LOCAL MERCHANTS TO HELP OKRA CELEBRATE

This Bunch Is Not Dead, But Merely Sleeping

'Old Rip' Had Nothing On Them; He Slept No Sounder But Just Longer.

At a meeting held in the offices of the Board of City Development Thursday afternoon at which 13 men were present, six of whom were merchants of the city and which was marked by the customary listlessness and lethargic inactivity during what was previously announced as a "discussion" of plans for a Fourth of July celebration.

Art LaMan, who first presented the idea to the Merchants Association, spoke on the possibilities offered in the way of a celebration here on July 4th.

Without taking the trouble to find out what the meeting was about he expressed himself as "not being against it," but said that he believed it would not be possible to do whatever it was the members were trying to do. He added, however, that if they should desire they could go ahead with it anyway.

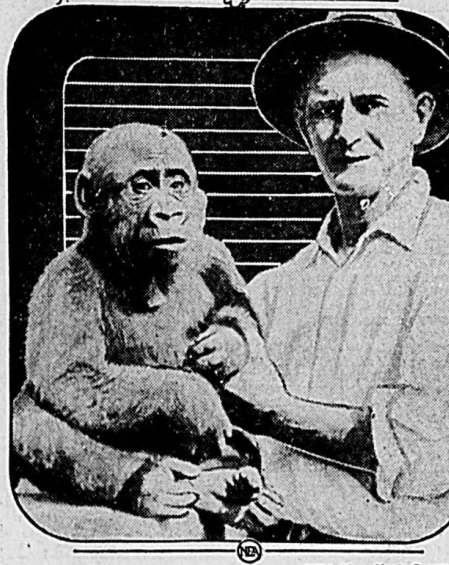

The proposition made by LaMan was then explained to the secretary and he put it to a vote of the assembled members, asking all who favored a celebration in the city to let it be known by saying "aye."

There were no "ayes." He then asked all who were opposed to let it be known by saying "no."

The silence was so deep, as one man later expressed it, that one could have heard his hair growing. LaMan, apparently thinking that the association members were asleep, repeated his talk, making it louder and longer.

It was again put to a vote by the secretary and received the same "boisterous" vote as before. A motion was then made by W. H. Madden and seconded by another member that a fund be raised to purchase four shovels with which to start burying the association in the city.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 20.—Twenty addresses in six days will comprise Ross Sterling's intensive political stump campaign in East Texas next week.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., June 20.—Senator Thomas B. Love told an audience that gathered here last night to hear him speak in the interest of his campaign for governor that the hardest fight he ever waged was to "prevent West Texas from being disfranchised in the democratic primary elections because she voted generally and overwhelmingly against turning the Tammany Tiger into the White House in 1928."

Mrs. Bryce said the robber obtained a small amount of money, a hat and a gun and was ready to leave when he fired into the street. She said she supposed he fired at Billingsley.

Forceful Sermons Drawing Large Crowds To Revival

Indications are that the largest audiences for the Friday night and Saturday night services at the Baptist revival according to pastor W. T. Turner, who states that the forceful sermons of Rev. R. E. Day are drawing larger and larger audiences with each passing service.

Rev. Mr. Day is unique in his methods. He seldom announces a sermon theme in advance, though he has announced that next Tuesday will be Clean-Up-Day. He keeps his audience wide awake with his forceful preaching, which is punctuated with terse common-sense statements spiced with clean, wholesome wit and humor.

He announces at each service that he guarantees satisfaction, that any who are not pleased with the sermon can, upon application, get back the nickel dropped into the collection plate. On propositions of any kind have been made to date, not even an opportunity has been given for church membership.

'T' Girl Gets In Dutch With Boss And Her Fiance

DALLAS, Tex., June 20.—Impulsive, red-headed Clara Bow of the movies is going back to Hollywood convinced that her visit to Dallas has caused only trouble and sorrow.

She had her five trunks packed today, and by midnight expected to be on her way toward the screen capital, where she will have a great many more matters to straighten out than those which brought her to the South.

She was leaving behind her a young, and handsome, "Dallas boy friend" who probably heaved a sigh of relief as he began the task of gathering up the loose ends of his business, which he said had been "totally ruined" by publicity attending her visit.

