

President Roosevelt Submits Tax Message

That reminds me...

It Took a Cannon to Halt This Stolen Car

The biggest gun ever used to stop a stolen car, this cannon halted the wild ride of a thief speeding into Colonial Circle, Buffalo, N. Y. Coming off second best in his charge, the driver didn't wait for further hostilities, but continued his flight on foot, uninjured, police believed.

Caught Henry V. Davenport, one of Eastland County's major County Commissioners this morning on the run and in his graceful manner, didn't refuse to let us in on just what has been and is going on on the Grapevine, Pleasant Valley, Mangum and then back to the Cisco Highway road project. Each turn of the wheel of his trusty Ford brought new light and unfolded the great work that is being done on this particular project. For months Davenport has had grief after grief on this worst of all parallel roads. When it rained it became impassible... mud and all kinds of hazards were in the wake of folks who lived down the way who wanted to come to the land. Even during the dry weather the sand, the jumps, the washed out ruts and all kinds of whatnots made the trip one to be dreaded rather than appreciated. Today the story is shaping up differently. Proper grading, topping and surfacing and all other road building requirements is making this one of the best in this section. It is like a magician's wand being waved over the territory the road covers. Permanent strong bridges are being built wherever found necessary... there will be about 24 of them. Hills are cut down... fences have been moved back from 5 to fifteen feet for proper widths of right-of-way. More than a hundred men are steadily employed on this great project, which will run in the end to around $33,000 most of which is being furnished by the W. P. A.

More than seven miles of this wonderful work is under the direct supervision of Henry Davenport... and what has already been done proves conclusively the efficiency of his ability to conduct the work of the county. Davenport was an enthusiastic worker for the people he serves it is demonstrated in every move and statement of Davenport. His heart is simply where it belongs... in the cause of real honest to God service that brings results for the least cost. Modern machinery is being used on the job which speaks for the utmost in road construction economy.

Those who went to see something really worth while can well afford the trip from Eastland and go over the entire road... see what has been done and get first hand information on how it will look when finished which Mr. Davenport (Continued on page 3)

LEAGUE GIVES ITALY TIME TO TALK PEACE

GENEVA, March 3.—The League of Nations committee of 13 today adopted a resolution appealing to Italy and Ethiopia to make a peace agreement, within the framework of the league. The resolution offered by Great Britain and France, was coupled with an appeal to the warring nations to begin negotiations at once with a view to ceasing hostilities. The committee, comprising all members of the league council except Italy, voted to reconvene on March 10, Italy and Ethiopia thus being given a week to consider the appeal of peace. If Italy rejects it, the league general council of 18 on penalties is expected to proceed promptly to impose an embargo on oil shipments to Italy. The Franco-British resolution was adopted at a session which lasted only 15 minutes. Although the appeal was regarded as the league's last alternative to an oil embargo, it avoided all appearance of being an ultimatum to Italy by not directly fixing a time limit for a reply and by insisting that Italy cease hostilities before peace negotiations start.

Lobby Committee Told of Values On Some Utility Stock

WASHINGTON, Mar. 3.—Victor Dorsey of Chicago, veteran power company appraiser, told senate lobby investigators today there was "no real value behind the common and preferred stock" of the average public utility. Testifying at the senate inquiry into methods used by utility companies, to fight the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company regulation bill, Dorsey said the actual value of the average company's properties is determined by the amount of bonds outstanding. "In other words there is no real value behind the preferred stock and none behind the common stock," he was asked. "That is true in the average company," Dorsey replied.

