Expert Tells How To Remove Spots

AMHERST, Mass.—The removal of candle wax from a tablecloth is a difficult job when done in the right way, says Mrs. Esther Page, specialist in home economics at Massachusetts State College. First it is necessary to scrape off as much of the wax as possible with a dull-edged paper knife or spoon. Then the remaining wax is melted out with a warm cloth. The cloth is placed upside down on a piece of clean white blotting paper and the iron applied to the spot. If after this is done a greasy spot still remains, Page says, the spot should be treated with a grease solvent, such as carbon tetrachloride, working from the outside edge of the spot toward the center brings best results. Should this fail, a little lard rubbed on the spot will do the trick. Detergent alcohol removes traces of lard left in the cloth by colored

Stone Age Man Traced In West

SEQUOIA PARK, Cal.—One million years ago, when the Java ape-man existed, this section of California already was occupied by a primeval race capable of making stone utensils. That is the conclusion that has just been made public by Walter Fry, United States Commissioner of Sequoia Park, and Dr. Francois Matthes, noted geologist. Although the Java ape-man is regarded as the oldest known human link, there is every indication, the two scientists assert, that a man existed at that time in Tulare County, California. The conclusions of the two men are based on the existence at Atwell Mill and Giant Forest of a number of giant stone basins in some cases four feet in diameter and from two to four feet deep. It has been proven to the satisfaction of scientists that these could not have been formed by the action of water, nor have any grinding tools with which they might have been made ever been found. All theories as to their possible use have been discarded. However, the most important discovery in connection with them, made by Dr. Fry, is the presence of an inch of encrusted volcanic ash in two of them that were lying exposed to this material. The youngest volcano mountain in or near Tulare County is a cone near Golden Trout creek, but which, according to Dr. Matthes, could only have had its last period of activity over a million years ago. The conclusions of the two scientists are that the basins could only have been made by a primeval people living here a million years ago. These basins exist only in the Sequoia belt of Tulare County.

Names of those arrested were withheld by officers until the investigation has been completed. Police said the youths told them where most of the loot could be recovered.

WEYERHAUSER SUSPECT IS TAKEN ALIVE

NEW YORK, March 13.—Edward Bentz, wanted in connection with the kidnaping of George Weyerhauser, young heir to a lumber fortune, was taken into custody today by federal agents, who bombarded his flat with tear gas bombs. Bentz, also sought as a participant in several bank robberies, was found hiding in a dumb waiter, clad in his underwear. Search revealed two machine guns, a rifle, pistols and ammunition. Federal agents said Bentz was a suspect in the Weyerhauser case, but refused to divulge what the connection was. The G-men surrounded a four-story brick tenement in Brooklyn, concentrated on the five-room apartment in which Louis Phillips, Phillips Park, and three children had lived since Feb. 20 with a "boarder." One of the agents opened a rear door and tossed in several tear gas bombs. The Phillips ran out and the agents, searching the apartment, found Bentz.

NEW ENGLAND RIVERS RISE AFTER THAWS

NEW YORK, March 13.—Melting mountain snows and ice poured extra thousands of tons of water into raging rivers in northeastern states today, but colder weather predicted for tonight was expected to check the danger. At least nine deaths were reported and millions of dollars worth of property damaged. Five lives were lost in New England, where lowering temperatures already were stemming floodwaters. Potential danger still existed in flood areas in New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. Streams in Pennsylvania were receding but the weather bureau predicted the Susquehanna river would rise to the 23-foot level, five feet above flood stage. Washington coast guard officials ordered three amphibian planes and 11 turf boats sent to Wilkes Barre to assist in flood rescue work in that area. Floodwaters of the Passaic river in New Jersey, which inundated several communities along the river valley, reached their peak today and showed no further signs of rising today.

