In August, 1948:

Mrs. Helen Begley, owner of the recently-closed Eastland Hospital announced that the building would be re-opened as an apartment house. Mrs. Begley said she had sold part of the hospital equipment and planned to sell or store the rest of it.

Dr. J. H. Caton and Dr. Kenneth Cowan, who moved their offices to a new clinic on West Commerce Street, announced they would keep an emergency room open at all times. Other Eastland doctors were invited to use the room and it was announced that police and ambulance drivers would have access to the room when the clinic was closed.

The City was considering taking action to "clean up the filthy chicken yards inside the city limits", in response to numerous complaints received.

Some 63 students of the Children's Department of the First Methodist Church attended a party hosted by Mrs. Homer Smith, E. J. Turner, Ed F. Willman, L. E. Corbell, and Milton Day. Mr. Day showed pictures.

An extra 50 cents per month for three months was added to each sewer bill to raise money to pay for the new DDT sprayer purchased by the City.

"Casbah", featuring Peter Lorre, was an attraction at the Majestic. The theater also presented "Easter Parade" with Judy Garland and Fred Astaire.

A four-year-old Eastland girl was reported "up and around the house" after returning from Parkland Hospital in Dallas, where her case was diagnosed as "a very very mild case of polio."

Eastland residents were urged to "observe closely the reading habits of children and high school students". A study conducted by sociologists in St. Paul, Minn. had concluded that children in the "Average I.Q. bracket", that is, around 100" preferred to read comic books about Superman, Batman, and Captain Marvel. Those with "above average I. Q. ratings" preferred comic books about Walt Disney characters.

The editor's column contained this: "Formerly a crumpled automobile fender meant merely a trip to the garage where a new fender was quickly installed. It looks as though now a smashed fender would practically necessitate the rebuilding of the entire car."

11 Complete 'Y' Summer SCUBA Course

Eleven people received YMCA Certificates of Accomplishment following the qualification dive and written test of the Scuba Diving Course taught by Jimmy Kendrick, Jerry Stevens, and Mike Siebert.

Kendrick said that 26 hours of preliminary training at Eastland City Swimming Pool preceded the qualification dive at Scuba Point, Possum Kingdom Lake. The dive required each student to go down 50 feet, accompanied by two instructors. The written test covered formulas of algebra and safety rules, plus information concerning equipment and places.

Completing the course were Jimmy Nelson of Cisco; Mike O'Dell, Steve Key, Steve Lund, Bob Day, Bill Weems, Randy Boles, Jimmy Wright, Eugene Kitchens, Cheryl Stevens, and Joyce Kendrick, all of Eastland.

YMCA President James Wright said several have asked that the course be taught again next year.

J. L. Reid of Odessa recently visited here with his mother, Mrs. Birdie Reid and James, Mrs. Ida Hanna of Oklahoma City is presently visiting with them.

Rattlesnakes Are Program Topic For Lions Club

Rattlesnake Expert Bill Ransberger of Sweetwater explained how to find out who your friends really are for members of the Eastland Lions Club at their regular luncheon meeting Tuesday.

"When you get snakebit," he said, "you'll find out who you can depend on when you ask for assistance in extracting the venom from the bite, orally." A veteran handler and rattlesnake lecturer, Mr. Ransberger devoted most of time to explaining what first aid steps to take when bitten, and refuting many of the legends about snakes, during his talk at the White Elephant Restaurant meeting.

Jeff Glazner was program chairman and introduced Mr. Ransberger. President E. O. More presided, and a brief director's meeting followed.

Having been bitten five times, the Sweetwater man said that he has developed an allergy to the serum and therefore has been forced to stay away from the pits where he formerly handled the deadly snakes. He now lectures at Sweetwater, Coleman and Strawn.

Best first aid for snakebite: "Cut and suck," he said, emphasizing "No freezing, no tourniquets and definitely no alcoholic stimulants."

Guests present included Lewis Marvin of Duncanville, John Cunningham of Bryan, and Buddy Aaron and Mike Siebert, both of Eastland.

Directors discussed several projects which they have under consideration for the near future.

WASHINGTON

"As it looks from here"

OMAR BURLESON

Congressman
17th District

WASHINGTON, D. C. — It is an axiom that behind most every great man there has been a great woman. Behind some men there have been many. It does not matter. What does matter is that man has aspired to his highest potential because of a desire to please and to earn the affection and respect of women.

