records of the Eastland School and Ranger High football teams, which meet afternoon at 2:30 in Ranger in some respects similar. Teams are in different location of play. But both did not make outstanding this season in the division which they play.

Eastland made its debut this season in Class A competition. The Eastland team was formed at the beginning of the season. Fans, many of them, figured Eastland team would figure among the more potent in Class A competition. It did not.

Eastland and Ranger have been divisional gridiron foes and the Friday is expected to be an interesting chapter in a long series of gridiron battles which always held the interest of both cities.

Strawn Woman Has An Ancient Bible

A 124-year Bible is possessed by Mrs. Maude E. Carlyle of Strawn. The Bible is one of the first English revised editions. Published in 1815, the copy-right says the Bible was translated out of the original Greek "and with the former translations diligently compared and revised by the special command of the majesty, King James I of England."

COME ALL YE FAITHFUL Come all ye faithful, joyful and triumphant, Come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem ...

Originally sung with the Latin words, Adeste Fideles, this hymn predates 1761, but its origin is unknown. In France it was used as a processional hymn by the monks on their way to sanctuaries at the Christmas Midnight Mass.

All Not So Quiet on the Western Front

That it isn't altogether a "phony" war is demonstrated by this new action photo, taken on the German side of the Western Front. It shows a German soldier taking shelter in an alley between buildings when a land mine exploded in a village recaptured from the French. Nazi censor deleted name of village. AT WARM SPRINGS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 22.—President Roosevelt arrived today just seven and a half months after he promised to be back in the fall "if we don't have a war."

DOUBT ENDED FIGHT IS NOT TO BITTER END

Great Britain and Germany ended any doubt today that the European war was a fight to the bitter end. The British government stood firm before the wrath of neutral nations in its order for allied naval forces to seize all exports from Germany, a blow designed to ruin Nazi Germany economically.

Behind the spectacular moves were other tragedies at sea. The Italian stamer Fianona was damaged badly by a floating mine, but not sunk. The Fianona was the 17th victim of war off the English coast since Saturday, not including a French fishing boat, or the German steamer Bertha Fisser, which was scuttled when intercepted by a British warship off Iceland.

On the Western Front there was little action. French sources professed belief the Nazis might thrust into the Balkans to out-manuever the allied blockade at sea.

Chubby little St. Louis "Frisco" Estes VII, 11 months old, justifies the faith of his proud father, Dr. St. Louis Estes, 73, in the healthfulness of the simple "back to nature" life. Feeding only on raw foods, the family lives in the sun in their penthouse atop a San Francisco hotel.

Popularity of O'Daniel Is Debated As Election Year In Texas Is Approaching

AUSTIN, Texas—Is W. Lee O'Daniel's popularity fading as he nears the end of his first year in the governor's office? The question is asked frequently in capitol corridors as eyes begin to focus on next summer's political campaign.

Can the man who, without a poll tax receipt, swept the state to an unprecedented first primary nomination in his initial race, be beaten if he runs for a second term? Until recently the general reply was "No." Now some begin to express doubts about it; some believe he will be a one-term governor.

Random statements brought out these views: "He has been slipping in East Texas as opponents of SJR 12 keep hammering on the promises and results of the last campaign."

Lone Star Gas Co. Gas Gate Rate Is Back In Court

AUSTIN, Nov. 22.—The Supreme Court today agreed to hear again the appeal of Lone Star Gas Company from an order of the Texas Railroad Commission, reducing the natural gas rate charged in more than 200 North Texas communities from 40 cents to 32 cents per thousand cubic feet.

NAZI PLANES MAKE RAID ON ENGLAND TODAY

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Six German airplanes bombed the Shetland Islands today as anti-aircraft guns and British pursuit ships fought off a German plane over the Thames River.

No damage was reported in the raid on the Shetlands, which were visited by Nazi bombers last week also. In addition to shooting down a German plane off the Kent Coast yesterday, the Royal Air Force bagged a Heinkel plane, which had penetrated the outskirts of London, an air ministry statement said.

A British destroyer rescued three German fliers, two seriously wounded, from a rubber boat in the North Sea. R. A. F. planes and anti-aircraft batteries played hide-and-seek with a German plane which appeared over the Thames River. Air raid warnings sounded, but the all clear signal followed shortly.

