MIXING RELIEF AND POLITICS HIT BY BILLS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Two far-reaching measures to "take politics out of relief" were introduced in the senate today as President Roosevelt prepared to ask congress, late this week, to appropriate about $700,000,000 more to continue the Works Progress Administration until June 30.

Senator Carl Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, who was defeated in attempts to write a ban on political activity into last year's relief appropriations, submitted the two proposals.

One bill would prohibit political activity by all federal employees, except policy making and elective officials. The other would give congress wide power to "police" the elections.

Sen. William King, Democrat, Utah, vigorous opponent of the relief system, introduced a bill under which the secretary of treasury could allocate refunds to states under a basis of proven needs.

National Health of France and Germany Compared

France and Germany present dramatically contrasting pictures these days. East of the Rhine all is order and efficiency. A united nation is working hard, getting its defenses in order, letting two or three top officials do all the talking, and giving an all-round demonstration of a people which knows what it wants and is of one mind about the best way to get there.

In France things are just the reverse. A moment of grave national crisis has brought disunity rather than unity. Frenchmen fight Frenchmen, and each faction apparently prefers to be damned rather than be saved in any way but its own. And while the struggle goes on the nation is paralyzed. The vital defense measures on which security depends are not taken.

Apparently, therefore, the two great continental powers of Europe are giving a vivid demonstration that the Hitlers and Mussolinis are right—that democracy talks and wrangles but does not act, and that only a dictatorship can act efficiently in a crisis.

But surface appearances can be deceiving. Perfect order can be a sign of illness rather than of health; interminable wrangling and dissension can reflect vitality, not decline. And the drama brought on by the Munich settlement is still only in its first act. Much must happen before any final verdict on the way in which France met with the crisis can be handed down.

Meanwhile, observe that the French are not simply marking time. The bitter row over the Daladier program does not represent so much lost motion. In their own way—a costly and clumsy way, perhaps, but one which nevertheless will ultimately lead to a solution—the French people are determining precisely how the external crisis is to be met.

The nation is in danger, to be sure; but it will best meet the danger if, in the end, the program it follows is one which is approved by a majority of all Frenchmen—and if all hands have had a chance to say their say about it. If past history is any indication, France will ultimately present a united front to the foe—even if a few French heads do get cracked in the meantime.

And across the Rhine, just incidentally, there is also a grave crisis. The orgy of savagery let loose by the anti-Jewish campaign may yet cost Germany as much as was won in the Munich settlement. Civilized opinion all over the world is crystallizing in the determination that no more must be yielded to Hitler. The mobs that attacked Germany's Jews may well have sowed the seeds of German defeat in the next war.

Which nation is in better health—one that sees its peril and argues passionately about the way to meet it, or one that does not know that a peril exists?

Something New

If You Are Cold Start Shivering Is Advice of Science

By United Press STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—There's one consolation for these cold shivering mornings. When you start to shiver, Nature starts stoking your body and heat production inside increases sometimes up to 400 per cent.

Dr. Raymond W. Swift, of the Institute of Animal Nutrition at Pennsylvania State College, says when you shiver, your body is producing more heat than it is when you're perspiring on a hot August day.

Prof. Swift spent a year in giving 21 subjects the "cold shivers" and then, with a special instrument of his own devising, measured the duration of their shivers, the intensity of the shivers and the heat production of the body during periods of shivering.

"Intense shivering increases the energy metabolism or heat production of the body about 400 per cent," Prof. Swift said as he summarized his experiments. "The heat production of the body is proportional to the amount and the intensity of shivering."

The increase in heat production on exposure to cold is Nature's way of preventing a drop in body temperature. The thermostatic law after which the body begins to recompense for the loss of heat is a skin temperature of about 66 degrees Fahrenheit.

Into a large refrigerator, Prof. Swift sent his subjects for periods of 75 minutes. They lay on army cots with wire netting replacing the canvas part. Then as goose pimples erupted, skin turned blue and the subjects began thinking sweet thoughts of Florida beaches or Tahitian moonlights, Prof. Swift measured their reactions.

Definite conclusions the professor feels safe in announcing are: Exposure to cold accompanied by vigorous shivering has no effect on the respiratory quotient, or the ratio of the volume of carbon dioxide expired to the volume of oxygen taken in.

Exposure does not favor any preferential oxidation of carbohydrates or sugars. Depletion of the glycogen stores is merely associated with and proportional to the increased total metabolism.

As a general rule, shivering increases steadily in vigor and in intensity as the period of exposure continues.

Physical data assembled by Prof. Swift showed that heat production among the 21 subjects, due to shivering 1 per cent of the time spent under experimental conditions, ranges between 1.1 and 7.8 per cent. Various subjects showed a heat production increase of between 6.2 and 130.8 per cent during the experiment.

He proposes slipping a noose over the tail, instead of gaffing them, extracting the hook, and then tagging them for future checking if they are again caught.

NEW YORK.—The holidays were saddened for Carl Hubbell by the loss of his father, but a Happy New Year came to the Giants with word from the quiet Oklahoman that his left arm is okeh again.

It is the first definite word on what was for years the most skillful arm in baseball since the operation in Memphis last fall. Hubbell scarcely can ever again expect to be the force he was for so long, but he still easily could be the difference between a pennant-winner and an also ran.

Henry Greenberg can think of a lot nicer ways to spend an evening in Cleveland than batting against Bob Feller under lights. Hank Greenberg recalls hitting against Van Lingle Mungo under the arcs while he was in the minors.

"I was careful not to say anything that might get Mungo peeved," explains the home run king. "There ought to be a law against Feller staying up after dark. He's not old enough to vote."

The Brooklyn club says it was offered $50,000 for Pete Coscarart, which does not surprise Fresno Thompson, once a Dodger and more recently manager of Birmingham. "Coscarart probably was the best player in the Southern Association the last two months of the season," asserts Thompson, who has played plenty of second base himself.

"He was coming along rapidly getting hits off the same stuff that fooled him earlier in the season." Coscarart wound up hitting .317. "If he hits .260, he'll stay in the majors," says Thompson.

"How he can make that doubt play! He certainly knows his way around second base. I don't believe he made more than two or three errors." With the keystone combination of Leo Durocher and Coscarart the Dodgers ought to please even Mungo defensively. And Thompson is certain Coscarart will hit enough. "He was getting three-base hits to right and left center," Fresno explains. "Every scout that saw him . . . Clarence Rowland of the Cubs and Hank DeBarry of the Giants among them . . . liked him."

THOMPSON asserts that pitcher plucked out of the Southern Association by Leo Stanford MacPhail will set Dodger fans to talking. His name is Roy Evans. "Evans is a character," says Thompson. "He has all the answers . . . vocally and from the box." "Evans throws everything. He give the hitter a screw ball, knuckler, a dinky curve, a ball sharp-breaking curve, and a fast ball that, while in itself is not fast, looks twice as speedy when thrown hard by the knuckler. Evans throws every conceivable way." "He has great control. If he hit the outfielders that the batter hit to left or right field, they be pretty sure that's where ball will be hit." "Evans will be the Dodgers' 3 pitcher and may win as many as 15 games." "And the more beer he drink the better he'll pitch." "Regardless of how much Giants squawk about being dled out of Russ Evans, MacP can come right back and say the man was born to pitch on Gowanus.
