It's a Great Moment for an Epigram, Adolf

Some years back there was a play running on Broadway and then touring the smaller cities of the United States. It had a catchy line at the end of the first act, a line that became the play's title and became also a well-known by-phrase throughout the country.

Three men in this play, a famous baritone, a judge and a speakeasy proprietor, become the impromptu guardians for the night of a lovely, unsophisticated young woman, whose escort has left in a huff, and the baritone offers her sleeping quarters in his apartment. As the girl ascends the stairs, accepting the offer, the three men look at each other. The judge and the bartender turn accusingly to the baritone and ask in one voice:

"What are your intentions?"

Herr Hitler has finished the first act of his sudden drama of taking over Austria. A sudden coup, backed by a display of armed force at the border, put him in control of the Austrian cabinet. From that position he moved on to seek dominance of the military, and of Austria's fatherland "Front," the only legal political organization since 1934.

Already his influence has started an anti-Semitic campaign which will result in the persecution of thousands of Jews, both native of Austria and those who fled there to escape the German pogrom. Already Austria is being wheeled into the lineup of the Rome-Italy axis, ready to take her place in the mid-European totalitarian team.

It is considered a foregone conclusion that Austria will now become a "vassal state" of Germany, for until Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg capitulated to the Nazis, Austria had been independent of foreign domination since 976 A. D.—almost 1000 years.

Now England and France turn to Germany and with the utmost seriousness inquire:

"What are your intentions?"

And it all comes back, just as clearly! The baritone in the play turned to the bartender and the judge with a whole-hearted, enthusiastic smirk, and replied:

"Strictly dishonorable."

The play was a farce. You can write your own curtain lines for Herr Hitler.

The 1940 census will cost $50,000,000, showing that even the U. S. has big stakes in the numbers game.

Burglar Steals Wrong Size Shoes, Is Peeved

EL PASO.—A burglar entered a shoe store, took 200 pair of shoe strings and six pair of shoes, then left a note to the manager expressing dissatisfaction with the goods he took.

The store manager told detectives that he found a note on a display counter that read: "Next time have different shoes."

The shoes are specially made for persons with narrow feet and weak arches, the manager said.

G-Man Force of Philippines Getting Special Training

MANILA.—Modeled after the counterpart in Washington, the Philippine Commonwealth soon will have a G-man division to augment its present extensive law-enforcement agencies.

Much of the responsibility for preparing candidates for the new organization has rested with Capt. Thomas Dugan of the New York City police department. Borrowed from his friend, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the New York police officer arrived here last July to lay the groundwork of the Philippine model of J. Edgar Hoover's famous organization.

Thoroughness and efficiency have earned for Dugan in his seven months here the respect and admiration of Philippine officials. Undersecretary of Justice Jose P. Melencio, who will be in direct charge of the Division of Investigation, as the G-men's corps is technically known, praised the work Dugan has accomplished.

Dugan is reluctant to talk about his work. When an interview was sought, he said:

"I have dealt with newspaper men for 24 years in New York, but I have never talked about my duties. I refuse to break that record now."

There are 48 embryo Filipino G-men receiving daily training from Dugan and other qualified instructors in law enforcement. Thirty-four of the hand-picked young men are lawyers. The training they are receiving before being assigned to duty includes the handling of firearms, jiu-jitsu, crime detection, identification, etc.

Besides his activities in aiding the Philippines to establish an organization of expert criminologists, the New York police officer has assisted Philippine state police and the Manila secret service in solving several baffling crimes.

Dugan was instrumental in tracking down the last of the gangsters involved in the murder of Percy A. Hill, pioneer American plantation owner of Nueva Ecija province.

As a starter, the G-men being trained by Dugan have several unsolved killings to work on, including the murder of Julio Nalundasan, well-known politician, who was slain in 1925. The division is not yet working at full swing, pending completion of the organization.

The law creating the G-man division was enacted in 1936, and formation of the organization began after Dugan arrived in Manila in July of last year. The division aims to become as efficient as its counterpart in the United States. Selection of men was carried out with extreme care and the qualifications for acceptance were patterned after those of the Hoover bureau.

Dugan's leave from his New York post expires July 18. It is not known yet if President Quezon will seek to have his leave of absence extended.

Some think he wouldn't get to first base, but others think he might win in a walk.

