MONDAY CHURCH DAY

Monday was a regular church day, the gray cool weather seeming specially suited to the gathering of folks indoors, for some special and helpful purpose.

The attendance at all the church societies, registered above the average of summer season.

The Missionary Society of the Christian church held their regular annual election of officers, following the program, presented as announced in the Telegram of Sunday with but one change, the substitution Mrs. Smitham for Mrs. Walthall, in the subject "Christian Homes Around the World."

Mrs. Fred Davenport, president, was in the chair. The Board was re-elected as a whole, an unanimous vote: President, Mrs. Fred Davenport; vice-president, Mrs. Eugene Day; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Gilbreath; World-Call secretary, Mrs. H. B. Meek.

Members attending this session were: Misses, Henry Ferrell, J. A. Beard, L. L. Gattis, Fred Davenport, Ernest E. Wood, H. B. Meek, T. A. Bendy, W. M. Wood, M. L. Smitham, Eugene Day, J. R. Gilbreath, and Miss Sallie Morris.

It was announced that the Ladies' Aid Society of the church meets next meeting, and will hold their annual election of officers.

VACATION SCHOOL OPENS

The annual vacation Bible school of the Presbyterian church opened with a church full of happy little folks, and some older ones, nearly one hundred in all, waiting to register for the vacation school course offered by the church.

Busy hands were full selecting, assigning to classes, and cheerfulness radiated from all sides.

Despite the gray and lowering day, the entrance admittances was way beyond expectation, and it is anticipated will be much greater within two or three days.

The junior teachers, Misses, James Horton, L. E. Hogan, J. LeRoy Arnold, and Ora G. Moore, lined their classes, and Misses, Harry Sone, and Stewart were busy in the primary department.

The busy little beginners, in care of Misses, R. L. Perkins, and Monte Hayes, were here "one minute and there the next, but finally, after repeated, and recorded, were methodically made by Miss

SOME INSIDE NEWS OF BIENNIAL The San Antonio Express tells some most interesting matters of the Biennial that the staff correspondents fail to touch on, are afraid to include in their stories. Daily news of the convention is received by Mrs. W. K. Jackson through clippings from San Antonio Press, sent by her sister, Mrs. W. S. Hendrick, a director of the Pan-American Round Table.

Eastland club women recall the visits of Mrs. Day Mills, to Cisco and near by towns, who was touring in interest of Mrs. J. U. Fields, and her defense, following the removal of Mrs. Fields from office as Biennial chairman in Texas. Many attended that meeting, and others close by. Next Thursday is election day. The "silk stockings are working for the Patterson-Sherman candidates, Mrs. Sipple of Massachusetts, the "cotton bloomers" are working for Mrs. Edward P. White of Indiana.

"Rivalry between factions seeking control of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has become so keen that the Texas delegation may find it difficult to adhere to "unwritten ethics" that the hostess state show no preference for candidates to fill the offices of the federation. It was freely predicted Tuesday with interest in the "politics" of the convention picking up rapidly, that Texas would not only take a hand, but that it is not improbable the Lone State's vote and influence might tip the scales, now seemingly fairly well balanced, to either side.

Texas was already a fertile field for political activities, following the endorsement at the Texas State convention in El Paso last November, when Mrs. W. R. Potter of Bowie was elected president and Mrs. J. U. Fields of Haskell, retiring president, who had defeated Mrs. Potter for president two years previous, was beaten for General Federation director.

The political situation was further agitated among the Texas women when Mrs. Fields, who had been appointed biennial chairman in Texas was requested to resign that commission and refusing to do so was removed by action of the General Federation board. These situations are said to have unfortunately drawn Texas into the present strife over offices in the Federation in contravention to the long-recognized custom that the hostess state take no active part in the politics of the convention they are entertaining.

In fact, it was indicated Tuesday that the Potter and Fields factions are taking sides in the heated campaign being waged for president of the federation. It was said Mrs. Potter's supporters are lining up for Mrs. John P. Sipple of Baltimore, while Mrs. Fields' partisans are working for the election of Mrs. Edward Franklin White of Indianapolis, Indiana. Both candidates attended the Texas convention at El Paso and took equally prominent parts in the program.

A demonstration staged Tuesday morning for Mrs. Fields at the general federation directors' breakfast which was attended by a large delegation of Texas delegates to mean a growing sympathetic sentiment for Mrs. Fields.