Two Points in Message Are Given Stress

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 3.—President Roosevelt today submitted to congress the outline of a broad revision of corporate income taxes intended to increase their yield by an estimated $620,000,000 annually and eliminate necessity for permanent farm processing taxes. Mr. Roosevelt presented a two-point suggestion for restoring the budget to balance, except for relief expenditures. The program: 1.—A graduated tax estimated by the treasury to yield $1,614,000,000 for the 1936 tax year, on undistributed corporate incomes. This would be accompanied by repeal of the present corporate income tax, capital stock tax, excess profits tax and of the present exemption of dividends from normal tax on individual incomes. 2.—A direct tax intended to recapture as much as possible of unpaid and returned processing taxes, coupled with temporary re-imposition of processing taxes at lower rates and an broader base. Yield of these two taxes would be approximately $517,000,000. Treasury officials explained the proposed tax on undistributed corporate incomes would not be retroactive, but would apply to 1936 and future incomes. The president said the intention of the proposed corporate tax should be to tax undistributed corporate incomes so that it would yield about the same revenue as if it were distributed and had been taxed after it got into the hands of the individual stockholder.

They are digging their own graves and throwing a boomerang that will do them irreparable damage," Vallee told the committee.

STRIKERS IN NEW YORK ARE HELD IN CHECK

NEW YORK, Mar. 3.—Flying squadrons of striking elevator operators were dispatched to the stock exchange today with orders to force out every service employe in the buildings. The squadrons were met, however, by a squad of special police and one uniformed officer, who chased them away as they sought to reach the exchange elevator operators. James Bambrick, strike leader, declared 71,000 workers had quit in more than 5,649 buildings. Police, however, estimated only 1,100 buildings had been affected. Bambrick announced the strike would be extended to sky scrapers in the Grand Central area. This could include the 77-story Chrysler tower. After a night of sporadic disorders in which 18 persons were arrested, bringing the total to 45, police mobilized 67 trucks to transport patrolmen to scenes of violence. Police reported partial service had been restored in most apartment houses in the upper east side which includes such districts as Park Avenue and Fifth Avenue. One exception was 820 Park Avenue, where Gov. Herbert Lehman and his family maintain a town home. The building has been without service since yesterday.

Surety of Peace Must Precede Disarmament

The hopeful soul who expected the naval disarmament conference in London to bring about some real naval disarmament might as well begin now to look for the place to pay off.

This conference apparently is going to set all the powers involved to building new batches of light cruisers and 35,000-ton battleships. Like most of its predecessors, it will result in more naval construction rather than less: It sets up a few new ruses for the builders, but it does not restrain them.

All this ought to help up understand that we have been kidding ourselves right from the start about this naval disarmament business.

We have been kidding ourselves chiefly because we have put the cart several rods in front of the horse.

Nations don't pay the freight on big navies out of pure cussedness or a simple fondness for the looks of warships. They build navies because they figure navies may some day come in handy. To bring about disarmament, it is necessary to remove the things from which big navies spring.

In other words, it is foolish to try to cut down navies until the countries that are building them can be convinced they won't have to use them in the near future. And to date that is the one thing that hasn't been tried.

For instance: the clash of national interests in China which goes under the general name of "the Far Eastern problem" is what keeps Japan, America, and—to a certain extent—England from reducing their navies. Does anyone suppose that these three powers will disarm until a satisfactory solution to that problem has been reached?

For another instance: the European situation is heading directly toward war. Since it is, the European naval powers are going to keep their fleets in shape, adding to them to the extent that strategic requirements make necessary and budget allowances make possible.

Could the Archangel Gabriel himself persuade Italy, France, Germany, and England to disarm until a peaceful solution of the whole European tangle was in sight?

So far almost nothing has been done to iron out either of these exceedingly complicated and distressing snarls. Until something is done, naval disarmament conferences are useless.

State-Trained Men Who Are Crippled Make Good Records

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of stories on work of the state education department's rehabilitation division. Others will follow.)

By United Press

AUSTIN. — State-trained men and women whose physical handicaps must be offset by special instruction have a record for success in the crafts that they practice.

Average age of cripples cared for by the department of education's vocational rehabilitation division is 36 years. From sums varying from a few dollars to several hundred, the state makes them self-supporting and self-respecting. In some cases, the cripples who were once a burden on their families are able to help support their families.