If Candidate John W. Bosworth, above, is nominated and elected, West Virginia will send to Washington another Democratic "baby" senator, one who will have to wait even longer to take his seat than did Senator Rush Holt, Bosworth, 28, won't reach 30, the age required of U. BRITAIN HAS TURNED DOWN FRENCH PLAN

LONDON, March 13.—Great Britain has rejected France's proposal to apply economic and financial sanctions to Germany, reliable diplomatic sources revealed today. The Locarno powers—Britain, France, Belgium and Italy—thus were deadlocked in their efforts to find a solution of the crisis before the League council is asked tomorrow, to vote penalties. France assured of the support of Russia, even if it comes to military action, refused to consider proposals which would permit Adolf Hitler to retain the troops he now has in the Rhineland. The French proposal of sanctions reported to have been met by the British objection that Germany could lead to war with Germany and Britain is unwilling to incur that risk. The French persisted in demands that the League council meeting at 11 a. m. tomorrow, should first strongly condemn Germany for violating the Locarno and Versailles treaties and then should consider punitive measures. According to the same sources the French attempted to gain British support in principle to sanctions, without proposing specific measures, but informed quarters told the United Press France envisaged an embargo on German exports and a credit blockade.

Lion or Panther? Anyway Hunt is on For Cisco Animal

CISCO, March 13.—A large mountain lion, or panther has been located on the F. E. Harrell ranch north of Cisco, where it has been preying on sheep and goats. P. G. Berry sighted the creature when he went to pen up Mr. Harrell's sheep Sunday afternoon. Finding the flock huddled on a high hill top, badly frightened, he went to look for missing individuals. A short distance away he came suddenly upon the big cat eating a sheep. It growled and Berry lost his curiosity completely and left the spot in some haste. He described the beast as large—much larger than the cats at the city zoo. For some time Mr. Harrell said he had been missing sheep, but attributed it to wolves. Trapper F. B. Mathews caught one wolf and another was poisoned. Discovery of the panther on the ranch has led to plans for running it down with dogs. A party was due to go on the hunt for the beast.

Jury Sentences George Stewart In Ranger Case

A jury in 91st district court Thursday afternoon found George Stewart of Ranger guilty of a charge of burglary and assessed his punishment at two years in the state penitentiary. Carothers was foreman of the jury composed of L. G. Ball, W. E. Coleman, Albert Gage, J. F. Morgan, W. L. McCorkle, W. E. Brown, C. L. Carr, D. H. Gaston, A. O. Hall, E. R. Reagan and R. F. Wynn.

Slaying Suspect Has 'Pains In Head'

TYLER, Texas, March 13.—George Patton, 54-year-old Henderson county farmer, charged with murder of four members of the J. W. McGehee family in 1932, pleaded today to be permitted to return to his 16-year-old wife, who is an expectant mother. When Patton's wife walked into the jail, officers said he pretended at first he did not know her and complained of a pain in his head, which he said kept him from knowing always what he was doing. Later, however, he talked with her and pleaded to be allowed to return with his "woman," as he called her, to their farm near Athens.

NOT GUILTY PLEAS ENTERED BY PRINCIPAL

Top Bond Figure Is Set For Raymond Henry, Husband of McBee's Ex-Wife.

Bonds totaling $19,000 were set Friday in 88th district court when defendants in the "hanging skeleton" slaying of H. L. McBee—Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henry and Jack and Lynn Smith—were arraigned before Judge B. W. Patterson. Pleas of "not guilty" to the slaying alleged to have occurred in Rising Star May 1, 1933, were entered by the defendants whose cases are set for March 30 in the court in which they were arraigned.

"Top" bond figure setting was that for Raymond Henry, Dell Henry, wife of the former and ex-wife of McBee, had her bond set at $3,000, the same figure set Jack and Lynn Smith. The court overruled Della Henry's special plea to jurisdiction and to quash the indictment because of two grand jurors served on the same grand jury which returned indictments in 91st and 88th district court. At the request of the defendant her name in the indictment was corrected from Della McBee Henry to Della Henry. J. Frank Sparks is attorney for the woman Henry was arraigned without prejudice to his right to file special pleas and his plea of "not guilty" was entered. At the request of Jack Smith the defendant's name was changed to Luther Jackson Smith in the indictment.

