Whales Recall Glory of Historic Past

The structure of American history is built of a great many unlikely blocks, and you can find romantic reminders of it in the most unexpected places.

For instance; a one-sentence dispatch from Honolulu the other day revealed that great schools of whales have been seen again in Hawaiian waters for the first time in several generations.

If the eagle is our national bird, the whale ought to be our national fish. (Oh, sure, a whale isn't really a fish, but let that pass.) It was the whale that helped turn our New Englanders into seafarers; the whale that caused exploration of the Pacific; the whale that made world travelers out of stay-at-home Americans, and introduced our flag into out-of-the-way ports in the every corner of the earth.

Back in the take-it-easy days, before people found out what petroleum was good for, the whale was the beastie that lighted our lamps. Whales are fat, and from their fat oil can be made; and the whalers of New England went to every sea on the globe, staging the most thrilling combination of hunting and fishing party the world ever saw, to meet this need.

It was these whalers who charted the myriad unknown islands of the Pacific. They paved the way for missionaries, traders, and the agents of empire in far-off and romantic lands.

They lighted our lamps, provided the wherewithal for the corsets which graced the figures of American womanhood, brought in the oil that lubricated our watches, and helped provide New England with the capital that financed development of the west.

Their industry is as dead as a doorknob, now, in such centers as New Bedford and Nantucket. The strange skill and daring that they developed for their unusual calling has vanished from the earth.

The sturdy, smelly little ships in which they roamed the seven seas have been broken up, or cut down into coal barges, and the commodity in which they dealt now has few uses.

But the memory of these tough sea rovers is worth keeping alive. A good share of American history—including some of its most exciting chapters—is bound up with the story of the whalers.

And in case you aren't familiar with it, this commonplace little dispatch from Honolulu might give you a good excuse to go to the library and read up on it. You'll find the story very much worth the trouble.

One contribution to that contest calling for 500 words or less on "How America Can Stay Out of War" might suggest confining diplomats to 500 words or less.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

Illustration of a climber. Text: FOOTBALL HELMETS ARE WORN BY MODERN MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS! NINETY PER CENT OF ALL CLIMBING INJURIES RESULT FROM FALLING ROCKS.

THE wandering albatross nests in the Antarctic regions, and by the middle of July, the young birds are quite as large as their parents, who are giants among the world of flyers, with 11-foot wingspread. Then the parents desert their young, and the nestlings take no food until they learn to fly, some three months later.

Rubinoff Holds World Record for Broadcasting

Rubinoff and his violin—and Chevrolet—are a combination that few, if any, radio listeners in the United States have not received in their homes via the air. The famous violinist and his Stradivarius, stars of the Chevrolet Musical Moments program, have the distinction of going on the air from more broadcasting stations than any other program in the history of radio.

TCU Debaters End Year of Activities

FORT WORTH.—The debating team of Texas Christian University has just completed its activities for the year after having traveled 3,000 miles and engaged in 54 debates.

The T. C. U. team met debaters from ten Texas schools, 11-out-of-state institutions, and two foreign universities.

Texas schools engaged include Austin College, Baylor University, Southern Methodist University, St. Edwards University, University of Texas, Wiley College, and Trinity University.

The University of Hawaii and the University of Puerto Rico were the foreign teams engaged.

Out of state schools represented many parts of the country, from the College of the Pacific in California to the University of Pittsburgh in the East.

Most of the debates were non-decision affairs. However, T. C. U. won 62 per cent of those of which a decision was rendered.

The question used throughout the season, T. C. U. having sometimes the negative, sometimes the affirmative side, was: Resolved that Congress, by a two-thirds majority vote, should have the power to over-ride decisions of the Supreme Court declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty, is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father. PETER GARDINER, newspaper reporter, helps her find a job writing society news. He is in love with DIX CARL, but he goes abroad to study singing. When Peter asks her to marry him she agrees, but postpones the wedding.

HONEY HARMON, Slim star, comes to Newtown, making a "personal appearance" tour. She buys a scenario written by Linda. Linda goes to Hollywood, and there, expressing ideas that are really Peter's, she acquires a reputation for being able to discover new stars. Soon she is a celebrity.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII
LINDA knew, the first moment that she saw him, that Basil Thorne would play an important part in her life, however brief that part might be. He was an enormous man and, looking at him, Linda Bourne remembered Cora Jarrett's saying, "I don't even know whether he is ugly or handsome."

