New York State Starts Campaign For Motor Safety

ALBANY, N. Y.—The state bureau of motor vehicles has embarked upon an intensive campaign to reduce automobile accidents and fatalities to a minimum in New York State, where never in history has automobile and truck traffic been so heavy.

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Charles A. Hartnett, leading the safety drive, calls attention to the 1936 state legislature. He asserted that "mere enactment will not solve our problems."

During last year there were 2,917 motor vehicle fatalities in the Empire State against 2,975 in 1934, a decrease of 58 deaths, or approximately 2 per cent—a saving of more than one life a week for the year.

America Seen In Own League

LOS ANGELES.—A new "League of the Americas" to replace Latin American participation in the Geneva League of Nations, is the prediction of Dr. Roland Hussey, professor of history at the University of California.

Dr. Hussey, who specializes in Latin American affairs, does not prophesy this will be the direct and immediate result of the inter-American conference to be held at Buenos Aires this fall, but is convinced that it will be a definite step in that direction.

More than 20 American nations have accepted President Roosevelt invitation to attend the conference, Dr. Hussey points out, while to date half a dozen Latin American nations have left the Geneva organization. Others are threatening to follow.

Latin American countries, according to Dr. Hussey, are losing faith in the League of Nations, principally owing to its failure to cope with the invasion by Japan of Manchuria and Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

There Is Zest And Ruggedness In America

The Englishman is famous for taking long walks beside his celebrated lakes, the German for planting himself comfortably in a Bierstube and inhaling sausages and beer, the Italian for gathering in public squares and hollering "Eviva Il Duce!"

And the American is beginning to acquire an equally distinguishing national habit; he likes to get into the car, and drive out into the open country, whenever he gets a chance.

Considering the awful beating that his climate gives him every so often, he must have a strong, ingrained love of nature to do this. For he does not live in a kindly land.

In winter it freezes his bones, and in summer it bakes him to a crisp. It drowns him in floods and dries him up in drouths. It smites him with dust storms and tornadoes, and now and then it gives him the jar of an earthquake.

And yet, in spite of everything, he knows that it is a grand, grand country for a man to live in. The earliest settlers knew it, when they had Indians and tangled forests and swamp fever to contend with; their up-to-date descendants know it, and wheel the family bus out along the country roads on the slightest excuse.

We seldom realize just how effectively our landscape and our climate mold our national character. We take after them, so to speak. If we are vastly unlike our European ancestors, it is because our land is so vastly unlike Europe.

Everything is built to a larger scale over here; it is more spacious, more untamed, more boisterous and rugged.

An English river is an orderly and neat sort of stream, flowing placidly between grassy banks, fit for the meditations of a man like Wordsworth.

The contrast is the same all the way down the line. Our mountains sprawl in jumbled thousand-mile chains, splendid beyond words and always a bit harsh and threatening. Our great inland farm belt rolls on and on for league upon league, big enough to swallow all England without notice; its wheat fields ripple in the sun like a great golden ocean, its corn belt is a limitless green wilderness.

All this has done things to us. It is not for nothing that our heroes of folklore are brawling giants like Mike Fink and Paul Bunyan; that our national game, baseball, is tinged with rowdiness; that while we are generous and friendly, we also are capable of towering anger and heedless cruelty. These things have grown out of our countryside.

And a grand, grand countryside it is. We love it with a vast and inarticulate love.

We seldom bother to say much about it; but from earliest spring to latest fall we crowd the roads with unending lines of cars, look at our endless earth, and breathe the drifting sea of its wine-like air—and understand anew that we are lords of a great land, on which can be built mankind's fairest society.

A woman was branded with the letters, "C. L." Our first thought, that an irate husband who just saw a bill, was registering his protest at the cost of living, was wrong.

TEXAS EMPIRE

Q. Where can collections of early Texas weapons be seen? R. R. Mexico, Mo.

A. In the Centennial exhibits at Dallas, Fort Worth, and Austin, and in almost any museum in the State.

Q. I have been asked about the life of William G. Cooke, for whom this country was named. Will you help me? D. O. Muenster.

