Now Spain Can Begin to Count the Cost

The Spanish Tragedy now staggers to its final act. Amid the dust and blood and tears, Spain may now stumble to her feet and try to set her face forward again.

Nearly two million men in arms must somehow be returned to civilian life in a country whose population is only 22,000,000.

Between 7,000,000 and a million men are dead on the field of battle. No one knows, no one will ever know, how many were assassinated by factions during the early days of the revolt, how many have been executed by both sides, how many men, women and children have been killed by bombs and shells. No one will ever know how many thousands have died of privation and shock, but these casualties surely are in the scores of thousands.

Hundreds of thousands are wounded and maimed, and scores of thousands will never again have decent physical or mental health because of what they have felt, and seen, and done.

Last of all, the cost in money. Again, no one knows what it is, but certainly any new Spanish government must start out as a bankrupt.

This is a cost perhaps higher in proportion to population than any other country paid during the World War. It is a foretaste of what future wars will be if they come.

Now that the extremists of both sides, the right and the left, have had their say at the point of the bayonet, the reasonable people must be heard at last, the middle-of-the-road people whom it is now the fashion to decry as wishy-washy and futile.

Such a one, Salvador de Madariaga, spoke words a year and a half ago which all can see now were true. But a year and a half ago, none would listen. Madariaga, first ambassador of the Spanish republic to the United States, and president of the League of Nations Council, spoke from Switzerland:

"Both sides fight for an ideal . . . but while fighting for an ideal Spain they are not destroying that real Spain without which their ideal nation cannot materialize? . . . Moral victory—the one that matters—will not be theirs, whoever wins, since military victory will be due to a preponderance of foreign war weapons. . . . Thus the real Spain will not be committed to a victory which—whoever wins—will be a foreign victory. And so—whoever wins—Spain is defeated.

"Whoever wins must govern with the good-will of all Spaniards, and that goodwill cannot be enforced."

Wise, prophetic words, to which bleeding Spain must return, now that the extremists of both sides have done their worst.

The kind of words to which people of any country would do well to listen before they allow uncompromising extremists to plunge them into the hell of civil or foreign wars.

Summary of Most of the Speeches on Armaments

Legislature Seeks A Definition Of Word "Newspaper"

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Texas Legislature is attempting to define a newspaper.

The definition was called for in connection with a pending bill to require publication in a newspaper of financial reports of political sub-divisions. Sen. Manley Head of Stephenville, author of the publication bill, offered this definition: "The term 'newspaper' shall be held to mean a publication bearing a title or name, published at a fixed place of business, regularly issued at fixed intervals as frequently as once a week and having second-class mailing privileges, being not less than four pages of five columns or more each."

To be classed as a newspaper of general publication, it would be required further by the Texas bill that there must have been publication at regular intervals continuously for at least 24 months. The paper must also have been distributed to readers generally of all classes in the county or counties where it is circulated.

A definite price must be fixed for each copy or for annual subscription and the circulation must be at least 50 per cent paid for by regular subscribers or through newsdealers.

The paper must publish at least 25 per cent news matter "which has sufficient merit to have created a following of paid readers."

Dallas Spends Most On Postage Stamps

DALLAS, Tex.—Dallasites spent more money for postage stamps during 1937 than the residents of any other city in Texas, the post office department has announced.

Postal receipts in Dallas were $15 per capita for the year. Houston spent $8.50 per capita; Fort Worth, $9.50, and San Antonio, $5.50.

Kansas City led the nation in postal receipts, $18.80 per capita.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Administrator Elmer F. Andrews is perfectly willing to get tough, if he has to, in order to enforce the wages and hours law. The first grand jury indictment against an offender, just returned at Boston, is a good indication of that.

Nevertheless, the law thus far has met much less opposition than might have been expected. There has been nothing like the tidal wave of litigation that greeted the national labor relations act. No one has gone to court to challenge the law's constitutionality. Mr. Andrews has only gone to court six times to obtain compliance.

Considering the fact that approximately 11,000,000 workers are covered by the act, that record is a trifle surprising.

Not that all is sweetness and light. Some 8000 complaints have been filed by workers. The Wage and Hour Division recently added two dozen field inspectors to its force, giving it a staff of 128 men who spend all their time checking complaints.

Maybe one reason the record to date is rather mild is that in any scrap the Wage and Hour Division holds all the aces. It can proceed against an employer in criminal court, and the penalty for an employer convicted can be a fine of $10,000—or, for a second offense, six months in jail. Or the division can get a federal court injunction restraining an offending employer from breaking the provisions of the law. If he goes ahead and breaks them then he can be punished forthwith for contempt of court.

