Religions Must Unite To Defeat Unbelief

There was a sturdy dose of common sense in President Roosevelt's appeal to all religious sects and denominations for a united front in a war on unbelief.

Things that have happened in Europe recently—outbursts of religious intolerance that seem to carry us back to the Middle Ages—have emphasized the sharp differences among the various forms of belief.

The human race can be divided into two groups. In one there are the people who look on the life that we have here as a preparation for something greater and better; people who believe that there is a higher court than any on earth and a vaster destiny for struggling man than any which this workaday world affords.

In the other, there are the people who look on that sort of thing as sheer moonshine and see in the grave the final, pitiless answer to all the blind appeals and hopeful dreams of the heart of man.

Never before in all human history has the second group been as numerous or as cocksure as it is today.

You can hear it at work in Russia, denouncing religion as a kind of narcotic which must be abolished if the race is to progress. You can hear it in your own country, helping to shape the arts, pointing the path for theories of science and—incidentally—thinning the congregations in church, in cathedral and in synagogue.

The cleavage between these groups is deeper and more fundamental than that between any other of the economic or political divisions which split the race.

In the course of time the material problems of today will be solved. In one way or another we shall find ways to provide everyone with enough to eat and enough to wear, with a workable guarantee of decent health, with reasonable security for age, with freedom from the fear of unemployment and want.

But when all that has been done, the oldest of problems will remain. Each individual still will have to ask himself: What am I here for, and where am I going? Is my grave to be the end of everything, or the beginning? When I say goodbye forever or only for a while?

Different religious groups answer these questions in different ways; but they do at least have answers for them, and for that reason they all are, basically, in the same camp.

The most foolish thing we can do today is to permit rivalry and hatred among the subdivisions of that camp. We need all our energy for the struggle with the other camp.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Buzzard Roost is an unusual name for a power project and even more extraordinary are a couple of other side phases to the recent circuit court appeals decision in the Buzzard Roost case, which held that power plant financing by PWA loan grants was perfectly constitutional.

JUDGE PARKER ruled that the PWA act under which loan grants were made was constitutional, that the action of Secretary Ickes in making the loan grant was a valid exercise of power, and that no legal right of the Duke company was infringed by Greenwood county's plans.

Copies of his opinion, concurred in by Judge Elliott Northcott, have just been received in Washington and many who recalled Parker's local reputation as a "reactionary" judge are astonished by its liberal interpretations.

THE line which said Congress wasn't limited to powers specifically granted it by the Constitution is cited by those who say it would have been better for the New Deal had Senate liberals in the Hoover administration permitted Parker to go on the bench instead of turning him down and accepting Hoover's substitute, Owen J. Roberts, who had been rated as a liberal.

Every attempt to bar such competition by cities has been defeated by the supreme court, it is said. On the other hand, practically every case involving utility rates has ended in victory for the private companies and defeat for the public.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICE

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, March 15.

The Golden Text is: "Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all time increase" (Proverbs 3:9).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thy throne is established of old; thou art from everlasting" (Psalms 93:2).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay. Truth, Life, and Love are substance, as the Scriptures use this word in Hebrews: 'The substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen'" (page 469).

Shakespeare Hasn't Enough Humor For Roumanian Peasants

By United Press. TEMESVAR, Roumania, March 14.—William Shakespeare had better keep away from this section unless he puts more laughs in his plays.

A peasant audience interrupted a performance of King Lear "because there was nothing to laugh at." The stage manager, having a brilliant idea, sent a jester before the curtain to appear as Shakespeare and explain the play.

"You are a crook to write words which do not give good laughs for our good money," the peasants shouted at him. He left the stage hurriedly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Text: Luke 11:1-13 International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 15.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

JESUS, by precept and example, laid profound emphasis upon prayer. What did Jesus mean by prayer? It could not have been merely the repetition of petitions and the saying of formal words, because we are told in one place that, at a time when he was facing days of unusual demands upon His strength, He went into the mountains and continued all night in prayer to God.

That night of prayer must have been a night of rest and relaxation and meditation. The yearning of His heart, and the sense of His deep dependence upon God the Father, no doubt found expression in spoken words, but a whole night of such expression would have been far from peaceful, and we must think of that long period of prayer as a time of the outgoing of His soul to God in ways that could not be expressed in words.