The rewards of these efforts have usually resulted in material possessions or in power through military might, which led to material possessions. After a long, long period, these possessions came to be measured by a substance known as gold. This mineral had absolutely no utilitarian value, it was extremely scarce and extremely beautiful. To acquire any quantity of it demanded high spirits, great energy, imagination, determination, courage and all the attributes that we assign to greatness in man.

Throughout time and in all societies, certain types of women were prized above others. To get the most highly prized woman one had to compete with most determined and courageous men. At first it was physical force, later brain power entered into the picture so that a combination of brain power and physical force was able to triumph over force alone.

Early man, whether he acquired more caves, more hides or killed more enemies, was above his fellow in the eyes of most desirable women. Eventually, these successes became to be measured quite incidentally in terms of gold. Where lay the power of this gold? Of what use was it? It was adored by women. Man has lost his blood for gold. He has expired on the desert and in the high mountains looking for it. But to those who succeeded, gold became the symbol of existence. So gold was homage of love. As such nothing in the world had higher value—though from a practical point of view it had none. It finally came about to be universally recognized that nothing was more valuable than gold. Gold would buy what the owner wanted, it was the magic medium. Unit values developed and it became the ultimately money. Until this time no Government had monetized it. Once it became the ultimate money, its desirability increased even more. It then came to represent the objectives of the greedy, the power hungry, the vengeful, the philanthropic. Even churches wanted gold.

Its base, however, still lay in its desirability, its beauty and its meaning for women. It continues to represent a meaning peculiar to itself. The gold wedding ring has been the universal symbol of love for thousands of years graciously accepted by all young women from maids to queens and eagerly offered by all men from peons to kings. Today gold has lost none of its romantic luster. To obtain it men continue to perpetrate dastardly crimes, rise to the most heroic heights and are led to the extreme of all emotions—hate, love, fear, glee. But men will accept token money as long as they know it is as good as gold. Once they doubt that, they will not accept any more. When a government's paper money is not backed by gold, it is not backed by anything. Trust is the foundation of all money. It is the belief that it will buy goods which are equal in value of the goods which were exchanged for the money in the first place. In earlier times a shoemaker might have traded a pair of shoes for a bushel of wheat. A farmer might have given 10 bushels of wheat for a mule or 10 mules for a house.

Clumsy it was. So a medium of exchange developed—gold and silver. Thus gold and silver were not a symbol of the wealth contained in a mule or a pair of shoes. It was the same wealth. It was wealth. Then came currency to eliminate the clumsiness of this solid money as exchange. Paper money is not wealth. It is a symbol of gold and silver which is wealth, which was exchanged for a mule, wheat or a pair of shoes. Those who took gold and silver did not need to trust any man. Those who take notes or symbols have to Patsy Moseley, Oiden 44 girl, had the grand champion tomatoes at the 4-H tomato show July 26. Her champion entry was the Nematex variety. The 4-H members grew three or more varieties and most agreed that the Nematex was their best tomatoes.

Red spider mites are causing some damage to tomato vines as well as other vegetables. Charley Marshall of Eastland said the spider mites attacked his tomato plants about the middle of July.

Spider mites are about 1-60 inch in size. They are a yellowish or reddish mite which sucks juices from the underside of leaves. They cause pale blotches on upper and lower surfaces of foliage. A little webbing is often present. Plants gradually lose vigor and die. Kelthane is the best insecticide to control spider mites. Tomatoes can be harvested as early as two days after the Kelthane is applied. The Marshalls are using Kelthane on their tomatoes. Charlie and his two sons are known as good tomato growers. Both boys, John and Charles, won champion ribbons at the 4-H tomato show.

Peanut growers should be on the alert for the lesser cornstalk borer. I examined a peanut field near Rising Star last week and found a large number of lesser cornstalk borers. These worms did much damage last year and cost the peanut farmers thousands of dollars.

The borer can be found by looking around the base of the peanut plant and just beneath the soil surface. Usually you will first see small silken tubes or webbing just below the soil surface. The borers can often be found in the silken tubes. The borers are slender and are about 3/4 inch long when full grown. They are light blue or green with brown bands around their bodies.

The borers feed principally on the pegs, pods, stems, and roots.

Peanuts should be sprayed as soon as full grown larvae are found in the soil. The three insecticides recommended for the control of this borer are Diazinon, Parathion, and DDT. They can be applied as granules or sprays. Apply granules in a 12-14 inch uniform band directly over row just prior to pegging. Work into the top few inches of soil immediately. For spray applications use two nozzles per row so that the lower stems and a 6-8 inch band of soil are covered on each side of the row. Repeat applications at 3-4 week intervals as needed.