Lastly, a worker can himself bring suit to recover unpaid minimum wages or unpaid overtime compensation. He can collect the sum that is owed him; in addition, the employer can be assessed for the court costs.

The law went into effect Oct. 24. It took time to get the staff, and the work was done by the officers; if it had been for that, the whole job would have been done in a matter of weeks.

Scheme was to make the court case a heart-wringer; the worst case on the books preferably one in which poor honest working girls were exploited within an inch of their lives—and make the welkin with it. The second case, would be hand-picked with care but would be less than the poor-sewing-girl case; it would involve the best and most famous company could be found.

But if the top authorities seriously considered this they had to drop it. The job too big and things moved too fast. The cases on which court was sought couldn't be picked; they had to take their own course.

A few odd cases have come out. One employer wanted workers exempted because they were handicapped. When questioned, it turned out the only handicap he could give them was the fact that they were 40-year-olds. (P. S. didn't make it.)

Ten or a dozen civil suits have been filed directly by employees. The Wage-Hour Division draws cards in those suits; that as far as it knows, those cases so far have been decided by payment in full.

SERIAL STORY WOMEN WANT BEAUTY! BY LOUISE HOLMES

Yesterday: Once back in River-town, Susie discloses her identity to Dick. He seems pleased with her achievement. CHAPTER XXVIII "I WANT to see Mr. Costello," Susie said to Dick. "He was my boss for five years." Dick went with her to the Waffle Shoppe office, enjoying the vicarious thrill of Susie. "Hello, Mr. Costello," she said from the door of his office. "Don't you remember Susie?" He gulped and stared, he scrambled from his chair. He shook Susie's hand and made her turn around while he uttered soft ejaculations in Italian. Susie introduced Dick and Mr. Costello spoke to him without taking his eyes from her slim loveliness. Somehow the word got around. Waitresses flocked to the office, cooks came from the kitchen, the cash register was deserted. A brass band was the only thing lacking in Susie's welcome. Dick, standing back from the crowd, said to himself, "She'll be a sensation in Hollywood. It takes that kind of nerve in Hollywood." Suzanne, in private life Mrs. Richard Tremaine, would make a lot of money and her husband would help spend it. In a rush Susie dressed for the Delta Phi dinner. Powder blue velvet, long, accentuating every beautiful line of her figure, bobbing curls on top of her head, heavy silver bracelets, small silver sandals, perfume behind her ears, stars in her eyes. Dick waited in the lobby while she called Chicago. There was no answer from Jeff's apartment. She was quiet on the way to the fraternity house, thinking of Jeff, wishing she had been kinder. Susie's fame had spread. Her entrance to the Delta Phi house received the fanfare accorded to royalty. It took little to stir university students. They owned Susie, had she not served them all with delicious waffles? Now she had returned, beautiful, a radio star, to honor their door. Or so their greeting broadly hinted. ANOTHER reception was held in the dressing room. Susie remembered fleetingly the occasion of her last entrance into that room. It was much the same, smooth, luxurious little girls, the type she had so bitterly envied, but with a difference this time. They neither snickered nor whispered. They shook Susie's hand, exclaimed over her clothes, crowded around as she sat at the dressing table. In 10 minutes that scarring episode in Susie's past was wiped from the slate of memory. The Cinderella complex even gave it a touch of glamour. The strange thing about it all was that Susie was not getting the expected thrill out of the demonstration. Knowing that, without a shadow of doubt, Dick Tremaine would ask her to marry him before the evening was over, knowing that poor old Susie, the waffer, was buried for all time, her senses absolutely refused to quicken. What was the matter with her? Was achievement less sweet than effort, had conquest dulled the keen edge of desire? She did not know. Slipping away from the gushing, fawning girls, she found an upstairs telephone and again called Jeff's flat in Chicago. There was no answer. The party ran true to time-honored form. Dinner, dancing, the stag line falling over itself to cut in on Susie, favors, paid entertainment. During the entertainment Dick took Susie to a seat under the stars. He had been a little cocky all evening, swaggering possessively, strutting just enough to irritate Susie faintly. "As if he owned me," she thought. There, under the stars, no one in sight, he asked her, quite casually, to marry him at the end of her radio contract. In the same breath he explained that his father had put him on his own, that one needed money to swing out in California and it would be wise for her to accept Ted Warfield's offer. When Susie said nothing, sat with troubled eyes on her hands, he added that he was mad about her, always had been and always would be, that, together, they would out-Hollywood Hollywood. It was incredible that Susie should say, "But I don't want to marry you, Dick—I don't want to go to Hollywood." Incredible, after loving Dick for years on end, after hitching her wagon to his star and hanging on for all this time. Refusing him, Susie was almost as astounded as Dick. When argument failed, when even caustic reminders of his enviable social standing were unavailing, Dick sullenly took her to the hotel and she did another astounding thing. Starting to prepare for bed she changed her mind, redressed and packed her bag. Standing in front of the mirror, pulling her little hat over bobbing curls, she gazed into wondering eyes. What had she done? After four years it was difficult to break the habit of loving Dick. Almost without conscious thought, driven by some unknown force, she wrote a note to Dick, left it with the hotel clerk, and took the night train for Chicago. At 7:30 in the morning a taxi delivered Susie to the flat building where Jeff stayed on in spite of Edna's belief that he had moved to his club. He left the kitchen to answer Susie's ring. He stared at her, trying unsuccessfully to conceal the glad light in his eyes. Susie's eyes were none the less happy. Newspapers lay about Jeff's chair knee deep. The flat was dusty, forlorn looking. Susie dusted her hat and coat on the door. She was trembling. Her thoughts of the edge of desire dulled by conquest? No—no— "MAY I have breakfast, Jeff?" she asked. "Yeah—sure." Jeff was trembling, too. "Where—where'd you drop from?" "I came down on the night train." "And—Dick?" Jeff did not dare to hope. Susie shrugged, the gesture putting Dick into his rightful place for all time. "I left a note for Dick." She went close to Jeff, looking shyly into his face. "What was the good news you wanted to tell me, Jeff?" He didn't answer. He was looking hungrily at her red, inviting lips. His arms crushed her, he bent his head. "M-m, sweet—" he murmured. "It was all 10 minutes before they got around to Jeff's big news. The wire had come from John Harker. Jeff was Harker's new advertising manager. "Oh, goody—goody," Susie cried, throwing both arms around Jeff's neck, pressing her satin-like cheek to his. After a while they went to the kitchen. Susie tied an apron over her imported frock and set about whipping up a batch of waffles. Jeff was dreadfully in the way. He kissed the back of Susie's white neck and each finger in the delicious hollow in her throat. The egg whites sagged while he kissed her again and again. Breakfast was a real, delightful affair. Afterward Susie changed to one of Edna's print dresses and cleaned the flat while Jeff moved her belongings over from the hotel. But she had to hurry with the cleaning because she and Jeff were being married at 3 o'clock. (THE END)