Mrs. Day Mills of Texas, retiring Texas director in the general federation, and who toured Texas on behalf of Mrs. Fields following the request of General Federation for Mrs. Fields' resignation, would not make a public statement other than to say that she had not altered her allegiance and does not expect to. She said she had not as yet had any time for politics but that "now I expect to look around and see what is going on."

The campaign between Mrs. Sipple and Mrs. White goes merrily on. "Sipple" and "White" buttons are making their appearance in steadily increasing numbers. There is much lobbying in progress and indications are Texas will be unable to keep out of the fight, although some of the leaders are making an effort to keep down animosities which developed over Mrs. Fields' removal as biennial chairman and pleading with Texas to preserve the "hands off" policy excepted as a hostess state.

The headquarters of Mrs. Sipple was opened in Room 358, Gunter Hotel, Tuesday. Mrs. John G. Price, Jr., of Baltimore, campaign manager, will assume charge of the campaign office. Mrs. L. C. Probert of Washington is acting in an advisory capacity in the campaign for Mrs. Sipple. Mrs. Sipple's supporters Tuesday issued the statement that she has been in club work since 1902, when she became a member of the Sorosis Club of Baltimore. Later she was president of this club, then vice-president, president and director of the Maryland federation. She was resolution chairman and is now financial chairman of the general federation and is a member of the executive board, according to official campaign statements.

F. McWilliams. His sister Miss Olive McWilliams, also returns this evening from her junior year at Baylor-Belton, for the vacation with homefolks.

when she saw the girl's face. It was radiantly beautiful as only the face of a woman happy in love can be. Niel's kisses seemed to linger in the shining tenderness of the clear gray eyes and the curves of the smiling lips.

Chiri hated to look at it when Nathaniel introduced her to Virginia. And the voice that greeted her afforded further irritation. It held notes like those that Nathaniel coaxed from his violoncello when he played under the stars on hot nights.

Chiri loved poetry, beauty in slight and sound. She knew that Nathaniel loved it, too. And how he had found his dream girl. Chiri could see that.

For a moment she felt defeated, without hope. But having her way with Nathaniel had become like the battle of life itself to her. She could not give up.

But she knew she could gain nothing by creating a scene, and her passion being what it was—a flame which she fed with conquests and fleeting satisfactions—she was able to control it, to speak calmly and act with ease.

"Good lord, Chiri, you don't know what you're talking about!

close together we might arrange to have them happen in privacy. Do you think you will have another one tonight?"

"Right now."

The malady was cured for the moment by the ringing of the doorbell. "Is it your father?" Nathaniel asked.

"No, it must be the first of your guests, Niel. Dad's terribly disappointed. He said he must see someone on very important business tonight."

"I'm sorry," Nathaniel said, and meant it. He genuinely liked Virginia's father. Before he had become engaged to her he had feared that Richard Brewster, millionaire, would not welcome a poor artist for a son-in-law, however rising he might be. It would be a disappointment not to have him here tonight when Virginia would be introduced for the first time to the artists of Greenwich Village."

But he soon forgot about it in the happiness of receiving the congratulations of his friends. They were a joyous herd that came most ly in groups, each with a central

tain of the best thing to do. He might beekon her—but she was not looking his way. Then he saw her dancing. A slight tremor shook him and left his flesh dancing! Laughing, too, and he could see the grim shadow of the reaper over the gray crowd, dimming the joy, mocking ambition and hope.

Would he have to go and take

Virginia from her partner's arms? He drew upon the courage that must never fail her, took a step forward and was halted by a touch on his arm.

"Niel. What is it?"

"Chiri! Go and tell those musicians to stop playing."

It was like Chiri, so unbalanced in her way with men, and yet so understanding and quick to grasp the essential elements of any situation, to move off swiftly and without comment to do as Nathaniel bade her.

As the music came to an un-melodious end Nathaniel reached Virginia's side.

"Please excuse her, Lionel," he said to the man she had been dancing with; "there's been something happening at her home and we'll have to go at once. Will you tell the others?"

Purposely he had given Virginia new seconds to realize that trouble was impending. When he turned to her he saw that already fear was charging her features.

"Let's get your wraps. Is your car downstairs?"

Virginia grasped his arm with both hands. People were gathering round them now but she did not notice. "Tell me, Niel, what has happened—my father?"

"I don't know—for certain.

We'll go at once."

He was leading Virginia toward the door now, where he saw Chiri standing with Virginia's blue and silver wrap.