A. He came to Texas from Virginia, reaching San Antonio in November, 1835; took part in the capture of the city from the Mexicans in December; on Houston's staff at San Jacinto; in drug business in Houston in 1837; quarter-master-general with Santa Fe expedition in 1840; represented San Antonio in Congress of Republic in 1844; died near Seguin in 1847; buried there but remains to be moved soon to State Cemetery at Austin. He was the first adjutant-general of Texas during Henderson's administration.

Q. Where is the Texas State sanitarium for tubercular patients? A. G., Rankin.

A. At Sanitarium, Texas, near San Angelo. It has facilities for 800. Dr. J. B. McKnight is superintendent.

Q. What countries established embassies or consular agencies in Austin when Texas was a republic? C. B., Killeen.

A. United States, England and France, the latter country building an embassy at Austin, which is still in a good state of preservation.

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE

Cajeton, the son of noble and pious parents, was born at Vicenza in 1480, and at an early age was dedicated to our Blessed Lady. From childhood his holiness was evident, and in later life he was given the title of "the hunter of souls." Having distinguished himself in his studies he left his native town to seek obscurity in Rome, but was there forced to accept office at the court of Julius II. On the death of that Pontiff he returned to Vicenza and dispensed his relatives by joining the Confraternity of St. Jerome, whose members were drawn from the lowest classes. He spent his fortune in building hospitals, and devoted himself to nursing the plague-stricken. To infuse new life into the clergy, he instituted the first community of Regular Clerks, known as Theatines. They devoted themselves to preaching, the administration of the Sacraments, and the careful performance of the Church's rites and ceremonies. St. Cajeton was the first to introduce the Forty Hours Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament, as remedy to the heresy of Calvin. He had the most tender love for Our Blessed Lady, and it is related that his piety was rewarded on one Christmas eve when she placed the Infant Jesus in his arms. When the Germans, under the Constable Bourbon, sacked Rome, St. Cajeton was scourged in an attempt to discover his riches, but these he had long before used to the benefit of his fellow men. Worn out with toil and sickness, he went to his reward in 1574.

The United States soon is to acquire a 1,500 square mile plot of territory in Colorado. It's not too early for Farley and Hamilton to claim it.

New Funds Flow Into the Federal Savings and Loan

WASHINGTON—Reports from 1017 federal savings and loan associations throughout the country show that during the month of June a total of $7,544,700 in savings was invested by the public in these local private institutions for the promotion of thrift and home financing.

The amount represents savings of both old and new shareholders, and indicates growing appreciation of the safety offered to savers through these federally chartered associations, in each of which all investors are protected by insurance up to $5,000. The reporting associations have a total of 568,397 individual investors holding an aggregate of $400,829,100 in shares.

Dividends at an average rate of 3.77 per cent annually were paid by 885 federal associations reporting for the last six months of 1935, after provision for reserves, according to a consolidated statement just completed. Of the total of $7,202,368 in dividends, $6,025,103 was paid to private investors and $770,069 to the Federal Government on its investment in shares in a number of these associations. The associations now are declaring dividends were chiefly newly chartered organizations, including about 50 which had not completed their organization at the end of December, 1935.

During June, lending by the 1017 reporting federal associations registered a substantial increase over previous months, largely as a result of increased interest in home ownership, improved collections, and the augmented loan funds on hand at these institutions. The proportion of lending for new building held their recently attained lead over loans for refinancing of existing mortgages.

The total of $19,691,500 loaned was distributed as follows: $6,025,300 for the construction of new homes, $5,156,800 for the purchase of dwellings, $5,242,500 for refinancing, $1,371,300 for repairs and reconditioning and $1,895,600 for other purposes. As of June 30, these associations held an aggregate of $441,446,100 in mortgage investments, chiefly in small homes. The June figures do not include the activities of 112 other federal associations which were chartered in the past few months.