"It's been all wrong," said the "T" girl. "I'm not a home wrecker. I don't care for him any more. I'm not in love with any man. I didn't mean to harm any one."

Her fiance, Harry Richman, New York night club owner, called her on long distance last night and demanded "the straight of this story about you and that doctor."

The suspect was arrested in a room on Tenth street, near Green. His name was said to be Joseph Clarke, and he is supposed to have escaped from the Creedmore state hospital for the insane on Long Island.

Clarke, according to police, escaped June 3, 1929, from the Creedmore hospital.

When taken into custody Clarke had in his possession letters similar in some ways to those mailed to New York papers by the maniac slayer. He has been successful in eluding pursuers, however. It was the tracing of one of his letters, sent to F. W. Clark, Green's Village, L. I., not far from the

The merchants of Eastland have agreed to help in furnishing something to eat or, if that is not satisfactory to the club members sponsoring the entertainment, will donate a small quantity of merchandise to be disposed of by the club, thereby helping to raise money.

The candidates have been invited to be present and to make short talks to the gathering. A time limit will be set on campaign speeches, however, and a master of ceremonies will be on hand to introduce any candidates who wish to speak and to act as timekeeper to see that they do not use more than the allotted period.

Off Guns And Gas Masks Needed By National Guard

DALLAS, Tex., June 20.—Equipping Texas National Guardsmen with saw-off shotguns, gas masks and steel helmets where they are used for riot duty has been recommended by Col. L. E. McGee, commander of the 112th Cavalary, as a result of his experience in dealing the Sherman mob violence last month.

"Blind" gas rather than tear gas bombs are favored by Col. McGee, because the blind gas incapacitates the victim and enables it to be made more readily.

The next time you go to the postoffice take a glance around the lobby and note how many boxes you see with all or a portion of the glass broken out. This is no reflection on the postmaster as he is not required to keep up the furniture.

MOMENTS WE'D LIKE TO LIVE OVER—THE BEGINNING OF AN EPIDEM

scene of the two murders, that enabled the sleuths to capture him. Authorities said Clarke has lived here for the past five months. "You won't take me back," he screamed repeatedly as the five detectives seized him. Clarke put up a desperate battle but was finally subdued and brought to the detective bureau.

He refused to discuss the murders of Noel Sowley and Joseph Moynzinski. He mumbled about a pretty "blonde nurse," however, and police pointed out that the maniac mentioned a blonde nurse in his letters to a New York newspaper.

Further mention of the nurse was found in 200 mimeographed letters seized in his room. They bore a Brooklyn, N. Y., return address and were addressed to persons in New York City. One of them was marked with the name of the Queens district attorney and it asked that habeas corpus action be started against the authorities of the Creedmore Institution.

After Clarke was taken to the office of district attorney John Monaghan, where assistant district attorney Charles Kelley began to draw up extradition papers, Clarke signified his willingness to waive extradition and will be given an immediate hearing before Magistrate Daniel Oswald in Central police station.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Another letter written by the mysterious murderer who calls himself "3-X" was held by police who made every effort to protect the lives of seven unidentified persons, marked only by the mysterious numbers which have characterized former notes.

The letter sent yesterday to the New York Evening Journal said: "W. R. V-8 of C. P. has returned the Philadelphia XV34 to me to-night after reading your paper—also $37,000 of the blackmail money—Thanks to God, if I may use his name."

"This means the following persons will be started: "W. R. V-8 College Point. "S-12 College Point. "K-2 Brooklyn. "Z-3 (the woman in question, the tall blonde). "M-5 N. Y. C. "XXXAY (NYC police department detective)."

"The following document still is missing—NJ 4-3-44— and $39,000—for this document the following people still are marked for death: X-14, X-21, Y-2, L-6, X-7, X-1, V-4."

Apparently the murderer thus eliminated one person in his original death list of 14 persons named previously.

The letter continued, giving Joseph Moynzinski's number as R-9 and Noel Sowley as X-4. Both were killed as they sat in automobiles with girl friends.

After a day of tracing clues, many of which were believed the work of cranks, police were called to Brooklyn where an unidentified man shot Morris Horowitz, 50, and beat his wife with the butt of a gun, leaving him unconscious in his automobile.