In the car Virginia made him tell her of the message from Pounds, her father's valet. One morning, protesting "no" burst from her lips when Nathaniel said

Pounds feared the worst, and Nathaniel then tried to tell her that the man could not have been sure; he had not yet called a doctor when he telephoned the studio.

Virginia accepted his words in stricken silence. The drive home was a nightmare of tortured uncertainty.

A man, evidently a physician, lifted his head and looked solemnly at Virginia and Nathaniel when they entered her father's library.

That one look answered Virginia's question. The father she loved, the parent who had been both mother and father to her since the time, two years after her birth, when he had looked upon her face for the first time, she died. Until then his grief at losing her mother had driven him to far corners of the earth, fighting his unnatural reluctance to look upon the child that had cost him the life of the only woman he ever had loved.

Then one day he had come home to take up the responsibility of rearing his motherless daughter; and with the first grip of her chubby little fingers around his own, which trembled, and her first friendly smile, he experienced a poignant regret for the two lost years.

Virginia had grown up nurtured and protected by a great love.

With no brothers and sisters to share it there was developed between father and daughter a companionship that narrowly missed being a complex in the life of both.

Richard Brewster had made not the slightest objection to Virginia's choice of a husband. He returned the liking that Nathaniel felt for him, and while many of his friends regarded the prospective groom as beneath Virginia's station in life, Mr. Brewster only smiled tolerantly at their veiled comments. He knew that most of them had missed the indescribable happiness of a great love and he believed that Virginia would know it with Nathaniel Dann.

His great fear and dread had been that she might love the wrong kind of man. But that fear had vanished when she told him she wanted to marry Nathaniel Dann. After that he had but one worry—a worry, however, so consuming that it had shortened his life.

For years he had carried a secret burden, unknown to his world, except for a few persons who did not talk of what they knew.

The marks of his mental suffering showed plainly upon his features now, and Nathaniel thought, as he stood helplessly watching

Virginia when she rushed forward and threw herself frantically upon the middle body, that he had never seen a face so altered.

For a while no one dared to touch her, so pitiless were her efforts to reclaim her father from death. Then the doctor's hands fell firmly upon her shoulders, and he nodded to Nathaniel.

Nathaniel half led, half carried her into the drawing room, where she lay on the sofa shaking with heartbreaking sobs. He tried to talk to her but she seemed not to hear him.

Before he could stop himself

Nathaniel had said yes.

"Do you—suppose someone did something to him?"

Nathaniel said the fearful thought behind the stumbling words.

"Certainly not," he replied earnestly, "didn't you hear what Dr.

Meyerling said? It was his heart,

Virginia. He couldn't have suffered much; the end came quickly."

"Hello, Dann speaking." His voice brought a rush of information uttered in a frightened whisper that barely carried to him.

Nathaniel made out the fact that Virginia's father was dead.

"Have you called a physician?"

he shouted.

"I'll get one at once, sir," came back faintly in reply and Nathaniel heard a click that told him the connection had been broken.

He stepped to the door, uncer-

"Send in the housekeeper," Dr.

Meyerling directed Nathaniel.

"We'll get this young lady to

"I've given her an opiate," he told Nathaniel later.

Nathaniel looked at him oddly, then spoke as though he were somewhat ashamed of his words.

"Was it altogether a—natural death, doctor?" he asked.

Texas Girl in Mother's Steps

"Out of sight, out of mind" is a true saying. The fact that we can't see what's happening inside our children's bodies is the reason so many of us allow them to go on suffering from constipation until they are full of the poisons from decaying waste and they're bilious, headachy, sallow and weak, with no appetite or energy. Watch your baby or child, Mother, and at the first sign of coated tongue, bad breath or feverishness, give him a little California Fig Syrup. This rich, fruity product gently expels all the souring waste; gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels, so they continue to act normally; stimulates the circulation; tones and nourishes the entire system.

Its sales record of over four million bottles a year and the enthusiastic praise of women everywhere, prove mothers depend on it today as they have for more than fifty years. A Texas mother, Mrs. M. H. Goodrich, 1530 So. Olive St., San Antonio, says: "I used to take California Fig Syrup as a child, so when my little girl began to suffer with constipation I started her on it. It stopped her trouble quickly and made her look over so much better. I kept using it with her for a few weeks and it made a different girl out of her. She has grown so well and strong and is never sick any more."