Many individual associations report striking increases month by month in investments from the public and in lending since they began operating under federal supervision.

Loans by federal associations are made on a long-term basis, providing for principal and interest that will completely retire the debt at the end of the period, which is normally up to 15 or 20 years. To repay a $1,000 loan at 6 per cent interest over 15 years requires a monthly installment of $8.44.

No Change Seen In Engineer For Highway Dept.

By Gordon K. Shearer
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Tex.—Gibb Gilchrist, state highway engineer since 1924, is expected to have a long tenure of office as a result of developments in state politics.

Interests that at first expressed fear that Gilchrist might be removed if Governor Allred were re-elected, turned wholeheartedly to Allred's support in the closing days of the primary campaign.

This was taken to indicate that their fears for Gilchrist's continuation as the head of the highway forces had been quieted.

The State highway engineer is named by the State Highway Commission. The commission is a three-member body and two votes elect the engineer. A governor has one high way commission appointment for each term. In his first term he named Harry Hines, Wichita Falls, to succeed W. R. Eip, Abilene. In January he will have another appointment. Hines was reported to have opposed Gilchrist. D. K. Martin, commissioner from San Antonio, who favors Gilchrist holds a term that expires in January.

No promise about political appointments can be made by a Governor until after his election in the general election. When he is inaugurated he must swear that he has made no promise of office to obtain a vote. But there are legal ways in which surety could be given for Gilchrist's retention.

Commissioner Hines, for instance, might say that he now will favor retention of Gilchrist. Commissioner John Wood, appointed by Gov. Miriam Ferguson will have two years more to serve. His vote, with that of Hines, would retain Gilchrist, regardless of who might be named third commissioner.

That the Governor did not plan to reappoint Commissioner D. K. Martin, San Antonio, was inferred from his campaign speech at Corpus Christi, pledging completion of the Kenedy county short cut to the Lower Rio Grande Valley—a project Martin has not considered pressing.

If the Governor has decided to appoint Martin, Martin will have a record of appointments by four Governors. Gov. Pat M. Neff gave him his first term. Govs. Dan Moody, Ross Sterling reappointed him. Reappointment with such a short time was made possible because Governor Moody shifted the long term in making his appointments.

Derricks Reach Oklahoma Capitol

The march of the oil derricks goes on in Oklahoma City. Several of them, as pictured above, are springing up on state-owned property surrounding the capitol, latest step in the long controversy between city and state. Anxious to preserve the beauty of its capitol grounds, the city had forbidden such drilling, though private operators were permitted to drill nearby. Maintaining that the state should have the benefit of oil it owns, and that companies operating adjoining wells might drain state pools by drilling at an angle, state officials have fought for the right to sink wells on this property.

Lake Ship Sunk In '95 May Be Found

by United Press
SOUTH HAVEN, Mich.—Plans are underway to search for the ship, Chicora, which sank with 24 persons in a storm over Lake Michigan on Jan. 31, 1895. The water-soaked hulk has been reported seen several times by airplane pilots. Allan Chesebro, under whose direction the search will be made, said that an airplane will be used in an effort to locate the ship, believed lying in about 80 feet of water, three miles west of here.

The Chicora carried a cargo of 30 carloads of flour and money estimated to have amounted to about $30,000.

HOUSTON, Tex.—Of 103,784 cattle inspected in Harris county for fever ticks during June, only 184 comprising herds 12 out of 6,862 were found to be infested according to L. J. Wardlaw, chairman of the State Livestock Commission.

Bishop Is Enthroned At a Beauty Shop

by United Press
LONDON — When Dr. Neville Lovett was enthroned Bishop of Salisbury he donned his robes in a beauty parlor.

In doing this, he conformed to ancient tradition. In 1220, Bishop Poore, the first bishop of New Sarum, assumed his vestments on this spot, the site of which is now occupied by a woman's hairdressing shop.