Baptist Church There will be no break in the revival services except that the Saturday morning service will be omitted. We urge all to attend Friday and Saturday nights, as Day will deliver two of his best messages at these two services.

The Sunday School will meet as usual at 9:45 a. m. B. Y. P. U. as usual at 7:00 p. m. Sunday's services at 11:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. Let every member of the church be present Sunday and let us all put our best into the second week of the revival.

We greatly appreciate the fine spirit of co-operation shown by members of the other churches. All are invited to come. It should be known that the overlapping of two revivals in Eastland is not caused by any lack of co-operation but results from the fact that the pastors agreed to run simultaneously but could not secure helpers for the date agreed upon.

To The Voters And Taxpayers Of Eastland County

Because of a certain false statement which has been circulating in Commissioners' Precinct No. 1, by one R. H. Bassett, who is a candidate for commissioner of said precinct No. 1 and in view of the fact that said statement, if true, would be a reflection on all the members of the Commissioners' Court, we feel that the citizenship is entitled to a true statement concerning the transaction. It is with much hesitancy that we issue this statement, but in fairness to the citizens of this precinct and for the sole and only purpose of making the true facts known is it issued.

Mr. Bassett is circulating the report that Commissioner Cooper caused E. S. Pritchard & Company to be paid $4000.00 for making a certain map; that the map had not been paid but that the $4000.00 had been paid.

The facts are: Last fall the Commissioners' Court, in order that it may set all taxable property on the tax roll, contracted with E. S. Pritchard & Company for the making of a complete record and map system showing all pipe-lines, refineries, tank farms, water lines, owners of all producing oil and gas leases, producing wells, abandoned wells and all public utilities in Eastland county. That on April 25th, 1930 said maps and records were completed, presented to and approved and accepted by the Commissioners' Court, all members thereof being present, at which time the Court by Order No. 21, which was then placed of record in Volume No. 10, at pages 54 and 505, authorized the issuance of a voucher for $4000.00 in payment for said work, due February 15, 1931, without interest. That said order has been on the minutes of said Court subject to the inspection of anyone at any time since it was passed. The said maps and records have been at all times since they were approved and accepted available to those dealing with tax matters for Eastland county and may be seen by any one who desires to see same at any time and those who are interested are invited to inspect same. We are perfectly willing for it to be left to the judgment of the people as to whether or not there has been any misapplication of funds, (as has been reported by Mr. Bassett).

Mr. Bassett is now and has been circulating the (false) report (hereinafter mentioned), even though he had been informed by our deputy tax assessors before he ever circulated said report that the maps had been made and where they could be found which fact is verified by two lifetime citizens of Eastland County as is fully shown by affidavit hereinafter set out.

Furthermore, it has ever been the practice of the Commissioners' Court not to pay any bill until after same has been properly audited and approved by the County Auditor, either for labor or material until the labor has been performed or material furnished, this being further verified by a statement made by the County Auditor which follows this statement.

Affidavit of Deputy Tax Assessor THE STATE OF TEXAS; County of Eastland.

Before me, the undersigned authority, on this day personally appeared John Horn and C. J. O'Brien, known to me to be credible persons and also known to me to be Deputy Tax Assessors of Eastland County and were such on June 9, 1930, and who after being by me duly sworn, upon their oath depose and say: That on June 9th, 1930 one R. H. Bassett came into the Tax Assessor's office of Eastland County where we were then at work and asked, "Are those maps which the County had made showing the location of pipe lines, etc. in this office?" That we both told him that they were not in the Assessor's office at that time, but did tell him where the maps were.

(Signed) JOHN HORN, C. J. O'BRIEN. Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 18th day of June, 1930. (Signed) IMOGENE HATTEN, A Notary Public, Eastland, Co., Texas. (SEAL)

Statement by W. S. Michael, County Auditor

The report which I have been informed is being circulated in Precinct No. 1, Commissioners' Precinct No. 1, that a $4,000.00 claim against the County filed by E. S. Pritchard & Company for making a map of Eastland County, was ordered paid by the Commissioners' Court and a warrant issued therefor before the map was completed, is untrue. Before claims are allowed by the Commissioners' Court it is necessary under the law for them to be examined and approved by the County Auditor. I approved the claim above referred to after examining the map, a copy of which was then and is now filed in my office, and other data required by the contract between the County and E. S. Pritchard & Company to be furnished. The map shows the location of all pipe lines, refineries and tank farms in the County, and other data compiled shows the record owners of all producing oil and gas leases in the County, a list of all wells and their daily production, etc.

