Russell Retained In Oil, Gas Work

Indications Tuesday were that Eastland, at least for the present, would keep its oil and gas office of the Railroad Commission office.

Mr. Roosevelt already has surveyed the legislative field with his senate and house leaders, who predicted a session devoted primarily to revision of existing statutes. The President has announced his intention of asking Congress early this month to extend and strengthen the Social Security act, and has declared that he will try again to obtain approval of a bill permitting him to reorganize Federal departments. Such a measure passed the senate by a scanty margin last session, but was killed in the house.

Some legislators predict that the new Congress, facing demands for stronger national defense and continuing relief costs, may authorize expenditures of $10,000,000, 000, approaching the peace-time record of $11,361,815,000 established in the last session.

Mr. Roosevelt already has surveyed the legislative field with his senate and house leaders, who predicted a session devoted primarily to revision of existing statutes. The President has announced his intention of asking Congress early this month to extend and strengthen the Social Security act, and has declared that he will try again to obtain approval of a bill permitting him to reorganize Federal departments. Such a measure passed the senate by a scanty margin last session, but was killed in the house.

Requests for continued relief appropriations will be the signal for Republicans—and some Democrats—to renew demands for a congressional investigation of the Works Progress Administration on the grounds that relief money was used for politics in the last election campaign.

The clamor for revision of the Wagner act comes from business and one branch of organized labor, the American Federation of Labor. Employers demand drastic curtailment of labor board powers and amendments to give them rights comparable to the National Labor Relations Act. The AFL wants the act rewritten to ground that the labor board shown bias for John L. Lewis, Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Controversy over crop control and marketing quota provisions will highlight the campaign for changes in the administration's farm program.

Another tax bill will be necessary to continue the $500,000,000 in revenue raised by expiring income taxes, and the $1,300,000,000 yield of the tax on corporate earnings. Efforts may be made to revise surtax rates in the higher brackets, which were criticized recently by Chairman Pat Harrison, Dr. Miss. of the senate finance committee, Harrison, who led the successful fight against the undivided-profits tax declared that surtaxes had reached the point of diminishing returns.

Congress will be asked to study recommendations of the Social Security Advisory Council, which included a proposal that coverage under the social security act be extended by 1940 to 8,600,000 workers now excluded.

Unrest in Europe has stimulated demands for a broader national defense program. Changes in the neutrality act will form a part of the general program, but Congress will concentrate on appropriations to carry forward expansion of the navy and additional legislation for development of a more powerful air force.

Another special message from the President will deal with a proposal for establishment of a comprehensive national health program, contemplating an expenditure of $50,000,000 to $65,000,000 the first year, with states being required to match some of the Federal funds.

The financial plight of the country's railroads will furnish Congress with an important problem. An informal employer-employee committee has been drafting railroad relief recommendations, and several senators have endorsed a plan under which the carriers may reduce their interest burden through income tax concessions.

Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, Mont., of the senate interstate commerce committee, has promised to "do all in his power" to speed enactment of a relief program.

Administration leaders in the senate may find it embarrassing if Sen. Rush D. Holt, D., W. Va., goes through with his plan to put the senate on record against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. Several senators have indicated they will support Holt's resolution, but few are willing to commit themselves publicly.

Civilization Must Have a Better Solution

Now that the state of Ohio has taken the life of Anna Marie Hahn, the account of the lady who fed poison to a number of unsuspecting old men presumably is squared. Yet while there has seldom been a condemned criminal for whose crimes there seemed to be less excuse, it is hard for anyone who read the stories of this woman's last days to keep from feeling that society used a rather messy and inefficient method of settling things.

On the surface, what happened in the Columbus death house was quite in order and fully justified. Ohio has a law providing the death penalty for first degree murder. Mrs. Hahn was duly convicted, and the highest courts ruled that she had had a fair trial; the governor quite sensibly remarked that he could not have commuted this sentence on any ground but one of sentiment. The woman committed murder, apparently, for no better reason than to get money to gamble on the horse races. Society certainly suffered no appreciable loss when she was executed.

And yet . . . how can one read the grisly stories about the last act of the miserable drama without feeling that there must be a better way for society to square accounts?

We are hardly better off today for having had the spectacle of Mrs. Hahn grovelling in her cell, collapsing on the way to the electric chair, screaming frantically for help while the guards strapped on the electrodes. Nor does it help one to a better sleep at night to reflect on the woman's 13-year-old son, who spent that last day in the cell with her listening to her pleas for mercy and getting burned into his young mind a picture of horror that will go with him as long as he lives.

Unavoidable, all of this? Of course it was unavoidable. Given the laws that we have, the understanding that we have of a crime and punishment, the instinctive reaction we have against anyone who takes human life coldly and without passion, all of this had to happen. Yet to admit that is not at all the same as to admit that this was the best way of settling things.

Society has to defend itself against many things, for human civilization is still a precarious edifice. It must defend itself against violence, against the human being's primal urge to act unscrupulously in order to reach a desired goal; and in our present state of development we use violence to prevent violence.

Yet there are other values that are important, too. One of these values was sinned against when that child lived through what he had to live through during Mrs. Hahn's last hours. Another value suffered—as it does in every execution—simply through the dreadful spectacle that the whole performance stamped on our collective consciousness.

What the right answer to all of this may be is something the wisest man might have trouble saying. Yet there must be some better answer than the one we now have.

Duke of Windsor to Visit Dowager Queen

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Duke of Windsor is expected to arrive in England about Jan. 13, for a visit to his mother, Dowager Queen Mary, a usually reliable informant said today.

The Duke's American-born duchess, for whom he gave up the throne, was said to be most angry because he agreed to return without her. It was understood that the duke agreed, after his brother, King George, informed him that the condition of Queen Mary's heart was causing some anxiety and that she had wanted to see the duke.

New Offer Is Made Upon Power System

AUSTIN, Jan. 3.—The board of directors of the Lower Colorado River Authority took under advisement an offer of the Texas Power and Light Company to sell its electrical properties in 16 Central Texas counties for $5,000,000. The new offer was a $2,398,016 reduction from the original price, which the LCRA rejected.

Angels Camp Misses A Famous Hotel

ANGELS CAMP, Cal.—The Old Calaveras hotel, landmark of the early gold rush days in this mining town, is just a memory after fire burned it to the ground with the loss of one life.

Eugene Berg, 28, a construction worker, was trapped in his second floor room and was unable to escape as the flames roared through the wooden structure. Several other persons were hurt as they leaped from second story windows and raced down crooked stairways.

The hotel became famous in the early days of Angels Camp after the Roller family established it in the 1850s. When the gold rush died and the fame of Angels Camp faded, the Calaveras hotel remained open and did a good business even in recent years.

The old star saloon and cafe was also noted in the early days of the town.

Lynchings In U. S. Show Big Decline

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, there were 6 persons lynched in 1938. This is two less than the number 8 for each of the years 1937 and 1936; and 14 less than the number 20 in 1935. No one of the persons lynched was in the hands of the law; the bodies of two of the victims were burned.

There were 42 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Three of these were in Northern states and 39 in Southern states. In 41 of the instances, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 53 persons, 3 white men, 49 Negro men, and 1 Negro woman, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 6 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; murder, 3; failure to complete payment on a funeral bill, 1; insulting remarks to woman, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Louisiana, 1; and Mississippi, 3.