Japan Sees Last Act of Dying Militarism

In the assassination of five liberal statesmen, Japan's militarists seem to have made an assault on democratic government in a way which the most up-to-date dictators of Europe could hardly have improved on.

But for all the fact that liberal statesmen lie dead, with military fire-eaters pluming themselves on the patriotic glory of their assassinations, this frustrated upheaval in Japan looks more like the last act of an old drama than the first act of a new one.

The uniformed gangsters who sought power over the bodies of the opposition were not riding a mounting tide which was sweeping the country with irresistible force. The tide that carried them along was ebbing, not rising; their dramatic coup d'etat looked to the past rather than to the future.

Because our own relations with the Japanese government present certain points of strain, any change of regimes in Tokio will be bound to affect us. It is therefore a good thing for us to try to understand just what has happened.

Blood-thirsty militarism certainly is nothing new for Japan. For unnumbered generations the military caste here has been supreme, answerable only to the emperor. The state has existed to serve its soldiers; the army, in a very real sense, has been the nation.

For perhaps a quarter century the Japanese have been experimenting with parliamentary government. The experiment was never very successful; the shadow of the past always slanted across it, and the militarists never consented to a change that would make their group simply one among many groups.

What touched off this most recent explosion seems to have been the fact that the mass of the Japanese people had begun to insist on having the military clique whittled down to its proper size. The anti-militarist party won a majority in the last parliamentary election; furthermore, a sort of farmer-labor combine with definitely radical tendencies actually won 22 seats.

The army group replied to this in the only way open to it—with the sword. But by so doing it did not start Japan off on a new path; it tried to restore it to an old one. And in that fact lies a measure of hope.

For it is pretty clear that the main current of Japanese sentiment is running the other way. The plain people of the land are beginning to suspect that the glories of a victorious army and a great navy put precious little butter on their bread.

They would like to see less attention paid to the army and more attention paid to the worker the farmer, and the business man.

It is possible that this coup d'etat is the last stand of the old order. It may make the immediate future exceedingly difficult; but it may also mean that the end of Japan's policy of uncompromising militarism is nearer than the rest of the world has dared to hope.

by Mrs. Charles Lee, the president, and the roll call and minutes read by the secretary, Mrs. S. E. Snodgrass, the program was taken up with Mrs. W. H. Whitworth, superintendent of study, as leader. The program was a study of the first and second chapters of the new study book, "Toward a Christian America." Sketches were given of the pioneer missionaries, not only of the Methodist Church but of other denominations. The story of the four Indians who made their way on foot from Oregon to St. Louis to find the "Book" of which they had heard through members of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, was quite interesting. Those present were Mrs. Charles Lee, S. E. Snodgrass, G. S. Bruce, W. H. Whitworth, E. M. Daily, Preston Sparks, Ed Parks, and W. C. Bedford.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Carruth and little son, of Lubbock, visited her sister, Mrs. Eula Jones, and her brother, Tip Henry, Wednesday. The Carruths grew up in this community and have hosts of friends who are always glad to see them again. They are farming near Lubbock and stated that they raised the largest crops last year that they had ever seen.

We are glad to report that Miss Mollie O'Rear and her sister, Mrs. Annie Daniel, are both able to be up, though not real well yet.

Mr. and Mrs. Rushing have hosts of friends here who are sorry to have them leave our town but wish them success in their new home.