Linda came upon him after she had discarded her traveling frock for a white knitted bathing suit, the slacks and carwheel sun hat that was the accepted beach costume. Honey's house party was distributed over the playground of tennis courts and patio. Linda, hot and tired from the dusty motor trip, made her way to the beach. She dropped the slacks, and replaced the carwheel with a bathing cap. The water was too tempting! She ran into it eagerly, and broke into the smooth stroke Pete Gardiner had taught her. Exhilarated and refreshed, she pulled herself up to the float and found herself not alone.

Thorne, in tights, his ertkly hair gleaming wetly in the sun, reached down a bronzed arm and drew her up. He didn't let her go for a moment until she got her footing, and for one breathless minute they clung together in the most impersonal way. Then, laughing and a little breathless, she drew away.

"THANKS," she said, drawing off the tight cap and shaking her head to free the water that had seeped around her curls.
"A pleasure," he said, taking her arm as her perilous footing on the wet flooring threatened to send her slipping into the water. "May I have the next minute?"
"You'll have to ask my father," she answered, and regarded him appraisingly. "You don't look the type for a minute at all."
"I'm not," he said. "I'm a prizefighter and I suppose you are a movie star."
"You're not, I'm sure." Linda felt very gay. "And you're not a Californian."
"You can't be sure of anything about me, but you are correct. I'm not a Californian. Why did you say that?"

"Because you couldn't possibly have mistaken me for a movie star."
"I know," he said. "You're the little girl who works at the ribbon counter, having a wonderful day at the beach."
"That's right," she answered gravely. "And I came here because I heard picture people do, and I always hoped some day I would meet a movie director who would be impressed with my expressive face, and you turn out to be a prizefighter!"
"Not a very good one," he said quickly.

"Oh, don't apologize. I'm not a very good ribbon clerk. I only sell the blue ribbon that ladies use to tie up old love letters. I'm working up to the apron-strings department."
Thorne had thrown himself full length beside her on the float and studied her thoughtfully, his chin supported by his hands.

"I don't think you'd make such a bad pair of apron-strings to be tied to. Young lady, you're the first girl I've met in Hollywood who looked like the kind of a girl a man might want to marry. How much of that ribbon for love letters have you sold to yourself?"
"Thanks for the implied compliment," Linda said drily. "I don't save either love letters or compliments."
"I'm not a marrying man myself, but if I change my mind may I come around and see you?"
"You'll have to ask my father," Linda drew her cap on hastily, and grasped the sides of the ladder.

"Wait a minute. I think I have changed my mind. May I swim you home?"
LINDA was several feet ahead of him. She raised her arm. It was an invitation.
"What's your name and where are you staying?" he shouted.
"What's yours?" she shouted back and caught, "Basil Thorne."
"That's unfair to labor," she shouted again. "You lied to a working girl!"

He caught her at the water's edge, and grasped her elbows in his strong hands. "I probably will be unfair to you," he said. "But you'll like it."
Rubbing herself vigorously with a towel, running a comb through her hair, donning a sleeveless linen frock, socks and sandals, tying a ribbon around her hair and making herself look younger by the minute, Linda thought of Basil Thorne, and deliberately slowed her efforts. She wanted to see him, and she didn't want to see him. Hadn't Cora told her that Thorne was Honey Harmon's . . . what was the word Cora had used? Linda remembered the implication if she hadn't remembered the word. Nevertheless, Linda's heart skipped one beat as small as the slip she took from her glass when, half an hour later, Thorne, in tights and soft shirt, thorde into the patio where the others were all sitting.

He frowned at Linda, and turned to Honey. "Honey, do you allow children to drink at your parties? Tek, tek! So this is the immorality I've been hearing about!"
"Children or immorality? What are you talking about?" Honey asked, and cuddled up to Basil Thorne. "This is my man and watch for kitty's claws" her smile said plainly.

"The little girl with the blue hair-ribbon!" Basil pointed sternly to Linda. "What's she doing with these grownups?"
HONEY'S lips weren't quite so sweet. "Oh, so sorry. Linda, this is Basil Thorne. Linda Bourne, the writer, you know."

"Not You lied to me!" He took the glass from Linda's hand and threw himself at her feet. She turned to Gregory Pryor, at her left, and asked him if he thought Briffaud's novel had any lasting significance. Pryor had theories about it, and discussed them until dinner time.