Similarly, Jesus laid the great stress in prayer upon its private exercise. Jesus was not to pray to be seen by their fellowmen, but the true prayer was the prayer in secret where a man was alone with God.

IT is instructive, however, to remember that Jesus did not confine all emphasis to prayer in secret and prayer that never finds any full expression in words. He has in very definite form set for us the model of all praying in what we call "the Lord's Prayer."

The disciples evidently found the need of some form of expression in which they could put their aspirations. Disciples of later generations have felt of this same need. There are some who do not find exact forms and rituals exact forms and rituals.

There is an extreme view one that seems to ignore governing of other hearts, sort of yearning that has its satisfaction in rituals in books of common prayer, the sort of yearning that intelligent disciples appeared had when they came to Jesus with the request that he give them the Lord's Prayer.

THE Lord's Prayer, however, should not be regarded simply as a form. What Jesus was giving His disciples was a manner of prayer and not merely an exercise in prayer. The prayer contains the principles of prayer.

There is, first of all, uplift of the soul in adoration and devotion, all true prayer is a ship. There is the linking of the soul with the plans and the will of God. "The kingdom come"; all true prayer is a sionate desire to know and the will of God.

There is a linking of prayer with the common places of daily life—"give us our bread." There is an expression in prayer of the true relationship of men to his fellows.

The prayer for God's will and forgiveness is a contingent on man's good toward his fellows and his forgiveness of those who sin against him. There is prayer for correctness of form and perfection of character. "Lead us not into temptation; Thou art not into temptation of the Lord's Prayer."

There is a linking of prayer with the common places of daily life—"give us our bread." There is an expression in prayer of the true relationship of men to his fellows.

There'll be more as the month rolls on, for there's a real gold waiting for a large white punch a bit.

Expert Allays War Gas Fears

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Dust in clouds, which are not properly filtered against it, causes more deaths each year than an atom-bomb could possibly do, Dr. Dell Henderson, professor of physiology at Yale University and international authority on war gases, declared in an interview here.

It would require a large and expertly well-organized fleet of aircraft to carry 100,000 tons of gas. Yet this amount of gas dropped on New York City would do relatively little damage, a similar amount of high explosives would play havoc, kill thousands if not hundreds of thousands," said the man who is credited with having saved more of American troops during World War than any other man here.

Rock Drillers Periled
Dust in industries which include tunneling, the drilling of rock, and the use of asbestos, the other hand is causing hundreds of cases of silicosis annually," Dr. Henderson said. "This usually develops into tuberculosis and frequently causes death or disability or brings death to the victim.

The Germans' gas attacks upon

London during the war effectively demonstrated the futility of war gases in offensive warfare against the civilian population," he declared. "Enormous quantities of war gases including mustard gas were dropped on London during these attacks, yet the only casualties resulting were a few blisters, whereas a comparatively small quantity of high explosives dropped on the city during air attacks caused hundreds of fatalities."

Replying to questions about new war gases which have been announced from time to time, Dr. Henderson, who is a member of the consulting board on gas warfare of the United States and a world-renowned authority on the subject, said, "It is impossible to tell under laboratory conditions how a gas will react in the field."

Believes War Gas Adequate
"I find it hard, however," he said, "to imagine any new characteristics or qualities which would be wanted in a gas. We already have gases with all the characteristics which military people know how to use. War gases are of two types. The first is classed as a pulmonary irritant such as chlorine, the first gas used by the Germans; and phosgene. These gases make men extremely sick, cause their hospitalization for months, and sometimes cause death, but they are nevertheless the easiest gases to combat in defense. Phosgene is not so easily combated, but with a good gas mask, soldiers or civilians need have no fear of it.

"The other types are blistering gases such as mustard gas, which makes it impossible to inhabit any stricken area. Civilian populations could protect themselves against both types, suffering but few casualties, by simply going indoors and carefully closing all doors and windows until the gas had blown away or dissipated itself."

Vocational Aid Is Proving Help To Texas Jobless

AUSTIN.—Since September, 1929, more than 4,500 crippled Texans have been aided through the vocational rehabilitation division of the state department of education.

Training for that many resulted in self-supporting jobs for more than 800 directly from the service. At the present time about 450 adults whose injuries make them incapable of self-support without special training are being taught in schools and shops.