Mrs. A. C. Robert and children drove to Jonesboro Saturday morning and visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kellum Sr., until Sunday night. Mrs. Earl Alexander and her husband, Miss Captola Browning, Miss Guadalupe Brazell and George Elton Brazell went to Ranger on Friday afternoon and attended the Ranger District Convention of the Church of God. Houston Starts Big Building Program

HOUSTON.—More than 1,000 men will find employment by March 15 in the city's biggest building program in many years, with major projects ultimately to cost $3,821,450 in school buildings. The first three projects started were the new southwest high school, $680,000; the new East End high school, $485,000, and the new elementary school in Irvington addition, $33,159. Henry E. Elrod, assistant auditor for the building department, said work orders for the south elementary school have not been received from the PWA office at Fort Worth. The job will cost $795. Additions to 10 existing schools also will be built. Approximately 500 more workers will be employed on March 15 when construction of a new 230,000 city-county hospital is expected to begin.

ON TEXAS FARMS

Roses are a feature of Grimes county rural yard improvement since 228 home demonstration club women put out 4,325 rose bushes last spring.

A rose garden placed for enjoyment when in the outdoor living room is part of the landscape plan of Mrs. Sam Inlet, yard demonstrator in Montgomery county. Soil, into which one-third as much well rotted manure and leaf mold was spaded was prepared for this rose bed.

In Frio county, Mrs. Ben Conover made a rose bed only five feet wide so that it can be easily worked from both sides. The roses are planted only 18 inches apart so that all the roots will be shaded—this in defiance of the South Texas sun.

Rose cuttings set out by Mrs. J. E. Manning of Dallas county last spring have developed into bushes almost equal in size to three-year-old plants. Mrs. Manning attributes this to the thorough preparation given the soil before she planted the cuttings. Rotted straw and manure were plowed into the bed until the soil was very loose. It retained its moisture all summer for this reason.

Pruning is something many rose fanciers argue about. Mrs. O. B. Harkey, yard demonstrator in San Saba county prunes her radiance roses this way—she selects four to six of the very best shoots and cuts out all of the rest. Then she prunes the selected canes to from six to 12 inches high.

BIG SPRING—A well built concrete cellar with shelves on two sides for storing canned goods has been constructed by Mrs. G. W. Overton, 4-H pantry demonstrator for the Overton home demonstration club in Howard county, according to Miss Mayme Lou Parr, home demonstration agent. The entire cellar is concrete-lined and white-washed, with the shelves painted white. This makes the cellar very light, and it is possible to read all labels on the cans easily. A well balanced canning budget has been followed, providing sufficient leafy, starchy, and other types of vegetables.

A white pique collar, white flower and red belt add a touch of excitement to a dark blue crepe model (left) that looks smart enough to double its $5 price tag. The rough orange crepe, with fluted collar and cuffs, achieved its sophistication for the same price, showing that it's the choice and not the expenditure that counts.

RFC Gets SOS as Two-Man Railway Needs Repairing

By United Press
TOLEDO.—The P. & F. has sent an SOS to the RFC. The Pioneer & Fayette—which is the P. & F.—needs $7,000 for a new locomotive because the one it has is worn out.

If the RFC wants to inspect the company's books it may do so—both of them.

If the RFC desires to send a man out to inspect the 13-mile rail line, Earl Snyder, president, said that he'd personally attend to it.

President Snyder, himself, brought the road into being. When he saw that the communities of Pioneer and Fayette, O.—800 and 1,000 population respectively—faced "disintegration" for want of transportation, he acted.

Bought From Junk Firm
Leaving duties at his hardware store to his partner, Snyder bought the railroad, on behalf of stockholders, from a large Columbus, O., firm—the largest junk dealers in Ohio, in fact. A loan from the RFC provided the funds.

The road prospered and at the same time proved a boon to Pioneer and Fayette. Connecting these two points, it carries freight, principally wheat, to the Wabash railroad, midway between the terminals. The Cincinnati Northern at the same point is tapped by a switch.

The P. & F. passes two grain elevators, one wholesale lumber concern, a pickle factory and a Dunkard church. At Fayette it owns a station, but the city council recently took it over for a city hall.