Statement of V. V. Cooper, County Commissioner Prec. 1. In addition to the above false statement Mr. Bassett has been and continues to make and circulate various and sundry other false statements which, he claims, are such gross irregularities as would justify your voting against me for Commissioner which statements are just as untrue and absurd as the one hereinabove referred to.

red to wherein he accuses me and the Court of mis-applying funds. These statements are not only untrue and absurd, but silly and ridiculous. I would not impose upon the good people of this precinct to attempt, in this article, to answer the many unfounded statements he has made. I sincerely trust that no one will permit any of these untrue statements to influence them in casting their vote against me. It is true, I have made mistakes, but I have at all times been honest and conscientious in the discharge of my duties, striving always to do what I felt was to the best interest of Eastland county. I invite each and every voter to make inquiry and find out just why the authority of these statements is not now in the employ of Eastland county and why he is opposing me in this campaign.

My record as a public official is open to the public and every citizen and taxpayer is respectfully invited to carefully investigate and closely inspect same, and upon this record, I earnestly solicit your support.

CHAPTER VIII

Judy took one look at Alan Steyne's face and fled. She went into her own room and stood under the little window set high in the slanting roof. Her emotions were too many and too complex for her to analyze them; but she was sure that foremost among them was joy because Chummy was herself again, and because she was so lovely, so irresistible, and Alan must fall in love with her now, if he had not done so before.

But, as she stood there, her face set and pale under the patches of paint, her lips trembled a little. Her thoughts leaped involuntarily back to that one perfect night of the dinner and the musicale and the violets, and tears that she struggled to keep back made her eyes smart and tingle.

Chummy put her head in at the door.

"Judy, what are you doing? Come along. You've been away ages and ages!"

Judy smiled into the transfigured face with the silver flaxen hair and the golden-brown eyes that were so wonderful since they had lost their vacant look. She followed her friend into the other room.

She did not look directly at Alan, although she spoke to him in her gay, hoarse voice.

"Well, this is a great day, isn't it, Mr. Steyne?"

"Judy," put in Chummy excitedly, "did you know that Alan was coming back? It's all so wonderful—just like a fairy tale!"

"A little bird whispered something about it," the other girl answered, laughing. "You know I didn't expect you back so early today. I was preparing Mr. Steyne, you see—telling him he mustn't startle you, because you'd been ill."

"Alan has been telling me all about his travels, Judy," said the deep, bell-like voice, now as charged with color as the lovely face was with life. "I can hardly believe it's so long since he went away; but it's splendid to think that he's had such a wonderful time!"

Judy was uncertain how to answer, so she gave her friend a hug and said gently:

"You see, Chummy, dear, dreams do come true. Well, and when are you going to get married?"

"Oh, Judy!" exclaimed Chummy, rosy with shyness. "We haven't thought of such a thing yet. It's just enough that Alan is back!"

She had gained since her recovery, among other qualities that surprised Judy into wondering admiration, a reserve that she had never displayed in her childish state. The younger girl felt her friend withdrawing herself into realms where she could not follow. There were dignity and authority about her. There were many other things, too, that Judy would never understand—stores of knowledge in a well-trained mind that were drawn on once more by the revived intelligence, and the desire for books, and the appreciative sensibilities of the artist directed upon every subject in nature and human life.

After the first embarrassment at Judy's question about their marriage, Chummy suddenly became self-possessed. Her beautiful face went grave and quiet, and she looked at her friend, as Judy put it, "as if she had suddenly gone to live in the next street."

"Judy," she said, "I want you to tell Alan about me—I mean about my losing my memory, and being ill, and all that. Somehow, when I try to tell him, I can't find the words; but I want him to know. I still feel rather queer about it, almost as if I'd been born all over again."

Judy looked at Alan and poured out jerky sentences in a great hurry.