Mocking Bird and Auto Brakes Make Phonograph Record

LUBBOCK, Texas—Song of a mocking bird, starting and stopping sounds of a car, and other noises have been recorded by the speech department at Texas Technological College, to be used at the Inter-Collegiate Dramatic festival in Waco, March 22-25. Off-stage sounds will be incorporated into production of "Why I Am a Bachelor," by Conrad Sieler, which the Tech group will present at the festival, Miss Ruth Pirtle, head professor of speech, says. Selected for the cast are Noel Edgar Thompson of Stamford, Eron Gafford of Panhandle, and Lucien Uphaw of Amarillo, all speech majors. R. I. Lockard, assistant professor of architecture and allied arts, is designing and painting scenery for the production. LUBBOCK, Texas—Of the 301 graduates of the Division of Agriculture at Texas Technological College, 267 or 88.7 per cent are engaged in agriculture, a recent survey discloses. Thirty-two engaged in farming, ranching, and productive agriculture; 41 in commercial agriculture; 106 in professional agriculture; 16 are teaching in colleges and universities, or are engaged in agricultural research; 61 are teaching vocational agriculture in high schools; and 11 are doing advanced agricultural work in colleges and universities. The 106 engaged in professional agriculture are divided as follows: 70 men in U. S. civil service and similar work; 29 in agricultural extension work in Texas and New Mexico; 7 in city and state employment. Of the 34 graduates not engaged in agriculture, 15 are teaching, 12 engaged in commercial industry, 2 are doing church or ministerial work, 1 is a house-wife, 8 are bankers, and 1 unknown.

Gassy Stomach?

Anadarko, Okla. — Jesse Beavers, 122 W. Oklahoma St., says: "After eating these pills my stomach and I would be a sorehead in which gas, I felt pretty bad, but no appetite, no energy. I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and my appetite returned. I ate and slept better and felt O.K. in every way." Ask your druggist for it.