Railroad has Two Employees
Rolling stock consists of a locomotive and a caboose. The road has two employees, Ralph Taylor, whose friends call him "superintendent of maintenance of way," and Harold Hawes, "division superintendent" and "engineer."

Hawes takes the train out for its daily run, but one of Taylor's duties is to go out to see what has happened to Hawes when he is overdue.

"Overdue," like "locomotive," is a relative term on the P. & F. If Harold doesn't get back by night, and doesn't telephone from a farm house, giving his approximate location, he is overdue. If he telephones, however, he is considered on time, regardless of where the train may be.

Locomotive Needs Repairs
Recently, repairs to the locomotive have been eating up the profits. Hence the P. & F.'s SOS to the RFC. The last inspection showed the engine to be in need of a reverse lever arm, a reverse lever arm key, and a new shaft.

Then, there is the chronic trouble, which still persists. When snow is packed between the rails, an underslung air-chamber bumps the locomotive off the track.

The superintendent of maintenance of way is definitely against the locomotive, without reservations.

"There isn't one like it," he said, "anywhere. There never has been and there never will be."

Doctor Warns Race Ebbs as the Unfit Survive

By United Press
CHICAGO.—Dr. Charles B. Reed, Northwestern University obstetrics professor, painting a picture of deteriorating mankind, bluntly asserts that all unfit women should be sterilized.

Otherwise, he says, the human race will become extinct because present-day mothers are bearing children who "can't take it." Blunt and unhesitating, Dr. Reed warns of the dangers of too much "soft living."

"The human race is degenerating, he declares. How far will it degenerate? To extinction—unless a holocaust wipes it out first."

Explained as Evolution
He explains it is a process of evolution. The human race is not as healthy and strong as it used to be.

"The mothers say they don't want their children to have as tough a time as they did, and they do everything to make life comfortable for them."

"The daughters are pampered, and petted. They don't get enough sunshine or exercise. They can't take it the way their grandmothers did."

Reed explains that nature customarily eliminates the unfit. Years ago, physically unfit women died in childbirth, and so did their progeny. Today, they go to hospitals where trained doctors save them. Thus the unfit survive despite nature. Their defects are handed down.

Grouped Into Class
These are the women Dr. Reed believes should be sterilized.

"They are the ones who bear most of the children," he said. The others, the intellectual, careful, hygienic women—the ones who should bear the children don't do it.

"You can't protect the world against fools," he says, angrily. "Most of the subnormal women should be sterilized. But they won't. The human race is like a pack of animals.

"You can't depend on them to use contraceptives, either. You can advise them if you want to, but you can't prevent the wrong people from having children."

He related the case of a woman whose husband earned $35 a week. When she bore her 12th child, and was released from the hospital, Dr. Reed advised her to return in three weeks and be sterilized.

Explaining the evolution, Reed scoffs at the idea that a more intellectual race would have bigger heads. And if the people of the future have no appendices, it would be for the same reason as now—surgical operation. They can keep their teeth in spite of soft foods, he believes, by proper diets.

Ten-Gallon Hats Making Big Hit

The 10-gallon hats of "pioneer" days in Texas are staging a comeback.

It is all because of the Centennial year observance.

Recently the Texas Centennial 10-gallon hat made its appearance in Dallas with the report that the supply was exhausted overnight. Similar reports are being received daily in the state department of information offices here from all parts of the state.

Saturday morning, according to Charles Roster, director of the department, reports were received that the supply of hats available in the Rio Grande valley cities was depleted as rapidly as the hats were received.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large downtown department store. On way to work during the red morning rush hour, Toby met with a good-looking young man. The murmurs of admiration hurried on.

That morning she poses some photographs to be used in an advertisement. MARTY, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face." He had her instead of MARTINE to pose for the pictures and she, also employed at the jewelry counter, is jealous.

JAMIESON, the young man with whom Toby collided on street, tells a friend about the counter. "I'm does not know his name, but he makes a bet I'll have a date with her."

