LONDON, Mar. 16.—The league of nations in a session today rejected Adolfer's demand that his proposed European peace agreement be considered if Germany attend consideration of his occupation of the Rhineland...

HOUSTON, March 16.—"Heirs of the 'billion-dollar Buchanan estate' must wait another 24 hours before they may hear details of the fortune from Lorenzo Buchanan, 76, self-styled 'executive' District Judge Ewing Boyd today.

The excitement over the estate was caused among 3,396 heirs over the world. Several years ago when Lorenzo Buchanan announced the estate whose assets included $850,000,000 in cash, was ready for division. Since then it has not expanded on that statement.

DELEGATIONS TOLD HIGHWAY FUNDS GONE

AUSTIN, March 16.—A near record number of highway delegations, including one from Eastland county, received little encouragement today on their request for early road construction.

State Highway Commissioner John Wood opened a two-day hearing with a statement no money is available for early construction.

"We have no state funds to put anywhere today, except in cases of emergency. If we are going to carry out the program we started we must not get in the red," Wood told representatives of more than 30 counties.

The program, Wood explained, is the joint state-federal plan. Nearly $7,000,000 in contracts will be let this month, but all projects have been pending from six to 12 months. Both the state and nation contributed $7,750,000 in the last year for grade separation, highway and lateral road building.

Panhandle Skies Are Clear After Duster

AMARILLO, March 16.—Panhandle skies were clear today following one of the worst dusters in years which swept the area last night.

Great clouds of dust, stirred by a 40-mile wind, reduced visibility to nearly zero early Sunday evening. Around midnight the winds subsided. Little crop damage was done.

Storms Feared in The Dust Bowl

BOISE CITY, Okla.—Dust bowl farmers, recently hopeful of the first good growing season in five years, today face another series of devastating dust storms such as turned this area into a desert last year.

Black, choking clouds of dust are being whipped across thousands of miles of territory in the Oklahoma panhandle, southeastern Colorado, southwestern Kansas, northeastern New Mexico and the Texas panhandle.

In Beaver County, Okla., much of the wheat has been blown out. The same is true to a great extent in Cimarron and Texas counties.

Boise City, in the heart of Cimarron County, is entrenching its dust for another battle with the dust.

Last year the prairie winds raised dust storms which drove many farmers out of the country. Men and livestock sickened and died, yet many clung to their ranches, resolved to defy the elements.

This winter several snows fell, and some of the heaviest rains in years. During midwinter ranchers had high hopes for enough rain and snow to stop the storms. Planting proceeded rapidly in the late fall.

Storms have begun sweeping the high plains with a regularity reminiscent of last year when the sun was not seen for weeks because of dust clouds.

A snow, striking into a dust cloud at Garden City, Kansas, brought on a shower of mud.

While they still have hopes of heavy rains, because of snows in the mountains, the dust bowl farmers are losing their hard-won confidence that this year, at last, would see at least a partial cessation of the dust scourge.

Record Sales of Bible are Shown

LONDON.—Record sales of the Bible in 1935 are announced by the British and Foreign Bible Society.

"The most striking advance," said a member of the staff, "appears to be in countries where there is the greatest unrest. In webs Germany, for instance, the sales of our society alone for 1934-35 rose to 153,483, an increase of 20 per cent on the previous year. In Spain sales have risen since the revolution in 1934, the increase in 1934-35 being about 20,000. In Italy the last report showed a decrease.

"We have been supplying Ethiopian and Italian soldiers with Bibles. Five thousand Bibles in different languages were distributed in Ethiopia. Bibles for soldiers were given out at Port Said, but the Italian authorities objected, and we had to stop the supply.

The biggest advance has been in China, where sales have risen 400,000 to 4,296,495. The growth of literacy largely is responsible."

How We Like To Fall For a Good Scare

Once upon a time, in the dark days of the Revolutionary War, a skinny little American army was advancing on a strong British outpost. The Americans were outnumbered and had no chance at all, unless they could put over a good scare.

So they sent an honest countryman ahead. He reached the British camp at the double, rolling his eyes and ranting heavily, and announced that limitless numbers of well-fed American soldiers were advancing to overwhelm the British.

The hirelings of King George took him at his word and decamped hastily, and the Americans walked in and took possession of a fort they never could have won if they had had to fight for it.