Business was suspended at the shop while Dr. Lovett donned his robes before the ceremony.

Joke Succeeds As Pickpocket Robs Famed Detectives

by United Press
SARAJEVO — Ninety of Europe's most famous police chiefs and ace detectives, attending an international police conference here, were robbed by a pickpocket.

The detectives went out to buy presents in Sarajevo Oriental market. They stuffed the small articles in their pockets and returned to the hotel. Then came the discovery. Nearly every man's pocket had been picked.

The hotel manager was told. He rushed to the telephone to call the police. He had barely asked for the number when Dr. B. Vidovitch, a Sarajevo lawyer and former deputy, appeared with a sack containing the stolen goods.

Dr. Vidovitch had successfully "pulled the legs" of the pick of the world's police forces. He had hired a convicted pickpocket to follow the detectives and rob them.

"Kitchen Talks to Rangerettes"

Star exhibit of the Century of Progress, the General Electric Talking Kitchen, stops the crowds at the Texas Centennial exposition at Dallas.

Speaking for themselves, the modern electric refrigerator, range and dishwasher, vie with each other for public attention. Mysteriously the appliances go into action, illuminated arrows go on and off, spotlights dart from one feature to another—all automatically, for there is no attendant in the kitchen.

Texas Rangerettes Helen Ramsey, LaVee Killman and Mabel Reeks endeavor to solve its mystifying operation. Captain Helen Ramsey, after watching and listening to the appliances go through their acts, exclaimed that she'd never come out of the kitchen if she owned one like the Talking Kitchen.

Operation of the kitchen is controlled by an automatic switch such as is used in the dial telephone systems which synchronizes special recordings and illuminations.

As the electric range talks, its individual features are pointed out. The hi-speed Calrod surface unit lights up with a red hot glow as do also the Calrod oven units. The electric timer dial lights up and actually turns the oven units on and off automatically, showing how a meal may be cooked without the housewife present.

Likewise, the G-E dishwasher tells how it has eliminated the drudgery of dishwashing. As it talks, it starts automatically and at the same time the interior of the machine is illuminated and the spectators can see for themselves how the dishes, silverware and even pots and pans are washed speedily and hygienically in torrents of piping hot water. The dishes, as the dishwasher explains, dry themselves by their own heat.

Aside from the beauty of this all-electric kitchen, the most striking feature is that the voice and synchronized effects automatically shift from appliance to appliance to heighten the illusion of the refrigerator, range and dishwasher actually conversing. The Talking Kitchen closes its interesting program with the refrigerator, range and dishwasher joining in a song, as the result of the sheer joy experienced preparing meals in the modern all-electric kitchen.

The local General Electric refrigerator dealer, George Harper, invites every one in this community to see the Talking Kitchen also the performances of General Electric's famous "House of Magic" which are given hourly from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m. in a large, air-conditioned auditorium in the Electrical and Communications Building.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

"It will all come out in the wash."

Everyone knows the old, old saying, but mothers of lively families know they can't depend on it—not 100 per cent—when it comes to grass stains, fruit juice stains and similar laundry ills. Most of these disfiguring marks can be removed if the right process is followed. It should be done, though, before the clothes go into the regular wash.

Ice cream and frosted drink stains are common in the summer months. These need two treatments before they will disappear. They are usually caused by a combination of sugar, cream and fruit juice coloring. First of all, the cream must be treated with a grease solvent, such as carbon tetrachloride. Then, if the fruit juice is deep-seated, pour boiling water through the spot. If the color left is very faint, washing in soap and warm water will remove it.

To Remove Marks of Oil
Mayonnaise and salad oil are extremely penetrating and oil may even be unnoticeable when wet but show in grease spots or grayish-brown stains when the fabric is ironed. After careful laundering, oil is almost impossible to remove, so it is essential to remove all traces of grease before putting the fabric into water. Treat mayonnaise and oil stains with carbon tetrachloride before washing.