Basil Thorne did not take dismissal seriously. He knew too much about women. He watched Linda through dinner, caught her eyes on his, and the quick flush as she turned to the others deliberately. Linda lost at bridge. She couldn't remember cards with Thorne's eyes burning through her. It was nearly midnight and they were all together in the small drawing room when Linda excused herself. She didn't go to her room. Out-of-doors it was starry and dark and clear. Her head ached with fatigue and excitement. She picked up a wrap and, slipping out, made her way to the beach. Her solitary study of the night came to a quick end.

Basil Thorne stood beside her. She turned to speak to him, and he took her in his arms. He kissed her hard and murmured something she couldn't hear.
She tried to draw away. "That's not fair," she said.
"I told you I wouldn't be fair," he said, "but I told you I'd make you like it."
In the darkness she could see the triumph in his smile. For a fleeting second she tried to understand herself. Had she liked it, or was the wild beating of her heart answer?
"I came out looking for something I thought I'd lost," Honey Harmon with an undertone of threat in her voice that women usually recognize, was at their side.

ER - I HOPE SO BUT THERE - YOUR NERVES ARE UPSET - YOU NEED SLEEP.

YES, SLEEP - I - OOOH -

HEAVENS! SHE'S COLLAPSED!

BECAUSE OF THE INTENSE EMOTIONAL STRAIN SHE'S BEEN UNDER, MYRA'S NERVES FINALLY SNAPPED.

MY DIAGNOSIS OF THIS CASE IS, 'TOO KEEN A MEMORY!' I'LL HAVE TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT.

DOCTOR! HASTEN WITH AMBULANCE! THERE'S FIRING CLOSE BY PALACE!

PERHAPS THIS WILL HELP...

Music Week Observance
The Methodist Church auditorium was filled Monday night for the opening concert of Music Week under direction of Miss Wilda Drago.

The violin ensemble of 35 players in attractive white satin and black uniforms, played magnificently, "Amaryllis," and "Tennis Players," with duet piano accompaniment by Misses Olivette Killough and Marie Plummer.

Mrs. W. E. Stalter, president of Music Study Club and chairman Eastland Music Week, gave the greeting and address.
She noted, that annual Music Week had its inception in Texas; advocated public school music teaching; commented on inspiration, one in our midst, had been to her, and presented Miss Drago, as program director.

The Harmony Girls, in artistic grouping, and attractive in their pastel satins of green, pink, with gold centering group, sang "The Green Cathedral," and "Butterfly," with Miss Olivette Killough, in aqua marine satin, at the piano, Wilda Drago in white satin formal, directing.

The Drago octette played colorful contrasts in "Moonlight Sonata," and "Norwegian Dance," "Andantino," a close harmony without support, closing group with "Two Guitars," with Miss Jane Ferguson at piano. Her sympathetic accompaniment was markedly noticeable.

Miss Alma Williamson, state contest T. F. M. C. winner in violin, rendered the difficult, "Ghost Dance," with Miss Ferguson at piano.

The Harmony Girls sang "In Luxembourg Garden" and a hitting, merry melody, "My Lindy Lou," with Miss Killough at piano.

The program closed with octette in "Liebesfreud," Miss Jane Ferguson, accompanist, and brought storms of applause. Eastland may justly be proud of this, her talent.

Thursday Afternoon Club
A musical program honoring National Music Week observance will be included in the business meeting of Thursday Afternoon Club at their session tomorrow, 3 p. m., in community clubhouse.

Dog Catcher Quits; Collie Chased Him

THREE RIVERS, Mich.—When Spider Waltz, the city's dog catcher, turned in his resignation, he gave as his reason the following:

Dogs around this town are multiplying too rapidly. The job took too much of time away from his regular duties of hauling ashes. That, to cap the climax, a collied dog chased him two blocks day before he resigned.

REMEMBERING AUNT CLEMMIE Great-Aunt Clemmie was brought up to the Spartan life. She enjoyed (she always said) getting up at five on a Saturday morning, hanging her market basket over her arm, and going downtown to do the marketing for the week-end. She said, "If you get there first—you'll get the best!" Aunt Clemmie is a fine reminder of her time. Nowadays one needn't rise with the birds to be sure of a full market basket. It's so much simpler and more efficient to spend a few minutes with the advertisements. Marshalled before you, in your newspaper, is all the news that is necessary for your good living. There, in the advertisements, are facts—sound, solid facts—about prices and quality. Advertised, trade-marked merchandise must be honest merchandise. Or it wouldn't be advertised.
