experiment in building greenhouses.

The greenhouses are built around the plant, instead of placing the plant in the greenhouse.

The species sometimes attains a height of 60 feet, and in order to establish the plants during the rainy season, glass houses have been built around each to keep out excessive moisture which tends to rot the base of the plant.

William Hertrich, superintendent of the Huntington Botanical Gardens, hopes to acclimatize the strange cacti, which are seldom seen outside of a few groves in Arizona.

The cactus garden contains 25,000 specimen plants.

8,000 Acre Farm to Aid Relief Families

By United Press
JONESBORO, Ark.—An 8,000-acre plantation has been leased by the Arkansas Rehabilitation corporation to house 400 families now on relief.

Two hundred houses are on the tract and plans have been drawn to build 100 more within a few weeks. The farm is one of several in a state wide program to take families from relief rolls and give them a chance to become self-sustaining.

The families will be allowed to raise some cotton, but they will be required to raise their own hogs, chickens, gardens and such vegetables as they will need for their own use. The tract probably will be operated on a share-crop basis. About half the families will be taken from Mississippi and the remainder from Arkansas counties in which similar tracts are not available.