Just what happened to the honest countryman is not known but his descendants seem to have collared nice jobs as radio announcers and news correspondents. They are the people who have to make a dramatic story out of everything.

If somebody's wood lot burns, they make a terrible forest fire out of it; if a rain strikes Hicksville, they turn it into a devastating cloudburst. They run a temperature at the drop of a hat.

All this is called to mind by some recent happenings in Evansville, Ind.

Evansville sits on the bank of the Ohio river, and a short time ago that river had a good deal of ice in it. And the first thing anybody knew, the nation was being told that this ice jam was wrappings up a fine flood for immediate delivery to Evansville.

A radio commentator spoke of a 40-foot wall of water that was about to break on the city. Another radioer got dramatic and breathless about an impending disaster. An excitable news correspondent raised the height of the wall to 48 feet.

Red Cross disaster experts rushed to the scene prepared to set up concentration camps for no fewer than 10,000 refugees.

Everyone, in fact, got all worked up except the people of Evansville. They have lived beside their river for a long time, and they know just about what it can and cannot do to them.

They strolled down to watch the ice gorge go out, which it did quite peaceably; some of them went out into the surrounding lowlands on a vain hunt for flood victims, of which there were none; and then everybody went home, feeling as if someone had let them down rather badly.

In other words, it was all a false alarm, stirred up by excitable folk who never learned the first lesson of a reporter—to keep cool and find out exactly what is happening before leaping for the telephone. And in some way we seem to be letting ourselves in for a good deal of this sort of thing these days.

We have to make things exciting. We insist on having breathless drama served up to us, morning, noon and night. The stratagem that licked the British seems to have ticked, too.

"European Statesmen Work for Peace"

British Studying Marital Rifts

LONDON.—Five thousand marriages a year are expected to be saved from ruin by "reconciliation agencies" likely to be set up in Britain soon. A Home Office Departmental Committee has completed a report that is designed to revolutionize the procedure of dealing with matrimonial disputes. There is, it is said, complete agreement among the committee members as to the necessity for preliminary and informal investigation into applications for separation orders. Witnesses after witness urged the necessity of measures for bringing about reconciliations between quarreling husbands and wives. There was recognition of the fact that, in some cases, it might not be desirable to persuade the parties to continue living together, but the prevailing view was that in the great majority of cases threatened homes and the happiness of thousands of families might be preserved. The new "reconciliation agencies" probably will work under supervision of magistrates. More than 10,000 separation orders are made every year in Britain and some social workers are convinced that it may be possible to halve this number if a sympathetic and determined effort is made. The underlying principle of the recommendations will be that no application for a separation order should be heard in court until some attempt has been made to consult the parties and smooth out the differences. Then, when a case does come to court, it is proposed that it shall be heard separately from ordinary police court charges. Some members of the committee favor special courts, which would sit in private. Another recommendation will be for the establishment of medical and psychological panels to work in association with the magistrates' courts.

The Yale Daily News Marks Its 58th Year

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The Yale Daily News, known as the "Oldest College Daily," is celebrating its 58th year with a special edition. Beginning in 1878 as a small, four-page, two-column paper, it suffered criticisms from faculty members as well as New York newspapers, all of which Editor Herbert W. Brown, '78, answered in his columns, which were "open to free discussion on all subjects consistent with decorum and morality."

FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE—SMOKE CAMELS

L'AIGLON, IN CHICAGO, RENOWNED FOR ITS CONTINENTAL CHARM AND CUISINE. In this famous and delightful place, known for years to connoisseurs, Camel cigarettes are a popular favorite with diners. "Teddy," (left) genial host to the lively crowd you see in the picture above, says: "We find our patrons know not only good cooking, they know good tobacco. Camels are the most popular cigarette among L'Aiglon guests."

150-POUND DYNAMO! Tommy Bridges, of the World Champion Tigers, says: "Ball players have to watch digestion. I find Camels a real aid in helping digestion. They set me right!"

WIZARD ON SKIS, Sig Buchmayr, says: "It seems to me that after good food there's nothing like smoking a Camel to aid digestion and build up a fine feeling of well-being."

STEEPLEJACK JOE BECK: "Many a time my stomach tightens in a high spot—but you wouldn't know it from the hearty way I eat. I'm very careful about keeping good digestion—I smoke Camels. They help to stimulate my digestion."