FORT WORTH—Grace, ease and degree of perfection, but not the clothes the dancers wear, will count most when square dancers line up for a contest, March 15, as a feature of Old-Time Cowboy Day at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show.

That was announced by John M. Hendrix and R. O. Hagood, dance committee chairman, as they completed rules for the contest today.

Hendrix said several entries have been made and many inquiries have been received concerning the square dance contest.

The contest will be limited to ten sets, each composed of four women and four men. The entries for the contest will close on March 10, when ten sets will have been accepted for entrance in the contest.

Each set should provide its own caller where possible. Fiddle, guitar and banjo music will be furnished.

the door and flung herself face down on the couch, sobbing out her despair at the desolation her perverse anger had wrought for her. She had meant to be so reasonable and adult, and she had behaved like a spoiled brat, cutting off her own nose to spite her face.

She had lain for a half hour or so when the telephone rang shrilly beside her. Constance had only to reach to a table at her elbow to pick up the receiver.

"The County Airpor, is calling Miss Constance Maidwell," a voice said.

"This is Miss Maidwell," Constance choked.

"Just a minute, Miss Maidwell. Here's your party, sir," the voice said again.

Then Derek spoke, hurriedly, in lowered tones: "Darling, you did wait! I felt sure you would."

Constance swallowed twice and said, "Of course, Derek. . . Of course I waited."

"It's all been utterly incredible," Derek rushed on. "Connie, it doesn't seem possible that I have to go without seeing you again. I—you are there, aren't you, darling?"

"Yes," Constance breathed.

"Yes, Derek, I'm here."

"What must you have been thinking all this time? But it's amazing how many things turned up that we simply had to attend to. . . You do understand, don't you?"

"Yes, of course," Constance said. "Of course I understand. That sounded reasonable. She must send him off happy and pleased with her."

"I can't begin to explain now. We're taking off in a minute. But I'll be sending for you in a week or so. Aid in the meantime, I want you to take a real vacation, Connie. I remember you told me you had saved a good deal; but if you need money, you must promise to let me know at once. . . Yes, Miss Thorvald, I'm coming at once. . . It's a promise, then? You're to—oh, damn! Over the wire came the roar of a powerful motor. "Goodbye, darling!"

"The receiver clicked and went dead."

Constance stood for a moment staring into the silent instrument. Then she laughed a little wildly. A good rest!

She had just remembered the lone ten-dollar bill in her bag at home—the bag she was to have carried on her honeymoon.

Alone in her own rooms that afternoon, Constance was compelled to give some serious thought to the problem presented by that lone ten-dollar bill.

The rent for her apartment was paid until the end of the month. She was not, she reflected with faint irony, likely to be in serious need of clothes for some time. But there was the question of food, carfare, and laundry. . . Ten dollars would not go far. She must find some work again until—until Derek had arranged something. . . "A week or so," Derek had said.

The logical step, of course, would be to go back to the Museum. She had stayed there, getting her desk ready for her successor till late last week; and when she left, no successor had appeared, not even a passably eligible candidate. Going back would be a bitter pill after her high-hearted leave-taking, but—

Walking rapidly to get to the Museum before closing time, she framed airy uncommunicative answers to the barrage of friendly banter that she knew would greet her when she asked to be reinstated.

She managed to carry it off with just the light touch she had striven for:

Yes, they had decided to postpone the wedding for a few weeks. . . Of course the girls had heard about the marvelous opportunity that had come to Derek. . . Yes, the Hildegard Thorvald. . . "Jealous? My dear, have you seen her? Who wouldn't be? But of course I'll have to get used to that if Derek will go on painting pretty women. . . Of course I'm going to be lonely with nothing to do but count my new stockings and step-ins. That's why I thought—if you needed someone to fill in for a week or so—"

But when Miss Taft, Constance's superior, and she were alone, Miss Taft said regretfully, "Sorry, Constance. The new girl checks in tomorrow—God help us! . . . Now if you are to be here in a month or six weeks, I expect another vacancy then."

"Thanks just the same," Constance smiled with what she hoped was just the casual indifference of one who, after all, had merely been toying with the idea of going back to work—"After all, I suppose, what I ought to do is to take a few weeks of complete rest as Derek begged me to do. I just thought—if you needed someone to mark time—"

She thought, Well, I did put on a good act—but what, I'd like to know, am I going to use for money?