Every Texas crossroads has someone thus aided. Occasionally, the state has only to furnish an artificial limb to make a person self-supporting and self-respecting. In some cases, the cripples who were once a burden on their families are able to help support their families.

Every Texas crossroads has someone thus aided. Occasionally, the state has only to furnish an artificial limb to make a person self-supporting. In others, tedious operations are required before sending the student through four years in college.

J. J. Brown, director of the rehabilitation division, now has approximately 40 "cases" attending the University of Texas and others scattered about in schools of the state. For most of those in Austin he furnishes part-time jobs—running elevators, typing, operating PBX boards—to help pay their expenses. Every department in the state government has at least one employe being aided by the rehabilitation service.

Random selection of cases from Brown's files tell interesting stories: At Abilene—a man, 36, lost a leg in an automobile accident. He was married. The state paid for an artificial limb, spent $375 training him in a shoe repair shop. Now he has a successful business of his own at Buffalo Gap. Another 20-year-old youth in Abilene lost his leg and the state trained him to repair shoes.

At Fort Worth—a grown man had crawled all his life as a result of infantile paralysis. An operation enabled him to walk with the aid of a cane. He was trained in a bicycle shop and now is a leading bicycle mechanic in that city. Cost of his rehabilitation was $298.

In the same city on physically incapacitated youth of 23 was trained in a sign-painting shop. A young girl, described as "brilliant-minded," underwent an operation to remove both legs. Now she walks with artificial limbs, goes to night school and supports herself in the meantime by running a candy and cigarette stand. Her training cost the state only $300.

Two classes of training are almost taboo with the vocational division. One is school-teaching, the other stenography. "There are too many school teachers now," said Director Brown. The secretarial field also is crowded, he said. Some stenographers are trained, and they usually become "much better than the average," Brown added.

Retail Sales in Reporting Stores Show an Increase

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Retail sales of 619 independent stores in Texas reporting to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, in cooperation with the Bureau of Business Research, the University of Texas, increased 14.0 per cent in dollar volume for January, 1936, as compared with January, 1935. This report, in the main, does not cover stores doing a sales volume of less than $20,000 annually and excludes department stores.

When adjusted for the number of working days, January sales showed a decrease of 21.0 per cent from December, 1935. There was one less working day in December than in January. Without adjustment either for the number of working days or for seasonal influences, January sales were 18.0 per cent below December.

All but one of the kinds of business represented showed an increase from last year. This exception was grocery stores without meats with a decrease of about 4.0 per cent. The greatest increase was in lumber and building material dealers with an increase of 52.0 per cent followed by furniture and women's specialty shops with increases of 18.0 per cent and 17.0 per cent respectively.

Declines from December to January were shown in all lines of trade except lumber and building material dealers, whose sales increased 23 per cent. This exception to the characteristic seasonal decline may be attributed in part to the increased sale of coal and fuel oil which are commonly handled by lumber and building materials dealers. The largest decline was in the apparel group with men's and boys' clothing stores declining 48 per cent, family clothing 46 per cent and women's specialty shops 42 per cent. A 36 per cent decrease was shown for furniture stores.

Of the 619 firms reporting for January, 387 (62.5 per cent) reported an increase over January a year ago; 212 (34.3 per cent) reported a decrease, and 20 (3.2 per cent) had less than 1 per cent change in sales volume.

Scope Widened In Princeton Study

PRINCETON, N. J.—Two important strides have been taken by the Institute for Advanced Study to increase the efficiency and capabilities of the institution.

First a 200-acre plot was purchased to "provide for future expansion," and secondly three professors were appointed to the faculty of the School of Humanistic Studies.

The new faculty members are Prof. W. A. Campbell now directing an excavation expedition at Antioch; Prof. J. A. Lowe, Oxford University; and Prof. Ernst Herzfeld, University of Berlin.

Definite plans for use of the 200-acre plot have not been formulated, but upon it may be constructed students' living quarters and research buildings.

Although the institute has its School of Mathematics in Princeton University's Fine Hall, it is not connected with the university.