If you set to work to remove a grass stain while it's fresh it can usually be done with soap and water. If it is a day or more old, sponging with denatured alcohol usually is effective. Unwashable materials, of course, should be given the alcohol treatment.

Mildew is another summer stain that is hard to combat. Every once in a while I find that somebody has thrown a damp towel into the clothes hamper and traces of mildew make their appearance. In the early stages of its growth, this stain usually comes out by washing first in cold water, then in hot suds. If, however, the stains are stubborn, white collons and linens may be bleached with a chlorine bleach such as Javelle water. Small scattered spots can be stretched over a bowl of hot water containing a few drops of ammonia. Then, with a dropper, put the bleach right on the stain and immediately rinse the material in the water in the bowl. You may need to repeat this several times. Large spots are more easily removed if they are soaked in a solution of two tablespoons Javelle water to one quart of clear water.

Rinse the Fabric
After using a bleach it is very necessary to rinse all articles thoroughly because the bleach weakens the fabric if it's allowed to remain.

Sunshine is a splendid bleach, too. If you have a place in the sun, try wringing the clothes from the last rinsing water not as dry as you do when you wring from the other waters. The sun will whiten the clothes beautifully as they dry.

PHYSICIAN WARNS DANGERS LIE IN TACTLESS SICK ROOM VISITS AND JOKES TO CHEER PATIENTS

By United Press

CHICAGO — Hearty visitors who enter the sickroom with booming, well-intentioned references to the morgue or operating room actually may become a contributing factor to a patient's death, according to Dr. George B. Lake, editor of Clinical Medicine and Surgery.

"Few people except experienced physicians know how to talk to an acutely sick man," he said, writing in the Radiologic Review.

"Lugubrious anecdotes all too frequently contribute to an unfavorable outcome."

The patient who worries, or is afraid, always has an uphill fight to recovery, the physician said.

"This fear or worry need not be with regard to physical condition. A man may be distressed because he is not carrying enough life insurance; because his rent is overdue.

"A woman may be violently perturbed because she has discovered a few gray hairs or 'crow's feet'; because she fears she is losing her husband's love. Both men and women have died because they feared the loss of friends or social position or had a feeling of remorse for past mistakes.

Urges Careful Study
Such fears and worries, he said, "are not immaterial and foolish and they deserve the earnest attention and study of the physicians who aspire to achieve high and lasting success."

Deeply hidden mental or physical reactions frequently result from acts which the individual recognizes as opposed to his own or the community's code of morals, the physician said.

Emotional instability caused by faulty heredity or dysgenic matings often is an important factor in causing and perpetuating distressing symptoms, Dr. Lake said.

Most of these persons, he said, are "chronics" who for years have been going from one physician to

4-H Club Reporter Writes of His Recent Trip to the Short Course With the Other 4-H Club Members

Johnnie Evans, member of the Stanton Boys' 4-H club, who was chosen the best 4-H club reporter District No. 7, gives an account of his trip to the Farmers' Short Course. Johnnie was a club reporter on the Short Course Daily Star, a newspaper published during the short course. His story follows:

The week following July 20th, out three or four thousand boys, men and women gathered at the A. & M. College of Texas to attend and learn from lectures and see many useful plans for the farm and agricultural activities, also how to overcome some of our everyday agricultural problems.

On Monday morning the groups met in the large auditorium (Union Hall) where "The Centennial Year Farmers' Short Course" is opened. Mr. Walter Jenkins of Houston was the song leader of the group. Every boy and girl in the auditorium thoroughly enjoyed the singing of club songs, and they enjoyed particularly the wonderful way in which Mr. Jenkins had in leading the boys and girls in their songs.