Uncle Sam Can Take Care of His Own

America learned a lot of things from the first World War. Generally they were things that the people of this country could have learned without the terrific expense in lives and money, if they had just taken the trouble to tackle some of the war problems in peace time.

One of the things the people of this country discovered was that the United States was far more nearly self-sufficient than had been commonly believed. When trade routes were cut off in 1914 and warring nations couldn't afford to export materials they needed badly at home, the brows of industry were creased with worry lines. Many needed materials and the benefit from many valuable manufacturing secrets were rapidly becoming unavailable, and the United States looked sadly toward the day when certain industries, particularly chemicals, would have to close and the public would have to do without commodities to which they had become accustomed.

Then the laboratories got busy. They learned how to make optical equipment and they produced dyes which had suddenly become unobtainable. New chemical formulae for manufacturing processes were evolved and industry as a whole began gradually to understand that American genius was equal to the new problems.

The problems we looked at with horror in 1914 we approach today with calm self-assurance. The shock of the first World War was not quickly forgotten, and scientists have been experimenting constantly since then in an effort to find new substitutes for standard processes.

It was once believed we could obtain rubber only from distant tropical places. Stoppage of this supply would have been serious enough to sprout gray hairs on the heads of all automobile executives and industrialists who need rubber for their products. But today, concern over this situation is only slight. Laboratories have produced synthetic rubber. It is not yet generally in use, and it probably has not been fully developed; but threat of a shortage of the natural product would hasten research in this field.

Minerals which this country now imports are probably lying imbedded in the rocks of America or Alaska, geologists believe. If certain ores cannot be found, scientists will probably find a way to get along without them.

Self-sufficiency is not a healthful state of affairs for the United States. Economic intercourse among the nations of the world is necessary, and the United States should share in this commerce.

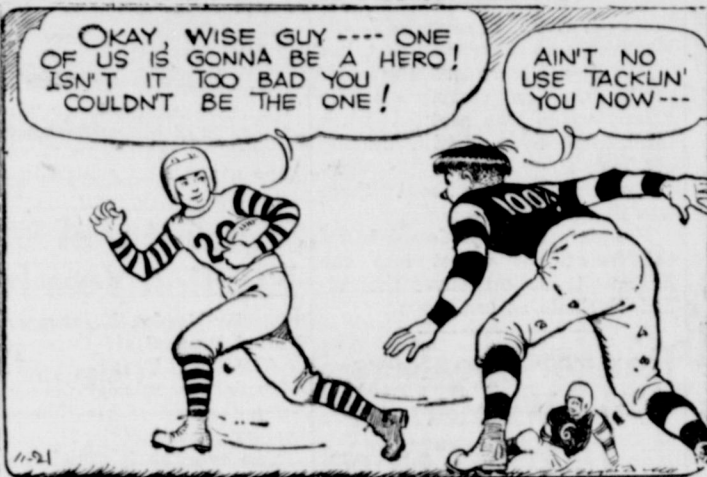

But it is comforting to know that this country is not helplessly dependent on other nations to supply materials in times of emergency.

Another psychologist has contributed support to the theory that the masculine I. Q. is higher than the feminine. If this keeps up, husbands will talk themselves into believing it.

SERIAL STORY 5 WOULD KILL BY TOM HORNER

Yesterday, Joey di Torino admits he and Benthorne were "associated" in several racketeering schemes. Dawson believes the gangster killed Benthorne to silence him, but maintains it was after midnight. He also reminds Dawson of one other thing that will prove his innocence—ballistics.

CHAPTER VII PATROLMAN DAN FLYNN'S feet hurt.

It was bad enough, he told himself, to stand half the night in the rain, but to have a murder piled on him, and to have to find a will-o'-wisp taxi driver at 4 a. m., was asking too much of his even Irish temper.

How the devil did Dawson expect him to locate one taxi driver—Nick Smith—in a city full of taxi drivers? The taxi company had been a great help—yeah!

"Smith reported in tonight," the office clerk told Flynn. "He's on cruising service, reports in if business is slow, but goes on his own if business is good." That helped a lot, yeah! They'd be glad to have Smith come in if he called, but Flynn knew that Smith would stay out just as long as he could. Probably halfway to Florida by now, with the cab parked on a deserted road.