"I wasn't there at the start, Mr. Steyne," she said; "but I believe that soon after you went away Chummy was very ill, and when she got better she'd lost her memory. She was well and strong again, but she just didn't remember anything about that time. And that's all there is to it. Then, the other day, when she had pneumonia and nearly died, her memory came back."

"But, Judy, how did I live?" interrupted Chummy, with a puzzled air. "My old aunt, I want to see today asked me that. I don't think I had any money."

"Oh, yes, you had," said her friend. "It lasted a long time," she added vaguely. "There wasn't much to spend it on."

"But now, Judy?"

Chummy's golden-brown eyes compelled an answer.

"Oh, that's all right—everybody at the cafe loves you so, Chummy, dear. They were only too pleased to—"

"You mean that I've been living on charity?" asked Chummy, with a touch of proud revolt.

At this Judy flared up.

But as she stood there her lips trembled a little. Her thoughts leaped back to that one perfect night.

"If you call it charity when a lot of people adore you, and would do anything in the world to keep you well and happy, and simply give you every little thing they can do for you! I call it something else."

A very humble look came into Chummy's proud face. In the years of her mental stagnation she had acquired a certain way of ordering people about and taking things for granted that was not natural to her.

"Oh, Judy," she whispered, "how wonderful you've all been to me! I'm beginning to understand. I must have been quite helpless and like a child. I suppose I wasn't mad?" she added anxiously.

"Of course not!" was the emphatic answer. "What an idea! And now that you're well again, everything will be all right. You can work, and we'll all be happy and jolly as the day is long!"

"Yes," Chummy said, "I believe I can work again—now."

Her eyes rested for a moment on Alan Steyne's face. The young man rose to go.

"What about the cafe tonight?" Judy asked. "I've almost promised to take Chummy there. She hasn't been there since her illness, you know, and the boys are mad to see her again. Chummy"—she looked at the other girl with a touch of anxiety—"do you remember all the boys—Tony Leigh and Michael Stone and Johnny Plannel, and all the others?"

"Yes, I remember them, of course," Chummy replied; "but it seems a very long time ago. Tony Leigh did wonderful caricatures, and Michael Stone painted that glorious 'Venus Quarrelling with Adonis' that the Academy turned down and the Paris Salon hung on the line."

Judy gave a sad little laugh.

"They're all the same in one way, Chummy—they're failures, every one of them, according to the world. The only one who did anything at all was Vincent Stornaway, who simply gave up trying, and now paints millionaires and their wives. His women are all satin and diamonds, and, as he says, he manages to make them look just a little bit haughty. He makes ten thousand a year, but he hardly ever comes to the cafe. Well," she added, looking from one to the other, "what about tonight?"

"It will be lovely!" said Chummy. "I'm simply dying to see them all again."

"Of course," put in Alan. "Clarissa must go and see all her friends. What time shall we meet?"

Judy named the hour. As the young man left the room, he held out his hand. She had to put hers in it, and she knew from the swift look he gave her that it was not because of Chummy that he would be at the Cafe Turc that night.

Miss Morley, the aunt with whom Chummy had communicated since her recovery, had invited her niece to go across to the Italian Riviera with her, but Chummy had declined. She was quite strong, and, since Alan had come back, she was itching to get to her long-neglected work again. Everybody, Alan included, told her that she could paint; and she had the feeling that to get to work would complete the reconstruction of her life.

Chummy had gone to spend Miss Morley's last day in New York with her at her hotel, and Alan Steyne, knowing of it, came to find Judy just before lunch time. She was just about to go to the cafe.

"Come to lunch with me, please," he said. "We'll go somewhere where we can talk."

This was the second day after the evening at the cafe, where Chummy had had a reception that might easily have paralyzed a queen used to the adulation of her subjects.

"Oh!" said Judy, with her purple eyes fixed anxiously on Alan. "I don't know. What is it you want to talk about?"

"You," he said boldly.

He had a very determined look on his face, and she gave in with a sigh.

"You are making it awfully difficult," she said.

They went to one of the big restaurants, where, as Alan said, they would be lost.

Judy wanted no food. She played with what Alan ordered, and tapped her little fingers on the table in time to the music of a noisy orchestra. Her face met his eyes, tense with the inflexible spirit that was stronger than any human desire.