Mr. L. L. Johnson, State Boys' 4-H Club Agent, made a very interesting talk to the boys and girls, which will be of value to many. Each morning different men and women gave talks on various subjects such as "Old Bird and Animal Life," "How to Choose Your Clothes," and other things which were of importance to all of the group. The boys and girls were divided into groups which attended classes and lectures on various subjects. Lectures were given on subjects varying from "Agricultural Machinery" to "How to Kill Farm Insects," along with demonstrations of the various kinds of poisons used on different experience as a reporter on the Short Course Daily Star. May I take this opportunity to thank all of the newspapermen in Eastland County who so generously contributed to my trip to the Farmers' Short Course this year.

Elroy Bethany, member of the Grandview 4-H Club, and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bethany, has become fully convinced that green feed, when buried in the ground in a trench silo, will not "rot" or spoil. Elroy realized what a trench silo would mean on the farm on which he is living. With this idea in mind he is constructing on his father's farm one-half mile south of the Grandview School, a two-ton trench silo, to be filled with hedges the last of this week.

Donald Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jones, and a member of the Morton Valley Boys' 4-H Club, states, "I weighed my beef calf on July 31st and found that he had gained 112 pounds during the past sixty three days, or approximately one and three-fourths pounds daily." Donald and his father have recently finished a new barn on their farm located two miles north of Eastland. Donald expects to move his calf in his new home next week where he expects to make some exceptional gains during the next month.

Jack Walker, member of the Alameda Boys' 4-H Club, has begun fitting his Registered Jersey Heifer for the Eastland County Centennial Fair. Jack states, "If my heifer makes as much improvement the next thirty days as she has the past thirty days, I am going to give someone a tight race for that blue ribbon at the County Fair."

Fogs Are Charted For the Airlines

By United Press
MONTREAL. — Canadian, British and Newfoundland aviation authorities are pursuing a "safety first" policy in preparing for the first North American air mail service across Newfoundland and Canada to Montreal.

Fog is the great enemy in the Newfoundland area, and the British Air Ministry, Canadian and Newfoundland authorities, and Imperial Airways are all co-operating in the preliminary work of studying atmospheric conditions over the mouth of St. Lawrence River and on the coast and inland districts of Newfoundland.

Pilots and meteorologists have been stationed in Newfoundland, since the autumn of 1934, investigating conditions in the upper atmosphere. Although ground data

RESORT HOTEL

ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation.

BILL WARE, travel bureau employee, persuades her to go to Lake Huron. Bill is obviously attracted by Ann, but she gives him little thought.

Ann goes to the mountain resort and at first is lonely. Then she meets RALPH SPRING, head boatman, who tells her he is not interested in girls. Ralph introduces her to JAIME LAIRD, wealthy playboy. Jaime is handsome and attentive. Ann tries to persuade him to do something useful with his life but he laughs at this. She also meets LEFTY FONDS, married but a flirtation.

On her way to go swimming with Lefty, Ann is surprised to meet Bill Ware.

ANN went to the steak roast with Bill Ware and Lefty Fonds. Aimee, the hostess, in her amiable way cornered Bill and made him help with the fire. It was a task he enjoyed. There had been six years since he had last experienced the clear tang of the north woods. After so long in a city office, the kindling of a flame under the stars with pine sticks was an incredible adventure.

Ann watched him closely as he attended to the fire. The tired lines under his eyes seemed somehow to have been erased. In the reddish glow his white face was like that of a blond Viking, looking over a brazier of coals on the prow of a ship.

He had dressed for the part of the fire-tender. He wore an old gray flannel shirt and dungarees. His feet were encased in a species of ancient sandal. In front of the flames his open throat was like a rugged column.

It was a revelation to Ann. The office worker had vanished, and William Ware had become a romantic personage in his own right, like that Viking she imagined. When he rolled up his sleeves she saw well-developed muscles in his arms. Evidently he kept fit in the city.

At intervals Ann saw Bill's eyes following the languid young blond salesman who had somehow monopolized her for this evening. She remembered Bill's hurt look when he had first seen her with another man at the hotel. But Bill hadn't had a chance to talk with her alone.