Smith wouldn't show up at home either—too smart for that. Smith was just too smart. Dawson was too smart. Benthorne was too smart. Everyone was too smart—everyone but Dan Flynn. And he was just a dumb cop. And his feet hurt.

Well, there was no use pacing up and down the sidewalk in the rain in front of a deserted taxi stand. There was a chance that Smith might, from force of habit, return to his usual haunts. But it was a small chance, Flynn knew. A cab hurried by. Flynn whistled, but the cab sped on. Another taxi, hurrying down the opposite side of the street, whirled around and the door swung open before Flynn.

"Just drive," he ordered, and slumping in the seat, kicked off his shoes, wiggled his toes in damp socks and promptly went to sleep.

He awakened half an hour later. The cab was stopped, even the meter was silent. Flynn looked around, saw he was parked in front of an all-night lunch stand. Driver evidently decided he needed a cup of coffee. Coffee might go well, Flynn thought. And ham and eggs and maybe some pie. He bent over, fumbling in the darkness for his shoes.

A car paused beside the cab, then pulled in front to park. Flynn grunted as he tied the laces, raised his head just in time to see another driver climbing out of the taxi parked directly ahead. He held his breath as the man paused at the door of the lunch stand.

What was that Dawson had said about luck? The taxi driver going through the door was—Nick Smith!

A moment later Flynn's service revolver was in his raincoat pocket, and Flynn was pushing into the lunch stand.

"Hello, Nick!" he said softly. "I've been looking for you, Nick," he went on. "About that first one you pulled tonight. Here's your driver's license."

"Oh, that?" Smith turned to him. "Sorry if I almost spilled you. 'Yeah, that girl—' Flynn broke in. "Where is she? Where did you pick her up?"

"I don't remember. Hell, she was just another fare to me—didn't even give me much of a tip," Nick growled over his coffee. "You better start remembering, Nick," Flynn said quietly. "There was a murder—and you're a possible accessory."

"A—what?" Smith choked. "A murder—man killed. Maybe that kid who jumped out of the car did it. You helped him and the girl get away. How about it, Nick? Are you going to talk or am I going to have to take you in?"

"I'll talk. . . . I PICKED them up—this guy and the girl—over on the avenue, in front of some of those apartment houses. I thought they was just a couple of peeps said to just drive around talked for a while.

"Finally the fellow I know where there's a girl. Said they wanted to get. Then they argue some. It seems like the girl is of the talking. Then she to stop.

"Driver," she says in voice, 'will you help me fiance and I want to get but his father don't like. 'Now me, I'm sort of a guy, and I like to help of kids—'

"You can tell your to the captain, Nick," shortly. "Right now I know one thing. Where girl live?" "I swear—I swear I'm honest, I let her out at—honest—"

"There are her of your memory, Nick," Flynn interrupted. "I hope we don't use them."

The girl with the smattered suitcase, pulling finally turned the key in. She rose hurriedly, more dresser, slammed the door and closed as she made a had been forgotten. The mirror caught her as she passed to light. Her dark hair needed a she applied lipstick hum her firm, full-lipped mouth in a girlish face. He were pale, her eyes tired the moment lacking fire.

Perhaps he would help. No—he would return to her—he had first met her—would never go back. It was just as well. There no place in her life for But

The buzzer interrupted thoughts. Someone at the ment door. The porter bags. She hurried to open. Dan Flynn was framed doorway. He was smiling glance took in the floor, the packed suitcase door.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—If statistics mean anything, passage of the Wagner labor relations act has brought about an increase in industrial disturbances.
The New York Chamber of Commerce recently issued a survey showing that that was what had happened. Figures printed in the May, 1939, Monthly Labor Review, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, show the same trend.
The number of strikes in the United States stood at 921 in 1929, fell to 637 the following year, rose to 1695 in 1933, went up to 4740 in 1938 and dropped off to 2772 last year.
CLAIM MORE FIGURES NO YARDSTICK
The reply of friends of the Wagner act is that the effects of the law cannot be measured statistically.
Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate committee on education and labor which conducted extensive hearings on the Wagner act, takes that position.
'We haven't a problem in statistics at all in the Wagner act,' he says. 'It's a problem in social evolution.'
A breakdown of the Bureau of Labor Statistics' figures on strikes brings out some interesting points.
In 1928, for instance, there were 604 strikes as compared with 2772 in 1938. But the number of workers involved in the 1928 strikes was 314,000—nearly half as many as the 688,000 involved in the 1938 strikes. The number of "man-days" of idleness caused by strikes first aid kit for small emergencies. Be careful where you shoot and don't shoot everything that moves or runs. Last season there was reported to me several cows, goats, donkeys, sheep, etc, killed by hunters in many cases men were injured and a large number killed in the United States by hunters who thought that the man walking was a deer. Don't let this happen to you. Be careful and look before you shoot.