POLARIS, THE POLE STAR, IS TRUE NORTH ONLY TWICE EACH DAY! (WHEN IT IS DIRECTLY ABOVE, AND DIRECTLY BELOW, THE POINT OF TRUE NORTH)

POLARIS is not exactly over the North Pole. Therefore, as we observe it for a period of 24 hours, it makes a small circle in the heavens. Only twice a day, then, when it is directly above, or directly below, the North Pole of the sky, does it actually lie in the direction of true north.

Smoking Camels eases tension—stimulates digestion—and fosters a feeling of well-being! . . .

Again and again, we make up for lost time by eating in a hurry. Digestion must meet the strain. How fortunate that smoking Camels during and after meals definitely stimulates digestion and helps to ward off the effects of our hurried, nerve-wracking life—by aiding and restoring the natural flow of the digestive fluids. Today, the pleasure of smoking Camels is being everywhere recognized as a comforting and healthful part of the art of dining. Camels are incomparably mild. They never get on your nerves or tire your taste. Enjoy Camels for their matchless blend of costlier tobaccos—for their energizing "lift"—for the welcome feeling of well-being they bring you. Camels set you right!

Gorgeous

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

Tears blinded her, and she brushed them back.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store.

CHAPTER V
Toby Ryan, stepping out of the elevator on the first floor of Bergman's department store, had turned to the left instead of the right, it is possible that none of the things that happened that afternoon would have taken place.

Toby could have reached the jewelry department either way. The distance was exactly the same.

By turning to the right she passed the silverware counters. She was carrying the four wrist watches in her hand.

He was smiling good-naturedly. Toby couldn't very well brush past him. She said, "I didn't catch the watches."

Mr. Pharis picked up the tiny "debutante special." "How much is this one?" he asked.

"Seventy-nine fifty," Mr. Pharis nodded.
Maurine Ball, two counters beyond, glanced up just then. Maurine saw Mr. Pharis with his head bent slightly and Toby listening, nodding in agreement.

While the first experiment with the instruments developed to date are being made in locating gold deposits, it is expected that eventually the same principles can be applied in the search for copper, iron and other mineral deposits.

Angels Camp, one of the early gold centers of California, is being tested with the radio-gold finding instruments and in the end it is expected that all of the old gold regions of California will be rechecked by this latest development for any pockets or veins of gold that the 49'ers and successors overlooked.

Toby turned, and instantly remembered. It was the woman in the leopard coat—the one who had bought the compact and then discovered she lacked money to pay for it.

The woman looked up and recognized Toby. The girl smiled and hurried forward. "You've come for your package, haven't you?" Toby said. "It's right here. I'll get it."

She turned to the wrapping desk and was back with the package. The woman opened her purse and took out a bill. "While I'm here," she said, "I believe I'll look at that other compact you showed me—the hammered silver one. I think perhaps I'd like to have both of them."

"Certainly."
Toby got out the tray of compacts and the woman decided to take the silver one. Waiting for her package to be wrapped and to receive her change, she said, "I've seen some shopping to do next week—gifts for some nieces of mine. You've been so nice about this, I think I'd like to have you wait on me."

"I'll be glad to," Toby told her. She turned to her next customer. Not once did Toby think of the brown-covered book she had left lying on the counter, or of the watches in their case.

For 20 minutes more she was busy. Then she was surprised by a touch on her arm. Miss Burrows, the buyer, asked, "Miss Ryan, will you come with me to Mr. Henderson's office. Right away, please."

"Why—yes."
Toby could see that something was wrong. She stepped out into the aisle beside Miss Burrows and said anxiously, "What is it? Has anything happened?"

"I'd rather not say anything until we're upstairs."
Toby stepped into a moment later on a hallway that was carpeted. They were entering a door marked "Private."

Toby had never been in this office before. A middle-aged man with a large chin and wearing rimmed spectacles sat at a large, highly-polished desk. Miss Burrows stepped forward. She said, "This is the girl, Mr. Henderson. Her name is Toby Ryan."

The man at the desk cleared his throat. "Won't you—ah—sit down," he said, motioning toward chairs. He went on, looking at watches were taken to the advertising department. It seems—"

have you to say for yourself?" Miss Burrows cut in. "I haven't discussed it with her. I didn't want others listening."

"We'll find out soon enough if you don't," Toby said. "What do you do with the watch?"