"We must have it out," he said. "I don't understand you," she answered. "Chummy loves you just the same as ever."

"But I don't love her."

"I hate you when you say that!" said Judy. "How can you help loving such a girl as Chummy? She's not only perfectly lovely, but she knows oceans and oceans of things. She belongs to another world than mine."

"The world you belong to is good enough for me, Judy," said Alan, setting his teeth. "You're driving me crazy!"

"But," she said with transparent simplicity, "you must have seen that everybody knows you belong to her. Think of the boys at the cafe! It was just like someone coming home when you came; and only a few of them had really known you. And" she ended with her unanswerable statement—"and Chummy has been waiting for you all these years."

Oldest 'Modern' At Age of 105 Gives Advice

Mme. Charlotte de Golier Davenport Still Enjoys Life of Accomplishment

CHICAGO, June 21.—Qualifying as one of the oldest "moderns," Mme. Charlotte de Golier Davenport, who was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, 105 years ago, is here on her third visit to this city.

Madame Davenport reminisces about her first visit to America in 1880, and recalls the 50-year interval between that visit and her present one, has not wrought a very great change in her active life.

This Russian woman still does things which would stump many a modern maiden. She enjoys nothing more than a horseback ride over the hurdles, she plays a creditable game of billiards, and paints in oils and water colors. This is only a starter, for she has a knowledge of the Russian, French, German, Spanish, Polish and English languages, and can quote at length from the Latin and Greek poets. She is an accomplished performer at the piano.

Until recently she rolled her own cigarettes. She has most of her original teeth except a few upper ones lost when she fell from a horse when she was 90. Two years ago she was blinded by poison ivy, but has regained almost normal sight through careful treatment.

She enjoys classical music, reads daily, attends the theatre frequently, and has a set of health rules which have stood her in good stead during her lifetime. She advises impetuous youth and dyspeptic old-age alike to "curb the emotions, keep the body clean, use the body and brain completely and then rest both, and eat sparingly."

Madame Davenport looks back on a past which also was full of activity. She was married at 15, widowed at 16, and married again at 18. She studied medicine at the Sorbonne and the University of Vienna, obtaining degrees from both institutions. Nine of her 11 sons are living.

She was widowed a second time at the age of 37. Her present husband, William H. Davenport, is 53, and Madame forgets her colorful past and her no less remarkable present long enough to add that "William is a nice boy."

Old Bibles

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 20.—Six old Bibles, one of which was printed in 1491, the year before Columbus discovered America, have recently been purchased by the Texas Christian University library from a German book dealer.

Four of the Bibles are written in Latin, while the other two are in English. One of the English books was printed in 1613, two years after the King James' Bible was translated. The 1491 Bible, in Latin, is the oldest book in the T. C. U. library.

The bill for the six Bibles came to 117 German marks, or $100.

Have Accident Record Of Note

The motor bus is providing highway safety examples, which, if followed by the motorist, will reduce accidents to a minimum.

"The bus driver has a vastly better record, mile for mile, than the private motorist," says Collier's weekly in its lead editorial entitled: "Consider the Other Fellow," in a recent issue.

"During the last twelve months all records for motor accidents were broken and within the single year road accidents killed almost as many Americans as were lost from battle wounds during the World War," it was further stated.

Bus lines of the United States have an excellent accident record. The Southland Greyhound Lines, serving Texas, operating a network of lines over 3035 miles, "traveling around the world in a day," has one of the most outstanding records of the entire country.

The Southland has never had a railroad crossing accident. In the entire history of the company's operations there has not been a single passenger fatality, according to officials who call attention to the Collier's editorial.

It was stated further in the editorial, which points out the leading bus companies are taking in promoting highway safety for all, that "all sorts of accidents are reported, even the most trivial scraping of fenders, and yet during seven weeks of a recent safety contest there was only one accident for every 47,375 miles driven."

The Southland points out that during last month it operated

Housewife or Grocer

Whose interest should come first

A & P, though a grocer itself, votes for the housewife. She has a right to as much good food as her money can buy under the most favorable conditions.

Not everyone takes this view. By some strange reasoning certain people see harm to human welfare in cutting your food bill. A & P cuts your food bill to the minimum. So these people are against A & P.