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

In a side street down which Toby Ryan made her way—a brightly enough lighted, but from the noise and glare of venue. She walked quickly, down the block there was a store; Toby turned and went to the boy behind the soda counter. She picked up at her, but Toby passed without a glance. She went rear of the store and entered phone booth.

There was a thick directory, with pages, open on the shelf, turned the pages until she found the one she was looking for. At the top, in small black letters, the name, "Finklewitz, L."

Apparently it was not Mr. Finklewitz's telephone number or address that interested her. She glanced at neither. But was something else on that half sheet of paper on which scribbled with a heavy pen some words:

See time and same place. And wear a pink geranium pinned or left shoulder. My memory ring—Bill.

There was nothing cryptic about message to Toby Ryan. "Same meant 6 o'clock. Same was a cafeteria a few blocks t. And "Bill" could be no one in the world but William and.

The nonsense about wearing a geranium! Toby grinned, reading the message once more. It was always some foolishness from Bill. It was one of those she liked him. He was at from anyone she had ever seen.

Her system of exchanging messages for instance, was one of those. It had come about when Toby wasn't allowed to take telephone calls at the store. Bill had been walking past the drug store one night, talking this problem, when suddenly Bill halted. "Look!" he said, here. Here's how we'll do it.

Bill had drawn her inside the store, pointing to the telephones. Then and there she was born. There were two of them and they picked the one at the end. It was agreed that when

"How about Saturday?" Bill asked. "Like to see a movie or something?"

Bill had a message for Toby he was to write it and slip it between the pages of the directory.

Opening the book, Toby's eye had lighted on a name at the top of the page.

"Finklewitz," she said. "Let's use this page. It will be easy to remember."

THE plan had worked well, too. Both Toby and Bill passed the drug store on their way to and from work each day. Wednesday evenings Toby always stopped to see if there was a message, because Wednesday was the night she and Bill ate dinner together.

They had been doing this for six or seven weeks now. Toby had known Bill longer than that—years, actually. He had lived in the same block in Jackson Heights as Toby's aunt.

Bill roomed with the Gilmores in those days, two houses down the block, and the Gilmores were friends of Aunt Gen. Toby had been introduced to him. Occasionally after that they met on the street and one or the other would say, "Pleasant day," or "Nice weather we're having," or something of the sort. Never anything more than that. Toby had thought Bill was rather good looking. He had crisp, crinkly blue eyes, and she liked the way he wore his hat, the least bit back from his forehead, as though he had jammed it on in a hurry. He was tall—six feet or so under six feet—so that his square shoulders were not too broad. He was a young man who might have played football (he had), but looked as though he would be better at basketball or tennis.

The acquaintance between the two hadn't progressed beyond this point—in fact, it hadn't progressed at all. Toby met Jackson Heights after her aunt's death. She had tried a number of rooming places before she found the small three-you're a photographic model now. That's swell! Some of those girls make a lot of dough, you know."

"But I told you," Toby objected, "it was only because the other girl sprained her ankle. I'm not at all sure they'll use the picture."

"Why not? Sure they will!" The young man paused, studying her. Then he said, "You're a cute little trick, Toby. Did you know that?"

"Thank you, kind sir."

"But I mean it, you are! It's a good thing I'm not in love with you."

"You—in love with me?"

Bill Brandt grinned, shook his head. "Didn't I just say it's a good thing that I'm not?"

"Oh—" There was silence for a moment. Then the girl asked, "Why did you say that?"

"That I'm not in love with you?" Bill helped himself to the corned beef before continuing. "Lots of reasons," he said. "For one thing, if I were in love with you we wouldn't be here. Instead, I'd be taking you some place I can't afford, trying to make an impression. Or else I'd be trying to figure out a way to take you such places. And we wouldn't be having fun, either. People who are in love never do. They're always moaning around or else having fights."