HE got his chance when Ann walked down to the sandy beach to rub sand in the skillet and clean it—this being regarded as a feminine job. Bill caught up with her, as she dipped her hands into the sands.

"Let me do that," he said, his eyes shining with the glint of the moonlight on the water.

A moment later, busily scouring the vessel with sand, he turned Montreal. Fraser, a native of Newfoundland, flew extensively there before joining Imperial Airways. His colleague, Kent, has had long experience of commercial aviation dating from the early days of the Continental services from Britain. He has also had experience of ground organization. He has had plenty of opportunity of studying the route to Montreal.

Canadians are awaiting with interest the forthcoming trial flights on the North Atlantic service. In addition to work on the eastern section, the ground organization is being prepared for the Trans-Canada Airway, which after mails from Britain have reached Montreal, will carry them by day-and-night services to Winnipeg and Vancouver. A further link in the air-mail chain will be from Montreal to New York.

Tea-Reception Compliments Mrs. Maris Shearer.

Mrs. W. C. Campbell and Mrs. O. E. Harvey, co-hostesses for a tea-reception Wednesday afternoon, honored Mrs. Maris Shearer of Philadelphia, Pa. Guests called at the home of the house hostess Mrs. Campbell, from 5.30 until 7 p. m.

The rooms were aglow with beautifully arranged bouquets in pastel shades, and the summer effect obtained in the arrangements of the tea table.

Against a cool green and white underlay of handsome embroidered linen, a long, narrow lake, fringed with ferns, was arranged, suggesting a summer nook.

Lily pads, birds, overarching flowering branches, tiny trees of asparagus ferns in which nestled birds, all made a lovely picture.

Guests were received at the open door by Mrs. Art H. Johnson, and presented to the receiving line, the co-hostesses, Mrs. Campbell and Harvey; Mrs. E. Roy Townsend, house hostess of the honoree, Mrs. Maris Shearer; Mrs. W. E. Chaney, Mrs. Albert Taylor, and Mrs. Carter of Fort Worth, whose guest of Mrs. Art Johnson.

In the tea room a dainty plate was served of Philadelphia cream cheese, open face sandwiches, with olive ring topping, icebox cakes, frozen mint sherbert balls that chilled the delicious lemonade, frosted mints in pastel hues, that obtained in the refreshments, served on a lace dolly underlay.

Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Milton Lawrence, Miss Roberta Kinnaird, and Miss Geraldine Dabney.

The members of the house party were in delightful summery, long frocks of formal attire.

The calling list included Mrs. Earl Conner, Sr., Dixie Williamson, C. B. Frost, Ben Scott, Tom Flack, W. S. Poe, James Horton, W. A. Martin, P. L. Parker, B. M. Collier, W. B. Pickens, P. B. Bittle, E. E. Sikes, J. F. Collins, F. M. Kenny, Rula B. Connelley, Eugene Whitehurst of San Angelo.

Blind People of Texas Will Be Able to Hear Novels By New State Library System

AUSTIN—Life will be happier for many blind people of Texas through the beneficence of Mrs. Edith Sweeney Giles of Houston. She has donated the transportation that will bring 233 talking book machines to the state to be added to 50 now served from the state library.

Miss Hazel M. Beckham, Tyler, secretary of the state commission for the blind, and Miss Adele Mitchell, who keeps the books circulating, are both enthusiastic about them.

The machines look like a combination of a radio and the old-fashioned talking machine that preceded radio. The "books" are plate-like records like those that ground out "Dardanella" or "Wind That Blew My Gal Away."

They differ from the old phonograph records, being timed to a reading cadence. They are labeled with letters on one side and in Braille on the other, so they can be picked out by blind people.

Lloyd C. Douglas' novel, "Magnificent Obsession" is the book most in demand at this time among blind readers. Miss Mitchell does not attribute the demand to its story of regained eyesight as there is similar demand in other type libraries. Fiction is more in demand than travel, biography, science, poetry or classics. The Bible records circulate rapidly but the demand for them does not equal the call for fiction. Blind Milton's "L'Allegro" and "Il Penseroso" are available but not his sonnet on his blindness.