STANDARDIZED UNIFORMITY

The simple mechanical details of cigarette manufacture are of surprising importance. Upon them depend the physical properties of the cigarette, such as weight, size, firmness, moisture-holding properties, uniformity of fill—uniformity of product—all of which have a far-reaching effect on the character of its combustion and the constituents of its smoke.

In the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes all of these properties have been standardized with care for the perfection of A LIGHT SMOKE.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she sets out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary she has earned as a model for which she worked as a model for a suspended publication.

On board the ship she meets handsome DIRK STROM, expert ski jumper, as penitence for her self. The two are much attracted to each other. Then a misunderstanding comes between them. Jane is attracted by the attentions of TINO ROSSI, opera singer, and Dirk becomes the frequent escort of NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Koklin diamond.

Others among the passengers are SNOWSHOES, a detective; MADAME DORIMUS, wealthy and eccentric; DUTCH LENZ and WANNIE JACKSON, blackmailers; KEN MARTIN and LINDA BAYES, floor show entertainers.

Snowshoes persuades Nora Lane to turn the Koklin diamond over to the partner. They go to her stateroom to get it and find Madam Jackson, dead from a bullet wound. The diamond is missing.

Snowshoes takes charge of the investigation. Most of the passengers are not aware of the murder, though they know of the theft. They are allowed to go ashore when the boat lands at Nassau.

Linda Bays shows Jane an unusual note she has received. It reads: "A good girl will keep her mouth shut."

CHAPTER XVIII

TOWARD midnight a long black box was brought to the ship and placed in Suite AA, the scene of the murder. Dirk witnessed this gruesome reminder as he stood looking toward the brilliantly lighted hotel on the beach.

Then he waited by the rail and watched the parties come from the shore. He was standing there alone, when he caught Jane's gaze. She was looking at him with a quizzical laugh. Down there on the embarking dock, Tino Rossi was swinging along at her side.

Dirk had wanted to see Jane's face, to know if she were happy. She had realized her ambition, and she deserved this night. If only that ugly incident hadn't kept him from going ashore with Nora Lane!

But when he was alone with the darkness he weakened. He wanted consolation for something tangible he had missed. He started walking down the promenade toward the actress, who with some vague notion of demanding to see her the next morning. Suddenly she came upon a girl, standing alone, looking back at the lights on shore. It was Jane.

She was more surprised than he. "Dirk!" she said.

He faced her, slightly hostile. "Did you have a good time ashore?"

Her eyes were as bright as the stars. "A marvelous time!" she replied.

"And I suppose your moon-struck opera star was most romantic?"

"Tino was an angel," she said. "He told me all the lovely things a perfect gentleman."

"I know," Dirk said. "He has all the graces. Flowers, bouquets, orchids, compliments—"

IMPULSIVELY, she reached out and touched his hand.

"You wanted to meet grand people on this cruise," he reminded her. "Color and glamorous romance!"

"Yes, that's what I wanted," Jane said, and her chin was up when she said it. "Poor Tino—I'm afraid I led him a merry chase today. He was so tired. When we came on board just now he went straight to his stateroom to bed. But on a marvelous night like this, I couldn't stay inside."

She was leaning against the rail, looking up at him. She went on. "I'm sorry this murder came up to spoil your cruise. You would have had a good time ashore." She hastened to add, "—with her, with Nora Lane."

"I was right here most of the time," he said disconsolately, "looking toward the shore, wishing I could be there dancing—"

"With a lovely lady," she concluded. "Oh, but you have what you wanted most on this cruise, too. You didn't want to meet a girl without a job. You wanted to meet a famous dramatic star. Well, you did!"

"Yes, that was what I wanted," he said stubbornly, and looked away from her toward the twinkling lights. "I haven't changed my mind."

"We both have found what we wanted—but there's still this gorgeous night," Jane said, taking in the heavens with a sweep of her hand. "I can't go to bed. Why don't we—"

Suddenly his eyes were eager. "Go on."