Max Schmeling says he would like to come to America to challenge Joe Louis to another fight if he could only figure out some way of crossing the Atlantic. Would it help any if we sent the Brown Bomber over there, Mr. Schmeling?

WILD LIFE
Major Hunting Seasons On The Way.
It is rather interesting to me to observe the army of hunters getting ready for the big hunting season that is to come within the next two weeks. While other countries are preparing their men to fight men, our army of sportsmen are oiling their guns and selecting the best ammunition for the game that is going to be hunted. Tents are stretched up in the back yards, holes repaired and water-proofing is under way. The old pots and pans are cleaned of the dust that has collected on them during the months of closed season. The chuck boxes are now being filled with the favorite camp supplies, lanterns cleaned up and many other details are now being taken care of.
During the hustle and bustle of preparing for the old camping trip to the big game country there is painted in the hunter's mind the exact spot where camp is going to be pitched and near the exact spot where he will pull a bead on a big buck and fire his first shot this season. Will it be a hit or miss? We will find out later. The deer country or Texas will be ready to welcome this army of hunters on the day of November 16th and reports are that most hunters will have a chance to bag themselves a deer this season. There is a good crop of deer this year but in many sections the turkey crop is short because of the drought. However many areas are well supplied with this big Texas game bird.
Practice Safety While Hunting
A bad accident can ruin the long looked for hunting trip for a group of hunters very easily. Surely one would not like for this trip to be spoiled by one of his good friends being seriously injured or probably yourself. Well, there will be several hunters killed this season by some careless hunter, and surely you do not want to be on either end of the deal. Each group of hunters should carry one approved

Hook In His Lung Saves A Man's Life
By United Press
YSLETA, Tex. — Because a large iron hook punctured his lung Luis Chavez, 24, escaped being crushed in a cotton press at a gin. Chavez was knocked into the half-filled press by a descending hydraulic plunger when he leaned too far over the chamber. He was forced into the cotton at the bottom of the press, suffered a broken shoulder, broken collar bone and a punctured lung.
R. W. Brewer, ginner, said the hook which punctured Chavez' lung probably saved his life. The hook, ordinarily holding the walls of the press together, came loose and threw him out on the gin floor after the press lever had made one trip downward. The hook pulled him from the press as the lever was raised.

234 Members For Red Cross Enroll In Eastland Work

R. S. Searls, chairman of the annual Eastland Red Cross Roll Call, announced Wednesday that 234 memberships have been secured so far and that complete reports from workers have not yet been received.
He said that the total number of members to be enrolled would likely greatly increase this number. "We are having splendid cooperation from everyone in the work," declared Searls. "It has been the best cooperation that any man could ask for. Everyone certainly has volunteered. The success was better than anticipated."

Jackie Coogan May Take New Bride

No expert in financial figures, Jackie Coogan proves to be a better judge of the feminine type. He is reported to be planning to wed Harriet Haddon, night club entertainer, above, soon after his divorce from shapely Betty Grable becomes final.

HOW TO CHRISTMAS SHOP IN ONE EASY LESSON

Just do these three things, and you'll get the nicest gifts, finish early, and be really relaxed on Christmas Day:

- 1. Start this week, a month ahead of Christmas, to make up your list. Don't forget to budget your gift money and plan your mailings to distant friends and relatives.
2. Then read the advertisements in this newspaper. Already they're carrying really sensible Christmas suggestions for every one. They give you a quick, reliable survey of what's new on the counters.
3. Do your shopping in the early store hours... in the early weeks before Christmas. No hustling hordes of people to jostle you around! Plenty of fresh goods in sizes and colors you want! Time to order that new house dress for Mary or initialed handkerchiefs for Brother Jim.

Early Christmas shopping brings its own rewards! No frazzled nerves... every one's remembered... and packages are wrapped and mailed before the rush!