Adolf's Marshal Rates a Baton By Blosser

As though to make sure Nazi soldiers realize his high ranking, Hermann Goering ostentatiously holds aloft his newly-awarded Field Marshal's baton as he is pictured above reviewing troops in Berlin. Chancellor Hitler gave the robust Goering the baton after the recent army purge, making him the only active field marshal in Germany.

held state and Federal offices before and during the war and had afterward entered the Confederate service.

Q. When and by whom was an effort made to establish the "Republic of the Rio Grande?"

A. During the summer of 1839 a number of restless Texans under leadership of Cols. S. W. Jordan, Reuben Ross and Mexicans led by General Antonio Canalis met at Llanitan on the west side of the Neches, proclaimed the "Republic of the Rio Grande" and effected a military organization of 180 Texans and about 600 Mexicans to invade and conquer the territory bordering both sides of the Rio Grande. They called themselves "Republicans," as opposed to the "Centralists" of Mexico.

Q. What victories and defeats did the forces of the self-styled "Republic of the Rio Grande" have on their first invasion of Mexico?

A. They captured Guerrero, Alcontra, Mier and other Mexican towns bordering the Rio Grande with little resistance and laid brief siege to Matamoros, where dissen-

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's chances for the presidency in 1940 seem to be about as good as those of anyone else.

That statement means nothing at all except that no presidential possibility can be said at this time to be nearer the goal than any other, that all nags are still at the post and that no one can yet forecast weather conditions or the state of the track.

The big blowout organized here in McNutt's honor by Senator Sherman Minton and other Democratic admirers from Indiana, although razed by most commentators and largely boycotted by the administration, did give the commissioner to the Philippines a huge amount of publicity and did let the country know that McNutt was a candidate.

Otherwise there is no discernible effect. There's always a legend that it's dangerous to start a presidential boom at such an early stage. But it would be difficult to prove that any harm has been done to the McNutt candidacy. Troubles and triumphs of 1940 candidates are in the future.

McNutt has proved himself an able practitioner in party politics and war-veteran politics. As governor of Indiana he was more efficient than most governors and built a very strong Democratic machine.

His chief handicaps are the coolness of Farley and Roosevelt toward him, antagonism from labor ranks and widespread opinion among his critics that he would be a dangerously ruthless man to have on top if the nation were

Sport Glances. . . . By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON Sports Editor, NEA Service

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Looking back, Col. Jacob Ruppert asserts that he must have been looney to have invested $225,000 in the New York American League franchise of 1915. That represented only half of the purchase price. Capt. Til Huggins, whom the brewer met for the first time at dinner the night before, put up an equal amount.

As Ruppert says, the Yankees had no park, concessions, nor ball players. They were at the mercy of National League clubs as well as those of their own circuit.

But four years after making what he suspected was a foolish investment, Ruppert spent $125,000 for one athlete—George Herman Ruth, and once more had an idea that he was being trimmed.

Everybody knows how that deal turned out, for Babe Ruth made the public forget the Chicago Black Sox of 1915-20, made Yankee Stadium possible, and established the present Yankee dynasty.

The late Miller Huggins was responsible for the Ruth transaction. He was the first to realize the possibilities of the big boy's home run bat.

WHEN Ruth clicked, Huggins went completely sea-saw, Ruppert explains. He wanted to buy everybody in sight—and just about did. The Yankees paid Harry Frazee, then of the Boston Red Sox $600,000 for players alone. From the Hub they took Earl Mays, Herb Pennock, Waite Hoyt, Joe Bush, Wally Schang and Joe Dugan.

Harry Sparrow, then Yankee secretary, died in 1929. Huggins was the organization's secretary for while, but quickly discovered that he was not fitted for it and that he didn't have the time.

It was Frazee who suggested Ed. G. Barrow. Frazee was seeking to get out of baseball, and sought a spot for one whom he considered the most competent of baseball men. So Ed. Barrow came to the Yankees as general manager along with the famous stars he guided at Fenway Park.

Barrow, a huge man, had played, scouted, managed, and been a league president.

Ruppert had implicit faith in him, and placed all his baseball affairs in his hands. They remain there today.

TO Barrow, more than any other one man, belongs the bulk of the credit for the present Yankee organization.

He has paid fabulous sums for minor league luminaries, and seldom has been wrong.