Hardly a county is without some person who has been "made over" by the department of education's direction. The infirm and blind are started out with a stock of candies, cigarettes, and peanuts in the foyer of a hospital or public building. Numerous persons have been set up in business this way.

The able-bodied are taught some craft. Many leatherworkers, and woodworkers and weavers, have been taught to follow such handicrafts. Their success has been notable. The process has been gradual. The legislature in 1929 made the first appropriation for vocational rehabilitation work. Since then, aided by the federal government, the service has been expanded.

The original state appropriation was $12,500. In 1931, the legislature voted $30,000 per year to be matched by federal aid. Last year the fund was increased to $75,000 a year.

More than 3,500 adult cripples in Texas are eligible for training. Last year 210 were put to work after being taught useful trades. Sixty-five of the 450 now in training are at the University of Texas; 19 are at A. & M. College. Others are sent to colleges elsewhere; put in shoe shops; beauty parlors, barber colleges; business colleges; dressmaking establishments; and radio shops. One trade at which cripples have become very successful is in car painting.

Greatest need in Texas now is for "opportunity schools" have been set up to aid this in-between class. With federal aid, the service is expected to be extended to smaller communities where operation of a special school for one or two handicapped persons would not be practical.

Historical Museum Planned at Canyon

CANYON, Tex.—An $18,000 enlargement of the Panhandle Plains Historical Society museum here will be made as part of a Centennial year extension of the institution's activities, it has been announced.

The Panhandle Plains Historical Society will hold its annual banquet here April 10, with J. Frank Dobie of the University of Texas as speaker. It is possible that Mrs. Susan J. Allen, Haverford, Pa., the largest single donor to the museum, will be present.

Dalhart Refuses To Let Club Have Historic Bell

DALHART, Tex.—A flat NO, was Dalhart's answer to the Clarendon Beaux Arts club which wants the historic old bell that hangs silent in the belfry of the First M. E. Church in North Dalhart.

The old bell recalls the days when Dalhart was only a sprawling mile of shacks, shanties and sod—when no man lived to a ripe old age because his gun play got rotten before his age could ripen.

The old bell is steeped in Dalhart's history and tradition. The two men most responsible for bringing it here are Dave Robison and George E. Walker, both of Dalhart. Robison was the first mayor of Dalhart. At the same election Walker was named one of the councilmen.

Robison was senior engineer and Walker second on the Rock Island construction from Liberia, Kansas, west to Santa Rosa, N. M. in 1900-01. Dalhart was founded June 19, 1901, when the Rock Island crossed the Fort Worth and Denver. Robison was retired several years ago. Walker is still in service.

Walker relates the story of the bell: "In the late 1800's a northern colonizer brought northern settlers into what is now Clarendon. While this project was under way the colonizer went to the exposition at Philadelphia. There, this old bell, then fresh from its makers in Baltimore, had won a prize. The colonizer tried without success to buy it for the membership of the First M. E. Church in Clarendon.

"Later the owner donated the bell to the church on condition it pay the freight from Philadelphia. Dodge City was then the end of the railroad. From there the bell moved by bull team and ox cart to Old Tascosa, Adobe Walls and finally to Clarendon.

"By 1902 southerners had established an M. E. Church, South at Clarendon. Members of the old First Methodist Church offered to sell the building on toto for the indebtedness against it—$28. Robison and myself heard of the offer and with a few others sent men to get the church and its equipment.

"The church was razed and loaded in box cars. The organ was rounded up out in the country. Then Clarendon citizens realized the glory of the old bell and went down to take it off the train. But

Dixie Answers A Call To Marriage

By United Press

TURLOCK, Calif. — Samuel Frank, now known as "Turlock's Postal Don Juan," who sent a letter to Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, saying he wanted a Southern wife, now has no doubts that this is his year.

Frank received 81 replies to his request. Mississippi belles contributed 28; Texas, 22; Missouri, 2; and Kansas, 1.

California, who could not qualify as "Dixie belles," were numerous. There were 100 Southern girls, showed one marked chivalry over their California rivals.

All Dixie girls sent addressed, stamped envelopes at least stamps for a return. None of the California did.

Frank says his list includes physicians, stenographers, school teachers, attorneys.

He insists he was sincere original request and is anxious to sort out of the 81 particular one to which he replied "yes."