They are all for raising the standard of living—provided their profits go up the same slope. How the housewife is to pay her part . . . that, they say, is her affair, not the grocer's.

A few misguided persons have taken up the cry, shouting "Away with low profits!" as loudly as, when it suited their purpose to denounce profiteers, they shouted "Away with high profits!"

But A & P sticks to its knitting. Its job is the same today as it was seventy years ago . . . to make it easier for more housewives to buy the best food.

That's A & P's story in a nutshell.

 Johnson's Washington were given a little consideration as pennant contenders in prognostications, but ready play has kept them at the top since the season and the acquisition of Crowder, Helms, Manush and Green has made the team a serious contender.

 MARION, O., June 18.—The magnificent Harding Memorial, tribute of the nation to the late President Warren G. Harding, has been completed and is ready for dedication.

Five years have elapsed since the tedious construction program began and though the memorial proper was completed in 1929, its elaborate landscaping and interlocking boulevard system were not finished until this year.

Plans for the formal dedication are indefinite. President Hoover has been asked and has signified he will deliver the dedicatory address and the Harding Memorial Association, which has charge of the memorial, is awaiting his convenience. This is expected some time this summer when the pressure of Mr. Hoover's executive duties is lessened.

It was shortly after President Harding's death that the memorial plan was conceived, and within a few months public and private contributions, coming from throughout the land made possible its fruition.

The bodies of President and Mrs. Harding have been interred in the memorial sarcophagi since early in 1927, after their removal from their temporary resting place in the mausoleum of Marion Cemetery.

Each rests in a concrete vault, beneath massive marble slabs in the center of the Georgian marble edifice. Forty-eight columns of marble, each representing a state, tower above the tomb.

The Memorial is of Grecian architecture, circular in shape, and was erected at a cost of $800,000.

Harding Memorial Ready For Dedication At Marion

By UNITED PRESS
 MARION, O., June 18.—The magnificent Harding Memorial, tribute of the nation to the late President Warren G. Harding, has been completed and is ready for dedication.

Five years have elapsed since the tedious construction program began and though the memorial proper was completed in 1929, its elaborate landscaping and interlocking boulevard system were not finished until this year.

Plans for the formal dedication are indefinite. President Hoover has been asked and has signified he will deliver the dedicatory address and the Harding Memorial Association, which has charge of the memorial, is awaiting his convenience. This is expected some time this summer when the pressure of Mr. Hoover's executive duties is lessened.

THE SUCCESS OF A HOSTESS depends upon her ability to make others feel at home; that of a cigarette, upon better taste.

HOW ELSE EXPLAIN Chesterfield's constant gains, its ever-mounting popularity with smokers everywhere?

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE for the delicate mildness and rich aroma that belong to Chesterfield, nor for Chesterfield's unique blend and cross-blend. "In a cigarette it's TASTE!" Yes, and in a Chesterfield, it's... "TASTE above everything".

But science has not been particularly successful in solving many of the deeper problems associated with its own service. Where it ought to be, in harmony with its own principles, constructive, it has been, in large measure, destructive. Its implements and its agencies have been used too often not to benefit, but to destroy men and to make the conditions of their life not easier, but harder.

But the preaching and the living of the Gospel have been vital factors and forces despite all the shortcomings and defects of the religion of which this earnest preaching and practice have been a part. Wherever the Gospel has been fulfilled and earnestly proclaimed, it has produced much the same results, whether it be among the savages in the heart of Africa, or in the slum regions of a great city, or in the social and intellectual circles of the more highly favored and called.

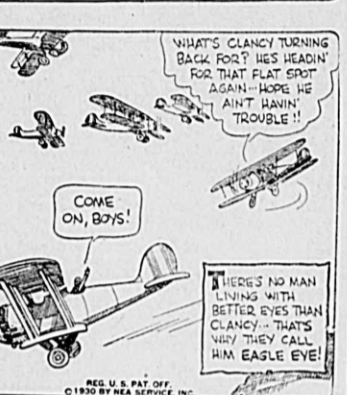

The man of wealth who hears the call of Christ becomes an humble and earnest servant of his fellowmen; the man of education a teacher of his fellowmen.