Oddly enough, it was Barrow, whose present position Ruth made possible, who kept the old home run king from managing the Yankees. He didn't believe that Ruth would do as a baseball guide, told Ruppert so, and the colonel stood up his judgment.

So, when Bob Shawkey was found unsatisfactory following the passing of Hugg's in 1929, Joe McCarthy just fired by the Yankees, then of the Boston Red Sox was right again. In seven years under McCarthy, the Yankees have won three world championships and four times finished second.

Barrow's organization gets the players, and McCarthy gets the most out of them, and the Yankees roll on.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

Fort of Three Flags Will Be Restored

NEW ORLEANS—An old fort, built to protect New Orleans from an invasion that never came, will be rebuilt—to protect the city's legends, history and beauty. Called Spanish Fort because all that is known of its history is that Spaniards constructed it, the crumbling, weed-covered structure now guards only trim sailboats and chugging tugs on peaceful Lake Ponchartraine.

The property, after many years of negotiations, has become a city park. The park board appointed a committee, headed by A. G. Moffat, to restore the fort as it was about 1810. "We are in the midst of research," Moffat said. "We are studying old maps, plans and accounts in order to determine as nearly as possible how the fort looked when it was constructed in brick."

Spanish Fort, built by the French, rebuilt by the Spanish and strengthened by the United States, came into the hands of the United States officially in 1803. According to historical data collected, the present ruins are those of the rebuilt structure of 1808. Though never the site of a military engagement, according to historical records, the fort was garrisoned on several occasions during conflicts about the city. Gen. Andrew Jackson landed there when he came to New Orleans during the War of 1812.

To Make Monument Of Courthouse In Which "Kid" Fought

LINCOLN, N. M.—The two-story adobe courthouse in this town which once echoed with gun shots from the Southwest's most spectacular bad man, Billy the Kid, may become a national monument. A WPA allotment of $8,657 had been approved by President Roosevelt for the restoration and repair of the old Lincoln County courthouse. The New Mexico legislature has asked the federal government to have the building designated as a national monument.

It was in this dusty building that the fair-haired Billy the Kid, who killed 20 men before he was 20 years old, was kept prisoner. This was the historic structure from which the "Kid" escaped after killing Deputies J. W. Bell and Robert W. Ollinger shortly before his own death at the hands of Sheriff Pat Garrett. Today tourists from around the nation tip-toe up the outside wooden stairway and peer into the locked windows at the bullet holes made by the shots fired by Billy in 1881.

He was being held in the upstairs room. There he grabbed the gun of his hated enemy, Ollinger, from his friend and captor, Bell. He killed Bell. With the same shotgun he fired from the top of the outside stairway at Ollinger, who was crossing the street, returning to the courthouse.

Ollinger was returning to the job of guarding Billy and taunting him for his escapades and killings. One blast from the shotgun and Ollinger lay dead in the dusty street.

Down these outside steps hobbled Billy. He commanded the blacksmith across the street to file off his leg irons. He leaped on a horse and escaped. Three months later he was killed by sheriff Garrett.

NEW TIPS FROM READERS

AMARILLO, Texas.—The Amarillo News-Globe has adopted a plan for getting its readers interested in tipping the paper off on news events. Three prizes, one of $5 and two of $2 are offered each week. The first prize was won by Mrs. Ira M. Barrington who phoned the paper that a cat had been stranded atop a telephone pole for 18 hours.

suicide club is too realistic. All went well until an 18-foot reptile made a dash for a member who was swimming some 20 yards from the jetty. The member won out by a few inches but the club abolished its constitution and disbanded.

Sportsmen Raise Fund to Salvage The Duck Factory

NEW YORK — Prominent businessmen and sportsmen, representatives of thousand of American duck hunters, meet at Chicago on March 11 to launch the first international waterfowl restoration movement aimed at preserving the great Canadian "duck factory," according to the More Game Birds Foundation, sponsor of the movement. Although organized only last year as "Ducks Unlimited, Inc.," a non-profit membership corporation, the organization plans to begin field work next spring in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba with a substantial fund already subscribed by sportsmen throughout the United States.

"The Ducks Unlimited program calls for expansion into the prairie provinces, which contain the last remaining most important duck-breeding grounds on the continent, of the system of waterfowl refuges on which over $20,000,000 of federal funds have been spent in recent years. "Federal funds, however, cannot be expended for refuges in Canada. Hence, American duck hunters are undertaking to finance this program themselves."