Eastland Personal

Rev. J. I. Cartledge, president of the Eastland Lions club, was a visitor at a meeting of the Sweetwater Lions club Tuesday.

Davenport presided. Mrs. Davenport was elected as delegate to attend a missionary conference to be held in Brownwood, March 28, 29 and 30. Mrs. J. F. Davis was chosen as alternate.

Mrs. Garner Kinard, the missionary study superintendent, introduced the study on India, followed by Mrs. Wade Thomas discussing the first two chapters of the mission book. Creating an atmosphere for the program were the Indian costumed hostesses who greeted the guests at the entrance.

Mrs. Veon Howard, Mrs. J. V. Freeman and Mrs. James Harkrider formed the receiving line. Little Nancy Harkrider, also dressed as an Indian, served as usher.

The meeting closed with the devotional period conducted by Mrs. Geo. Brogdon and the dismissal was given by her.

Small Problems Are Made Easier At Cooking School

Even so small a problem as how to keep green beans green after they are cooked, will be discussed by Mrs. A. D. French when she comes here to conduct the Happy Kitchen Cooking School.

In case you're curious about the method of making beans stay green, here's the suggestion of Mrs. French: "Cut the beans into 3 or 4 strips lengthwise instead of snapping them across as usual; then cook them uncovered in rapidly boiling water 10 to 12 minutes, and the beans will rival the original product in color."

Mrs. French is one of the best known lecturers on home economy in the South, and is coming to Eastland through the desire of this newspaper to bring the best service available to the women of this community.

Admission will be free to all of the lectures, and everyone has a cordial invitation to attend. Numerous attractive free features have been arranged in connection with the school. Valuable samples and souvenirs will be distributed each day.

Dealing as she does with every phase of home economy, Mrs. French lays special stress on the short cuts to efficiency and economy that make work in the kitchen more fun and less drudgery.

She begins at the very beginning of the subjects of foods, and carries her audience step by step through the best methods of arriving at the ultimate goal of a "happy kitchen."

In her talk on marketing she shows clearly how to make the selections in foods that will yield the greatest value for the least money. In the discussion and demonstration of recipes she emphasizes the importance of making simple dishes more attractive and more delicious.

The lectures will be held at the Connellee Roof each day from 2 to 4 o'clock, beginning promptly so that every possible minute may be used to the best advantage of the audience.

With Our Wildlife By JOHN R. WOOD, State Game Warden

Wildlife Resources Are Profitable Fur Income

Last week there was discussed in this column, fur and furbearers. A birds eye view of the national income from this source was given and a few facts about the poisoning campaigns put on in the west and just what this meant to the income of the trapper.

Today I am going to give some facts about the fur income to local trappers. People do not ordinarily see an actual money profit from our wildlife resources. Many times this income is very large, depending on the fur bearer and the section where the furs are taken. The author need not say that the fur resources of the State of Texas does not get the proper protection, and little effort is put forth to improve the conditions for building this extra money crop on the farm or ranch. Surely a million dollar industry would mean much to the state of Texas, and most Texans would do all that they could to get such a business in Texas, well, that is just exactly what we have in our fur bearers and I wish that the average landowner could realize this fact, and help build up this valuable source of income. The counties that were included in this survey of the fur income to the trapper were the counties in my district: Brown, Coleman, Comanche, Eastland and Erath. There is a big area that cannot produce furbearers in these six counties, and surely not much time was spent in building up this industry. But at that the total income exceeded $12,743. Odds Against a Trapper The average trapper this year had many odds to work against, and these were big factors in reducing the total income this year. For one the prices were very low, but on the average better than those of last year. This was probably due to the lack of foreign market due to the war situation. A very dry fall probably had much to do with the class of fur that was produced. Because of the low prices many of the trappers would discontinue their operations. This was a big factor in reducing the total number of animals caught. Fur-Bearers, Number Taken There were nly ten of the many furbearers taken in this area. They were 43 bobcats, 841 ringtail cats, 40 badgers, 874 civit cats, 916 fox, 99 mink, 21-366 o'possum, 12,969 skunks, 450 coons, and 59 wolves. In this survey there were several interesting facts. There were about 27 many o'possums taken but at this great odd brought three times as ey. Another odd fact were sold to one fox wolver. These were taken han county and in the joining counties. The and from this one step value was only $35, brought the highest this being about $9.50, thirds of the total in. This survey also presented species that real protection and laws season for a few year