"Toby's blue-gray eyes widened. "What do you mean?" she asked. Miss Burrows went on briskly, "I'm warning you that it will be better for you to tell the truth. You know you could be arrested for this."

"But, Miss Burrows, I don't know what you're talking about!" Panic edged the girl's words. "Do you deny," the older woman asked sharply, "that you went to the advertising department for the four watches sketched for Saturday's advertisement?"

"No, of course not—"
"Do you deny that you received the watches from Mr. Keller?" "No."
"Then why didn't you return them to the case?" "But I did!"
"Are all of them?" "Yes."

"There are three watches in the case," Miss Burrows said. "The fourth—and most valuable—is not there."

"But, Miss Burrows, I did put all of them in the case. All four of them. It must be there!"
The brown-covered book lay on the desk. Miss Burrows picked it up. "If you returned the watches, why didn't you sign for them?" she asked.

"But I did—" Toby began, then suddenly stopped. She remembered she hadn't signed the book. She had meant to—and then she had gone to wait on the woman in the leopard coat instead.

Mr. Henderson was flipping back the pages of the notebook. He held it up, opened to the last page on which there was an entry. "There is no signature," he said, "except the one showing that the watches were taken to the advertising department. It seems—"

THERE was a knock at the door and Henderson called out, "Come in!"

A man in a blue suit, wearing a felt hat, entered. He pulled off the hat rather awkwardly as he crossed to Henderson's desk and laid something down. It was a tiny, diamond-studded wrist watch.

"We found it," the man drawled, "in her locker."
Toby did not understand what he meant for a moment. She looked up to face three pairs of eyes staring at her, three faces, grimly accusing. Suddenly the girl threw up one hand.

"It isn't true!" she cried. "I can't be. I didn't take the watch and I don't know anything about it! I tell you I didn't take it!"

Her head dropped forward and she covered her face with both hands. Sobbing she said, "The cashier will give you your check. It's an hour before closing time, but you needn't go back to the department. Since the watch has been returned we won't go any further with the matter—"

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE SEA Service Staff Writer

HAVE you tried the new fruit and meat combinations? I don't mean just certain fruit sauces with meats, but rather the use of fresh, dried and canned fruits with meats in cooked dishes. Sometimes the juice is used to give piquant flavor. Again the whole fruit is drained from its juice and broiled or grilled and used as a border. Sometimes the fruit is chopped and combined with the meat in a loaf or a casserole.

They're good for you—these dishes. The acid of the fruit acts upon the fat particles of the meat, breaking them up and making them easier for the system to assimilate. The fruit mineral salts are valuable in maintaining the balance of a meal rich in protein.

Frenched pork tenderloin with apricots is akin to more interesting. Then there are lamb chops with raisins, veal and raisin loaf with bananas, hamburger steak with broiled bananas and beef roll with apricots. Don't they sound good?

Baked or grilled, bananas, always in the market, are good served with almost any kind of meat and are a decided help in adding variety to everyday meals.

The simplest way to use whole fruits of any kind—bananas, apricots or slices of pineapple—is to dip them in melted butter or salad oil, then in seasoned flour and broil under a clear flame.

Planked Hamburg Steak
One-pound round steak, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon white pepper, 1-2 cup dried apricots, 1

Monday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Baked apples, cereal cooked with cream, fried cornmeal mush, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Fish roll sandwiches, cabbage and carrot salad, rolled oats cookies, canned cherries, milk, tea.

DINNER: Planked hamburger steak, asparagus salad, Spanish cream, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

Scrub apricots well and soak several hours in warm water to cover. Put meat and apricots through fine knife of food chopper. Add salt, pepper, bread crumbs and egg and mix thoroughly. Pack into a buttered pie dish and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until brown on top and bottom. It will take about twenty-five minutes. Reduce heat and let stand five minutes. Slide from pie dish to hot platter and surround with a border of mashed potatoes. Add an outside border of buttered diced carrots or finely chopped buttered spinach and serve at once.

Or try this. Rub through a sieve, season lightly with brown sugar and a dash of cloves and spread this puree on thin slices of baked or boiled ham. Roll up the slices and fasten with toothpicks. Dip rolls in slightly beaten egg and roll in fine dried bread crumbs. Brush with melted butter and brown quickly in a hot oven (425 degrees F.). Serve at once with twice baked sweet potatoes.