"You seem to know a lot about it, Mister."

"Sure, I do." He paused, then went on, grinning, "From observation—and maybe, well, maybe a little from experience. But none of that stuff for me! I'm no sap, swallowing the old hokum about how two can live as cheaply as one. Not on your life. A guy who gets married these days is licked before he starts."

TOBY grinned. "So saying, the man spurned the poor girl's affections."

Bill nodded. "Right you are, Toby Ryan. Always. Always right." His smile widened, approvingly. "What a girl! You know, there aren't many like you—girls a fellow can have a swell time with, just talking things over, the way we do. They're darned few—"

"Oh, Mr. Brandt," Toby murmured. "This is so sudden—"

"Mug!"

They both laughed—gay infectious laughter that caused heads, here and there, to turn to look at them. Toby said, "Oh, Bill, we do have fun, don't we? Let's never change things. Let's keep them just the way they are. Always. We won't either of us fall in love; we'll just go on—having a good time—"

"Oke!" Bill reached across the table, took her hand in his companionably. "It's a deal!"

Afterward they went to a wrestling match (Bill happened to have passed) and at 11:45 they said good night before Toby's rooming house.

"How about Saturday?" Bill asked. "Like to see a movie or something?"

"Far as I know. Good night, Bill. I'll be seeing you—in the phone book."

He grinned. "G'night, kid." A moment later he was on his way down the street.

Upstairs, in the little third-floor room, Toby undressed quickly and slipped into bed. She smiled as she turned out the light, smiled later, with her head on the pillow, drowsily reviewing the evening. It was a pleasant sort of world, after all. Not much she'd change—

Toby Ryan drifted to sleep, unaware (how could she be?) that 24 hours were to bring, for her, extraordinary changes.

Spring Showers Have Their Merits

Clouds that have been ushering in spring showers are, no exception, helping Mother Nature don her vernal robe. Early rains are giving many a young blade the opportunity to do a Sir Walter Raleigh and help out a damsel in distress. When he found charming Anita Louise stymied by a Hollywood puddle, for instance, Actor Donald Woods picked her up and waded right in. He may pay for his gallantry with sniffling and sneezing, but, as any young man can tell you, it's still a bargain.

College Gives Hints On Getting Work

By United Press STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Pennsylvania State College is offering a new angle on "how to get a job" to senior engineers who face the almost universal problem when they leave school in the spring. Faculty members in industrial engineering teach the technique of interviewing to engineers.

Gleaming shoes, knife-edge creased trousers and clean fingernails are not the only requirements of a successful interview, they point out. Mental alertness and how the prospective employe will fit into the organization are important. The applicant who has a lot of new ideas and "wants to reorganize the whole business" is soon told the "job is filled," while the applicant who shows little or no interest in the position he is after is classed as unprogressive.

Interviewers, the seniors learned, are interested in evidence that the applicant realizes that hard work will be required to get ahead and that a college diploma is only one milestone along the road to business and industrial success.

Sale of Autos Up In New, Old Class, Chevrolet Reports

DETROIT, March 13.—Chevrolet Motor Company today reported retail sales of cars and trucks in the United States in February totaling 70,087. Sales for the year to March 1 total 145,789, a new record for the first two months of a year, the best previous record of 133,999 having been established in 1929. Sales for the same period last year were 87,577.

With the gains in retail sales of new cars, says the Chevrolet report, there have been corresponding increases in the sales of used cars. February used car sales showed an increase of 65,000 units over February, 1935, with a total of 149,698. This is a new high total, the best previous February record having stood at 90,046 units since 1930. Used car sales for January and February total 316,662 units, highest in Chevrolet's history, and nearly double the previous record of 167,055 used car sales in the first two months of 1931.

The increased used car activity, according to a statement by W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, reflects not merely improved buying conditions throughout the country, but the beneficial effects of the company's continuous and systematic campaign of used car advertising in newspapers and magazines.