Tragically, Humphrey Cobb's "Paths of Glory" was sent to a client who had been blinded in the war. "Please send me no more books about the war," he requested of Miss Mitchell. "I am trying to forget it."

One blind reader is especially fond of Shakespeare. He has read all the plays of which records are available and asks for others.

Because the records have been vocalized by readers who understand the passages thoroughly the blind reader frequently gets more out of his reading than the sight reader.

This is true particularly of the clients who "read" Shakespeare or Browning. The records are speeded at ordinary reading tempo. The hearer, however, can hasten or retard the records, just as was possible with phonograph records.

Ten to twelve records are required to complete an ordinary length modern novel. "Magnificent Obsession" required 14 records. "Jane Eyre," a typical old-length novel, required 34. Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" is on 26 records. All the records necessary to complete the hearing of a novel are sent out together. The blind reader does not have to wait for a story to "be continued in our next."

A group of 20 records gives them the Old Testament, and 26 1/2 carry the New Testament.

The yacht will be escorted by two destroyers.

Trade Is Stifled Between the U. S. And Australians

By United Press

CANBERRA. — By adopting a drastic import licensing system, the Australian government has taken steps to offset its unfavorable trade balance with the United States, which since 1929 has varied from $35,000,000 to $125,000,000 annually.

While the new system will be extremely detrimental to American export trade, government officials declare Australia had no other alternative, because the United States did not negotiate a trade treaty with the Commonwealth. However, efforts to reach an agreement have not been dropped.

In accordance with the principles of the Ottawa Conference the restrictions will not apply to imports from any part of the United Kingdom or any other part of the British Empire, with the exception of Canadian motor units. On the other hand, the United States, the leading exporter of products to Australia, will be the nation hardest hit.

Besides the necessary license for importing from the United States definite quotas have also been fixed on various articles. The importation of motor units virtually is the only article on which a lower quota is not established. They can still be imported to the extent of 100 per cent of the amount of imports for the year ending April 30, 1936.

The importation of typewriters, however, will be decreased to 75 per cent of the imports for the past year.

In justification of the action which the Australian government has taken, officials point out that for the period of 1929-30, the adverse trade balance with the United States averages $125,000,000 a year.

For the 10 years ending in 1934-35, the average unfavorable yearly trade balance with America was

Texas History Thrills Crowds

One of the thrilling features of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas is "The Cavalade of Texas," a stirring drama of Lone Star history under six flags, which is presented daily on the world's largest stage by a cast of 400 members. Gerda Egloff, above, depicts a settlers' stand against an Indian raid.

$90,000,000. During the five years of the depression beginning in 1930-31 this was reduced to an average of $35,000,000 a year.

For the current financial year, despite an increase in wool exports from Australia to the United States, it is estimated that the unfavorable trade balance will be between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000.

Repeated efforts on the part of the Australian government to remedy this situation by the negotiation of a trade treaty with the United States have failed, it is declared. It is for this reason, government officials assert, that Australia had no alternative except to take import restriction measures against American products. The Australian government, it is asserted, as far back as June, 1934, called the attention of the United States to the untenable situation as far as Australia was concerned, and suggested the negotiation of a trade treaty that would balance up exports and imports between the two countries.

Sir Henry Gullett, minister in charge of trade treaties, has announced that he will continue his efforts to reach some amicable settlement with the United States.

Among a few of the more important lines of American exports that will be affected by the new system are automobiles and accessories, radio sets and equipment, electric refrigerators, canned fruits and vegetables, shoes, clothing, washing machines, iron pipes and plumbing fixtures, cine projectors, steel plates and typewriters, artificial silk cut goods, guns and rifles, electric fans, writing and typewriting paper, and machinery of virtually every kind.