"You finish it," she said. "What do you think of?"

"Why don't we put deck chairs under the stars and not go to bed at all?" he said.

The giant twin-screw propellers were already churning at the stern; they were underway. They sought the deck under the stars and Dirk placed their chairs where they could watch the lights on the island slip away in the night.

"First I want to tell you," she said. "That I know you aren't implicated in that murder and that I'm on your side."

HE didn't want to talk about that. "We're on our way home now," he said, "with a stop at more islands in the sea."

"Tell me about your job," she begged.

"For me, that's part of this grand feeling I have. I've got to see some shape to my life. And I'll have to carve out my little niches—literally. I'm designing a new kind of ski. Now, that's out. Let's talk about you."

"There's nothing about me to talk about!" Jane said. "I'm just—"

But he was indignant. "There's everything about you," he said. "Gally, she laughed. "And what does that mean? I'm afraid we're being deliberately naive."

"I don't know what you mean!" she said. "When we came on board they said the barometer was falling. We had noticed it in the little boats. The seas were rough, and long black rollers—"

"There's a blow coming up out of the Caribbean," Dirk said. "We had a radio report. But we'll out-run it. If it does come our way, high winds won't bother a big ship like the Oreatic."

But already the winds were playing havoc with the seas. Black rollers struck the sides of the ship and faint spray came up in their

The colonel seems to be trying to swing the donkey over to his side, giving him his views on national affairs. But the donkey doesn't seem to be much impressed, his attention apparently wandering toward the oats he's going to have for dinner. The conference took place at Wickenburg, Ariz., where Col. and Mrs. Knox are spending their vacation.

Cotton Situation Is Reported Is Bureau's Verdict

AUSTIN.—What of the cotton situation? "Improved," was the verdict of Dr. A. E. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, and noted cotton marketing authority. "Improvement began last fall when the government shifted from its policy of lending above market price to raises, to that of opening the channels of trade as a means of increasing consumption to raise price," Dr. Cox explained.

"The effectiveness of the latter policy, as contrasted with the holding policy, is best illustrated by what has happened in the last two years. When the 12 cent loan went into effect in August, 1934, the price of middling 7-8 inch spot cotton in New Orleans was 13.35 cents; and we were faced with one of the shortest crops in over 40 years.

"The indicated supply in the United States, counting carry-tight spot cotton situation, which created premiums in near month futures by the latter part of November. These near month premiums tend to restrict both consumption and exports. This development gave the government an excellent opportunity to market a considerable part of its cotton, and during the last two weeks the Producers Pool has begun to take advantage of it.

"The development of a sound sales policy for the government cotton would be very constructive in the market at this time. The invalidation of the AAA and statements of high government officials have created uneasiness about the size of the prospective crop. Moreover, uncertainties relative to farm legislation and taxation are bearish on the market at present."

Operations of the Texas cotton textile industry during January made favorable comparisons with the corresponding month last year, but were still far below normal, Dr. Cox added.

Reports from 13 establishments show total consumption of 2,684 bales during the month, an increase of 14 per cent over January

It was a wonderful idea... and Henry Davenport and his colleagues deserve the commendation of all citizens of Eastland as well as those who are being served on the new road for what has been done. Fortunately Eastland county has not suffered financially for the job and the economic angle of the enterprise is something that would have been impossible before the WPA was inaugurated.

Mrs. W. K. Jackson, member of the Eastland County Advisory committee of the Texas Centennial received the following letter:

Dear Mrs. Jackson: You know about the historical relic hunt which the Texas Centennial Exposition is sponsoring, no doubt, but in case you have not had the details I am writing this letter to pass along the pertinent information.

The contest does not require sending in the relics, documents, and pictures which will be brought to light through the contest, but merely submitting all available information about them. We know that there are hundreds of these things hidden away in homes throughout the state about which we should know. That is why the contest was arranged.

The contest is arranged in four divisions, for individuals, for clubs and other such organizations, for