With the secularization of so much of our life and education today we are apt to forget the source from which these deepest influences in our civilization were derived. We do not always find it easy to see how closely the Gospel in its proclamation and its living, has been associated with the betterment of human life, yet it is not too much to say that the great fruitful streams of our civilization have for the most part had their source in religious conviction and in the response to the commission such as Jesus gave to His disciples.

Work That Isn't Finished
The task that is still before the world is the task of realizing and fulfilling that commission. Because the difficulties are great, there is today a tendency to recoil from the worldwide nature of the Christian task. Because the problems of the foreign mission field are more acute and complex than ever before, we tend to withdraw and leave non-Christian nations subject to all the evil and worse influences of the so-called Christian nations, but without a strong and clear manifestation of the things that are most worth while in our civilization.

Such an attitude is weak and cowardly; far better the spirit of a Judson, or a Livingston, or a Paton, perceiving the place and the need of the Gospel in all contacts of our life with the life of others.

The great commission of Jesus is still real for His followers, and their response to it is still the greatest of the reality of their faith in Him and the courage and quality of their discipleship.

The jewels compose a complete set of adornments for a woman—a band to go around the hair, a diadem, a necklace and two wristlets—five pieces all in fine gold. The total weight is 3.3 pounds. The entire set is of the same design, devoid of any inscriptions. Nearby was found a case, in which the jewels evidently were kept.

Archaeologists are divided in their opinions concerning the find—some opine the jewels to be the product of Roman art, others see in them an Etruscan influence, while still others say they must have been made in Scandinavia. Meantime they remain in the possession of the Administrator of the Council of Moura, Senhor Jose Antonio Ximenes Negreiros, awaiting a decision on legal ownership.

ROBINS WHIP CAT IN TREE

AUGUSTA, Me., June 20—The local fire department was called out to rescue a tomcat which had become embroiled in battle with a flock of robins.

Evidently the cat had climbed a tree to rob the robins' nest. When the birds resented the attack they swooped upon the feline, which retreated. Unfortunately the tomcat's retreat was not strategic. Instead of descending to the ground he climbed to the topmost branches and there became fair game for the enraged robins.

Norton H. Plummer saw his plight and called Fire Chief McCurdy, who summoned Lon Hill, another fire fighter. The three managed to rescue the dazed animal, its body covered with cuts from the robin's beaks.

St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church
June 22nd, 1930, Mass at 10:00 a. m. This is the Sunday within the octave of Corpus Christi and the Gospel is from St. Luke XIV, 1-6-24. On Thursday the church celebrated the feast of Corpus Christi, which means the Body of Our Lord. We believe that Christ changed bread and wine into his body and blood at his Last Supper and while we celebrate that event on Holy Thursday of Passion Week—three days before Easter yet sufficient opportunity was not given to have a due celebration for that all important event because so many other feasts were then crowded in, hence we reserve this feast to a later date. This feast was not openly celebrated in the church because the Christians were persecuted for the first three hundred years of Christianity and even after the church was recognized she was yet in an unsettled condition and only by degrees were the various feasts introduced and celebrated. It was about 1284 that the bishop of Liege requested all the priests of his diocese to hold a feast in honor of the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar, generally called the Lord's Supper. Later the feast was celebrated all over the Christian world with out-door processions. This feast is not of obligation in this country but is a day of great devotion. On June 27th, we celebrate the feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

The Great Commission

Text: Matt. 28-10.
"In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre."
And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow. And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the woman, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which is crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word. And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail, and they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid; go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 22: The Great Commission, Matt 28: 1-10.
By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
The great commission was the commission from our Lord to the disciples to go forth into the world and make disciples of all nations in His name and in His fellowship. In the fulfillment of this commission the disciples were assured of the spiritual presence of the Master, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the ends of the world." The power of that commission has been manifest in the growth and progress of the Christian church. Judged from the standpoint of the condition of the world in which the church has to perform its work, it might seem at times that the progress of the church and the progress of the Gospel had not been great. But when one looks back over the years and sees the conditions under which the Christian church began, the immensity of the forces of ignorance and of evil with which the church has had to contend, the marvel is that even in 19 centuries such progress should have been achieved.

Where Science Has Failed
In our own day it is true that the progress of science in its revolutionizing of life seems immense,
